NECESSITY FOR KEEPING TIME

In order to conduct affairs properly it has always been necessary to keep records by employing a definite unit of measurement, and by starting from a definite date or epoch.

SOLAR TIME

The prime unit is the mean solar day, which is the average of all solar days, and is measured by the period of twenty-four hours within which the earth revolves upon its axis. The true solar day constantly fluctuates, hence the adoption of a mean solar day. The two coincide four times a year: April 15, June 14, September 1, December 24.

Solar time, computed upon the solar day, is based on the rotation of the earth about the sun, a period of approximately 365 days. This unit of time is called a year.

CHRONOLOGICAL ERAS

A reckoning of years has been adopted from ancient times. This was generally based upon a historical period, dating from an important event such as the accession of a great king or the founding of a city, or characterized by a certain order of things such as physical, social or intellectual conditions. The chronological eras in use in the past are as follows:

Name	Began	Name	Began
Grecian Mundane Era.	B. C. 5598, Sept. 1	Grecian or Syro-Macedonian Era .....	B., C. 312, Sept. 1
Civil Era of Constantinople .....	" 5508, Sept. 1	Era of Maccabees ..	" 166, Nov. 24
Alexandrian Era ....	" 5502, Aug. 29	Tyrian Era .....	" 125, Oct. 19
Julian Period .....	" 4713, Jan. 1	Sidonian Era .....	" 110, Oct. 1
Mundane Era .....	" 4008, Oct. 1	Julian Era .....	" 45, Jan. 1
Jewish Mundane Era.	" 3761, Oct. 1	Spanish Era .....	" 38, Jan. 1
Era of Abraham ....	" 2015, Oct. 1	Augustan Era .....	" 27, Feb. 14
Era of the Olympiads	" 776, July 1	Christian Era .....	A. D. 1, Jan. 1
Roman Era (A.U.C.).	" 753, April 24	Destruction of Jerusalem .....	" 69, Sept. 1
Era of Metonic Cycle	" 432, July 15	Mohammedan Era ...	" 622, July 16

THE CHRISTIAN ERA

Our present system of dating events according as to whether they took place "before Christ" (B. C.) or "after Christ," that is, "in the year of our Lord" (A. D.), originated about A. D. 527 with the Abbot Dionysius Exiguus, who conceived the idea of making the year of Christ's birth the dividing point in the calendar. He took the year 754 A. U. C. (after the founding of the city of Rome) as the year of the Nativity of our Lord, but obviously erred in his calculations.

The correct basis of calculations is the year in which Herod the Great died, generally accepted as 750 A. U. C. It is an indisputable fact that Herod was alive at the time of the birth of Christ. Consequently Christ was born before 750 A. U. C., or before the year 4 B. C. It is difficult to determine precisely how long before this date Christ was born. The possibility arises that since Herod, in the slaughter of the Innocents, saw fit to extend the tiny victims' age to two years, Christ may have been born in 6 B. C. Some authors place the sacred date from 7 B. C. to 9 B. C.

THE CALENDAR

Julian Calendar. Even after the new reckoning was introduced, the old calendar of Julius Caesar consisting of a year of 365 days was used until 1582, when under Pope Gregory XIII it was corrected by a council of astronomers. Since the earth's journey around the sun is not completed in exactly 365 days Caesar made each fourth year a leap year by inserting an additional day in February. The Julian Calendar was still inaccurate, however, because the earth's journey is made in a little less than  $365\frac{1}{4}$  days. By 1582 the error amounted to ten days.

Gregorian Calendar. Pope Gregory dropped these days from the calendar and ordered that a leap year should be observed in 1600 but not in 1700, 1800 and 1900, and that thereafter century years would be leap years only when they are divisible by 400. The Gregorian Calendar is so nearly exact that there will be an error of one day only in 3,500 years. This calendar was readily accepted in all Catholic countries but did not come into use in Protestant countries until some time later. It was finally accepted in England in 1752 and in the American Colonies about the same time. The Julian method of reckoning was retained in the East. Turkey did not adopt the Gregorian Calendar until 1917, Russia 1918, Bulgaria, Greece and the Congress of the Eastern Orthodox Church in 1923. With the exception of a few Ruthenian Catholics the whole civilized world was using the Gregorian Calendar in 1924.

The Ecclesiastical Calendar is a lunisolar calendar for regulating the dates of church feasts. It corresponds in periods of time with the civil calendar. The beginning of the ecclesiastical year dates, however, from the beginning of Advent. In 1943 Advent begins on November 28. Important and special feasts during the year are as follows:

January	1, Circumcision. 3, Holy Name. 6, Epiphany. 10, Holy Family.	August	2, Portiuncula. 6, Transfiguration. 15, Assumption.
February	2, Purification. 11, Our Lady of Lourdes.	September	8, Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary. 14, Exaltation of the Cross.
March	10, Ash Wednesday. 17, St. Patrick. 19, St. Joseph. 25, Annunciation.		15, Sorrows of the Blessed Virgin Mary. 17, Stigmata of St. Francis.
April	11, Passion Sunday. 18, Palm Sunday. 22, Holy Thursday 23, Good Friday. 24, Holy Saturday. 25, Easter.		24, Our Lady of Ransom. 26, North American Martyrs.
May	3, Finding of the Cross. 12, Solemnity of St. Joseph.	October	2, Holy Guardian Angels. 3, St. Teresa of the Child Jesus. 4, St. Francis of Assisi. 7, Most Holy Rosary. 31, Christ the King.
June	3, Ascension. 13, Pentecost. 20, Trinity Sunday. 24, Corpus Christi. 29, Sts. Peter and Paul.	November	1, All Saints. 2, All Souls.
July	1, Most Precious Blood. 2, Sacred Heart. 16, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel. 26, St. Anne.	December	8, Immaculate Conception. 25, Nativity of Our Lord. 28, Holy Innocents.

The World Calendar

The year is composed, roughly, of  $365\frac{1}{4}$  days. In our Gregorian Calendar, the extra quarter of a day is set aside until every fourth year, which then counts 366 days instead of 365 and becomes a "leap year."

Neither 365 nor 366 is exactly divisible by 7, the number of days in a week. Hence, successive years begin on different days and have different patterns. To remedy this, various "reforms" have been suggested.

One general class of such suggestions would give each year 364 days, and instead of counting the extra day (two days in leap years) in the ordinary line-up of weekdays, the extra day (or days) would be sequestered, so to speak, and given a name of its own. Every year would then consist of 52 full weeks, plus one or two "supplementary," "blank," "special," days. This arrangement would make every year begin on the same day, and give every day of each month the same date in successive years.

There have been two principal varieties of this proposal. One would give the year 13 months of 28 days each — a total again of 364. This plan has been traced back to an article in "Scot's Magazine" for July, 1745, by a "Mr. Urban of Maryland." Its origin is more popularly attributed to Auguste Comte, who published an article on it in 1849. The 13-month plan makes demands that are altogether too radical. It would lose all approximate correspondence with comparable dates in our present calendar, would introduce a new month, would be based on an indivisible unit of calculation (13), would offend the superstitious, etc. Today the 13-month calendar is hardly mentioned, since it has been definitely rejected by the League of Nations authorities entrusted with the study of calendar reform proposals. The same is true of intercalary week or month schemes.

The other plan with the "supplementary day" was first proposed in its essential features by a Catholic priest, Marco Mastrofini, who published a work on it in Rome over a hundred years ago (1834). The plan is now widely known as "The World Calendar," due mainly to the activities of the World Calendar Association (630 Fifth Avenue, New York City; president, Miss Elisabeth Achelis). The World Calendar produces symmetry by giving each quarter of the year three months with respectively 31, 30 and 30 days. Every year begins on Sunday, as does also every quarter. The second month in each quarter begins on Wednesday, the third on Friday. The basic number 12, handily divisible by 2, 3, 4, and 6, is thus kept in a logical arrangement. In many cases, dates in the new calendar, when paralleled with the old, are the same: there is never a difference of more than two days. The added day in ordinary years, tentatively called Year-End Day, follows December 30. The second additional day of leap years, called Leap-Year Day, follows June 30. Both days would be holidays.

Easter could be fixed in the World Calendar for Sunday, April 8. While Easter stabilization has economic and social aspects, it is predominantly a religious question and one that must be dealt with by religious authorities. The rearranging of the calendar need not, therefore, of necessity imply the fixing of movable ecclesiastical feasts.

Many religious authorities, including a number of Catholic priests and scholars, find no basic difficulty in the idea of the supplementary day, since the Sunday legislation is primarily ecclesiastical and could be changed by Church authority. The Vatican has declared that there are no dogmatic objections to calendar reform. This statement seems to cover both fixation of movable feasts and use of the supplementary day.

HOLYDAYS OF OBLIGATION FOR THE UNITED STATES

Every Catholic who has attained the age of reason, and is not prevented by sickness or other sufficient cause, is obliged to rest from servile work and attend Holy Mass on the following days:

All Sundays of the year.

The Circumcision of Our Lord, or New Year's Day, January 1.

The Ascension of Our Lord, June 3, 1943.

The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary, August 15.

All Saints' Day, November 1.

The Immaculate Conception of the B. V. M. (Patronal Feast of the United States), December 8.

Christmas, the Nativity of Our Lord, December 25.

FAST DAYS AND DAYS OF ABSTINENCE

The Law of Fasting affects all Catholics between the ages of 21 and 60, unless health or other sufficient reason allows a dispensation. The law of fasting requires that only one full meal may be taken, although it does not forbid a small amount of food in the morning and evening, the quality and quantity of which is regulated according to local custom. Both fish and meat may be taken at the same meal where meat is allowed to those who are bound to fast. Fast days in the United States are:

The Ember Days — First week of Lent, March 17, 19, 20, 1943.

Pentecost week, June 16, 18, 19, 1943.

Third week in September, Sept. 15, 17, 18, 1943.

Third week in December, Dec. 15, 17, 18, 1943.

The Vigil of Pentecost, June 12, 1943.

The Vigil of the Assumption, August 14.

The Vigil of All Saints' Day, ordinarily a day of fast and abstinence, falls on a Sunday, Oct. 31, 1943, and though the observance of the vigil is kept on the preceding Saturday, there is no fast on either Saturday or Sunday in connection with this vigil, in this year.

All the days of Lent, except Sundays, up to noon on Holy Saturday.

The Law of Abstinence requires the abstaining from flesh meat and broth made from meat. The number of meals and amount taken remain unaffected. All the faithful who have completed their seventh year are obliged by the law of abstinence. Abstinence days for the United States are:

All Fridays of the year (holydays falling on Fridays excepted).

Wednesdays and Fridays of Lent (for Wednesday in Holy Week see your diocesan Lenten regulations).

Ember days and vigils listed above under fast days.

ROGATION DAYS

Rogation Days are days of solemn supplication to God for a good and bountiful harvest and for His protection in calamities, and to appease His anger at man's transgressions. Formerly they were also observed by fasting, but this is no longer obligatory. Where practicable a solemn procession is a feature of the observance. There are three Minor Rogation Days, which are the three days preceding the feast of the Ascension (May 31, June 1 and 2, 1943), and one Major Rogation Day, on the feast of St. Mark, April 25. The observance of St. Mark's Day as the day of the Major Litanies originated about 600 when during a plague in Rome Pope St. Gregory ordered a procession to be held to implore God's mercy; and the pestilence immediately abated. The Minor Rogation Days were formally instituted by the Fifth Council of Orleans, 511, and approved by Pope Leo III.

United States Standard Central Time is time of the Meridian 90° west from Greenwich.

STANDARD TIME

Standard time is the time commonly in use and is based on solar time. When the sun is on the meridian of any place, the time at that place is called noon or twelve o'clock. All places having the same meridian have noon at the same time. And this hour varies in different places according to their meridian. In other words, when it is noon at a given place, it is afternoon in places to the eastward and still forenoon in places to the westward, since the sun rises in the east and sets in the west. These differences in time led to great confusion especially in the case of railroads. Hence a standard of time was necessary. An international conference met at Washington in 1884. Most of the 26 delegates present favored the adoption of Greenwich as the common prime meridian to be used in reckoning longitude, and this is almost universally employed. On it is based Standard Time.

The railroads of the United States and Canada had the previous year decided on the introduction of Standard Time to take effect at noon, Nov. 18, 1883. Its divisions depend on a mean of solar time applied to every meridian distant from Greenwich at exact multiples of 15°. The time difference for each succeeding meridian is one hour. The Standard Time meridians of the United States and Canada are:

Time	Meridian	Difference from Greenwich
Colonial	60°	4 hours slower than Greenwich
Eastern	75°	5	"	"	"	"
Central	90°	6	"	"	"	"
Mountain	105°	7	"	"	"	"
Pacific	120°	8	"	"	"	"

On journeying from one belt to another it is necessary to change the time only by the whole hour on entering and leaving.

WAR TIME

War Time prolongs the hours of daylight by advancing the clocks of the nation one hour. War Time became effective for the first time in the nation's history on Feb. 9, 1942, at 2 a.m. and shall remain in effect until six months after the end of the present war.

THE SEASONS

In the Temperate Zone there are four seasons: Spring begins at the vernal equinox, summer at the summer solstice, autumn at the autumnal equinox and winter at the winter solstice. In the North Temperate Zone these dates are approximately March 21, June 21, September 23 and December 21.

At the vernal and autumnal equinoxes day and night are of equal length the world over, due to the fact that the earth's axis is then at right angles to the direction of the sun. Lengthening days bring increasing heat, hence the warmth of the summer season. At the summer solstice the day is longest. The shortest day of the year occurs at the winter solstice.

Indian Summer is a period of pleasant mild weather occurring in October or November, or sometimes as late as December, in the Central and Eastern States. The origin of the term is unknown. It occurs first in printing in 1794 and was introduced from America into England. There similar weather is usually termed "All Hallow Summer" or "St.

Martin's Summer." In Germany it also occurs and is known as "St. Luke's Summer" or "Old Woman's Summer."

The seasons of 1943 Eastern War Time begin as follows:

Spring — March 21st, at 8:03 a. m.

Summer — June 22nd, at 3:13 a. m.

Autumn — September 23rd, at 6:12 p. m.

Winter — December 22nd, at 1:30 p. m.

DERIVATIONS OF THE NAMES OF DAYS AND MONTHS

The Names of Months

January — The Roman Janus presided over the beginning of everything; hence the first month of the year was named after him.

February — The Roman festival Februs was held on the fifteenth day of this month, in honor of Lupercus, the god of fertility.

March — Named from the Roman god of war, Mars.

April — The Latin word, Aprilis, is probably derived from aperire, to open; because spring generally begins and the buds open in this month.

May — The Latin word, Maius, is probably derived from Maia, a feminine divinity worshiped at Rome on the first day of this month.

June — from Juno, a Roman divinity worshiped as the Queen of Heaven.

July — From Julius. Julius Caesar was born in this month.

August — Named by the Emperor Augustus Caesar, 30 B. C., after himself, as he regarded it a fortunate month, in which he had gained several victories.

September — From septem, meaning seven. September was the seventh month in the old Roman year.

October — From octo, meaning eight. October was the eighth month in the old Roman year.

November — From novem, meaning nine. November was the ninth month in the old Roman year.

December — From decem, meaning ten. December was the tenth month in the old Roman year.

Days of the Week

Sunday — From Anglo-Saxon, Sunnandaeg, day of the sun.

Monday — From Anglo-Saxon, Monadaeg, day of the moon.

Tuesday — From Anglo-Saxon, Tiwesdaeg, from Tiw, Norse god of war.

Wednesday — From Anglo-Saxon, Wodnesdaeg, day of the god Woden.

Thursday — From Anglo-Saxon, Thunresdaeg, from Thor, Danish god of thunder.

Friday — From Anglo-Saxon, Frigudaeg, from Frigga, Norse goddess of marriage.

Saturday — From Anglo-Saxon, Saeterdaeg, from Saturn, god of time.

THE APOSTLES

Peter, originally named Simon, son of Jona, called Peter (Gr., petra, rock) by Christ when He appointed him chief of the Apostles and head of the Church. Scourged and crucified head downward at Rome by Nero, A.D. 67. Feast, June 29.

Andrew, brother of Peter. Crucified on an X-shaped cross at Achaia by the Roman governor Aegeus, A.D. 60. Feast, Nov. 30.

James the Greater, son of Zebedee, elder brother of John the Evangelist. Perished by the sword under Herod Agrippa, at Jerusalem, A.D. 44. Feast, July 25.

John, brother of James the Greater. Plunged into a cauldron of boiling oil at Rome, but escaped unhurt and died a natural death at Ephesus about A.D. 100. Feast, Dec. 27.

Philip, native of Bethsaida, as was also Peter. Said to have been hanged against a pillar in Phrygia. Feast, May 1.

James the Less, son of Alpheus and Mary of Cleophas, who was probably the sister of the Blessed Virgin Mary, hence a cousin, called "brother," of Christ. Stoned by the Jews and killed with a fuller's club about A.D. 62. Feast, May 1.

Thomas. Said to have labored in India, where he was run through with a lance at Coromandel. The Thomas Christians trace their origin to him. Feast, Dec. 21.

Bartholomew, friend of Philip. Said to have been skinned alive in Armenia. Feast, Aug. 24.

Matthew, a Galilean, son of Alpheus, and originally known as Levi. Martyred probably by the sword in Ethiopia. Feast, Sept. 21.

Matthias, chosen from among the disciples of Christ to replace the Apostle Judas. Martyred probably in Jerusalem, first stoned and then beheaded. Feast, Feb. 24.

Jude or Thaddeus, brother of James the Less. Said to have been shot to death with arrows in Mesopotamia. Feast, Oct. 28.

Simon. Said to have been crucified in Persia. Feast, Oct. 28.

Paul, a Jew of the tribe of Benjamin, but a Roman citizen, and persecutor of the Christians until miraculously converted by an apparition of Our Lord. He is considered one of the Apostles with whom he labored to convert men to Christ. Beheaded outside one of the gates of Rome by Nero, A.D. 67. Feast, June 29.

ROMAN PONTIFFS

Authorities differ concerning the correct list of the Popes. The following is the official list printed in the "Annuario Pontificio" and taken from a series of portraits in the Basilica of St. Paul near Rome. We venerate eighty-three Popes as saints, seven as blessed. One hundred and three Popes have been Romans; one hundred and seven were natives of other parts of Italy; thirteen were French, eleven Greek, seven German, five Asiatic, three African, three Spanish, two Dalmatian. Palestine, Thrace, Crete, Epirus, Galicia, Holland, Portugal and England have each furnished one occupant of the papal chair.

Pope Pius xii

"Gloriously Reigning"

Eugenio Pacelli was born in Rome on the second day of March, 1876, the second son of Filippo and Virginia Graziosi Pacelli, both descendants of noble Roman families. Reared in simple Catholic fashion, Eugenio early manifested outstanding qualities of character and scholarship. Feeling the call to the clerical state, he entered the Alma Collegio Capranica in Rome after having completed his studies in the Classical Secondary School. Delicate health made community life practically impossible and the young student was obliged to leave Capranica College after a year's study. He continued his philosophical, theological and juridical studies at the Pontifical University of the Roman Seminary as a day student, being ordained to the priesthood in 1899.

Recognizing his unusual talent, Fr. Pacelli's superiors appointed him substitute professor of law in the schools of the Roman Seminary, making him at the same time Apprendista in the offices of the Secretariate of State. Shortly afterwards he was made titular professor of Canon Law and an official in the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

His singular accomplishments soon drew the attention of Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of the Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs. Assured of the young priest's excellent qualities Cardinal Gasparri, having consulted His Holiness and Cardinal Merry del Val, Secretary of State, persuaded Fr. Pacelli to resign his professorship and give himself entirely to the work of the Congregation.

Fr. Pacelli went rapidly from one grade to the next in the Congregation. After several years as Minutante he was appointed Undersecretary; very shortly afterwards he was made Prosecretary. This latter position he held during the reign of Pius X. Upon his election to the Papacy, Benedict XV promoted Fr. Pacelli to the position of Secretary of the Congregation.

Together with Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, the future Pius XII showed himself more than capable of dealing with the situation created by the World War. His mastery of German language and literature, his continued interest in all religious, political, social and intellectual phases of German life, and his readiness to assist all who sought his aid made for effective negotiations with the German people. These qualifications led to his being made Apostolic Nuncio to Bavaria in 1917. Through the Nunciature of Bavaria at that time passed all negotiations between Germany and the Vatican. In accordance with the custom of conferring the fulness of the priesthood upon all Nuncios of the Holy See, Fr. Pacelli was made Titular Archbishop of Sardes on April 23, 1917, being consecrated on May 13 by the Holy Father himself in the Sistine Chapel.

To his new post Archbishop Pacelli brought Benedict XV's proposal for peace. The Pope's proposal sought not only to bring the conflict to a close, but was designed also to assure lasting peace to the world. The Apostolic Nuncio acted as interpreter of the proposal of peace. But his efforts to win over the conflicting parties were in vain and the struggle dragged on for another year.

After the War the Nunciature of Berlin was established, and Archbishop Pacelli was its first Nuncio. Outstanding among his accomplishments in this position was the negotiation of two Concordats—one with Bavaria in 1924, and one with Prussia in 1929. After twelve years of faithful service in the German capital, Nuncio Pacelli presented his resignation to President von Hindenburg on December 9, 1929.

On his return to Rome he was created cardinal by Pius XI. Following his elevation to the cardinalate he was formally appointed successor to Cardinal Gasparri as Papal Secretary of State in February of 1930. His excellent work as Nuncio to Germany certainly merited this high position conferred upon him by the Holy Father.

Cardinal Pacelli's years of service as Secretary of State were signalized by important events. In 1930 he signed an agreement with the Italian Government concerning the interpretation and application of regulations in the Concordat. Between the years 1932 and 1935 he successfully negotiated concordats with the Grand Duchy of Baden (November 10, 1932); with Germany (July 20, 1933); with Austria (June 5, 1934); and with Yugoslavia (July 25, 1935).

In 1934 Cardinal Pacelli was sent by the Holy Father as Papal Legate to the International Eucharistic Congress in Buenos Aires, and in 1935 to the Solemn Triduum at Lourdes ending the Holy Year which commemorated the nineteenth centenary of the Redemption. In 1936 he inaugurated the International Congress of the Catholic Press. Having given his address in Italian, Cardinal Pacelli then addressed the other members in English, French, German, Spanish, Portuguese and Latin.

The last noteworthy achievement of the Cardinal Secretary of State before his election as Supreme Pontiff was his visit to the United States of America in October, 1936. His gracious kindness and his open friendliness during his visit have won for him a place in the heart of every true American. During his stay Cardinal Pacelli visited the nineteen ecclesiastical provinces and most of the dioceses in the States.

As Camerlengo of the Holy Office he fulfilled various duties during the interregnum following the death of Pius XI, on Feb. 10, 1939. He was elected Pope on the third ballot in the conclave, March 2, and took the name of Pius XII. The coronation took place March 12.

During the first year of his pontificate war broke out in Europe and has since extended to the entire world, affecting even those few nations who have remained neutral. To all suffering from the trials and horrors of war Pope Pius XII has extended his paternal solicitude.

He has proved himself the Father of all, in his impartiality toward conflicting peoples and in the relief administered to war's victims, including the "non-Aryans." His generosity is aided by the Bishop's Relief Committee of the United States which has sent him substantial sums. The Poles, who have endured acute distress for more than three years, have been his constant care, though efforts to help those in their own country or prisoners in Germany have been greatly impeded. He contributed toward an establishment for Polish refugees in Italy and has sent aid to those in Ireland, Portugal, Russia and elsewhere. Bishop Joseph Gawlina, Chaplain General of the Polish Army, has charge of the disbursement of papal relief among the Poles in Russia. To the Slovenes and Croats and the people of Greece, England, Scandinavia, the Baltic countries, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Malta the Pope has also sent aid and he has established an emergency fund for distribution when needed wherever possible. In Greece where thousands face starvation he had food kitchens set up, to alleviate in some degree the acute want. Papal Nuncios and Apostolic Delegates throughout the world visit internees in various countries, bringing them spiritual and material aid. A Bureau of Information at the Vatican receives news concerning prisoners, refugees and missing persons and transmits this to families and interested inquirers. The Vatican Radio broadcasts lists of names daily. All this was planned through the loving sympathy of the Holy Father for his children.

For peace he incessantly labors and prays, and he has made it the subject of many allocutions, including his annual message, broadcast to the world, replying to the traditional good wishes of the Sacred College of Cardinals on Christmas eve.

His first Christmas message, in 1939, gave five "fundamental points of a just and honorable peace": one, assurance of the "right to life and independence" of all nations, large and small; two, liberation by mutual agreement from "the heavy slavery of armaments"; three, establishment of juridical institutions to guarantee the faithful carrying out of peace terms and to revise them if need arises; four, satisfaction of the just demands of ethnical minorities; five, honest and earnest interpretation of international undertakings in the light of the Divine law, with strict adherence to the counsels of justice, love and charity. These five points have been widely discussed and studied and have received widespread favor.

In his Christmas message of 1940 he referred again to these "essential presuppositions of peace which would conform to principles of justice, equity and honor and would thus be enduring," and said that delayed application had not lessened "their intrinsic truth and conformity to reality," nor "their force of moral obligation." He then went on to consideration of the "opinion which contends that pre-war Europe as well as its political structure are now undergoing a process of transformation of such nature as to signal the dawn of a new era," and he laid down five "indispensable prerequisites for the search for a new order": (1) triumph over hate; (2) triumph over mistrust; (3) triumph over the distressing principle that utility is a basis of law and right; (4) triumph over those germs of conflict which exist when there is no insurance of a proper standard of living for all; (5) triumph over the spirit of cold egoism.

In 1941 the Holy Father broadcast to the world a message of hope and faith in "the star" that has never faded: "We who live with you under the awful incubus of a scourge which is tearing at the heart of humanity for still a third year, wish to speak to you from Our paternal heart on this vigil of the solemn Feast of Christmas, to exhort you to remain always strong in your faith and to share with you the comfort of that very real, superabundant and elevating hope and certainty which radiates from the Crib of the new-born Saviour."

He extolled "many admirable demonstrations of indomitable valor in the defense of rights and native soil, of serenity in the sorrow of souls living as holocaustal flames for the triumph of truth and justice. But it is indeed with a depressing anguish that We recall and, as if in a dream, look upon the terrible armed and bloody conflict which has marked this year. . . . It is with the same anguish that We look upon the depleted resources of nations and upon the millions of people who are being hurled into a state of misery and total exhaustion by this ruthless conflict and its brutal violence. And while the strength and health of a great part of youth which was in the process of maturing are being weakened through the privation imposed by the present scourge, the war expenditures and debts are rising to levels never dreamed of before. Such large-scale disbursements, giving rise as they must to a contraction of the forces of production in the civil and social field, cannot but be the basis for serious anxiety on the part of those who turn their thoughts with preoccupation towards the future."

To meet the great responsibilities of the future, he declared: "There will be required broad intellects and wills, strong in their purposes; men of courage and enterprise, but above and before all, there must be consciences which, in their planning, in their deliberations and in their actions, are animated, moved and sustained by a lively sense of responsibility and which do not shrink from submission to the holy laws of God."

Recapitulating what he had expounded on other occasions he said: "We insist once again on certain fundamental conditions essential for an international order which will guarantee for all peoples a just and lasting peace and which will be a bountiful source of well-being and prosperity. Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles there is no room for violation of the freedom, integrity and security of other states; no matter what may be their territorial extension or their capacity for defense; ... there is no place for open or occult oppression of the cultural and linguistic characteristics of national minorities, for the hindrance or restriction of their economic resources, for the limitation or abolition of their natural fertility; ... there is no place for that cold and calculating egoism which tends to hoard the economic resources and materials destined for the use of all to such an extent that the nations less favored by nature are not permitted access to them; ... once the more dangerous sources of armed conflicts have been eliminated, there is no place for total warfare or for a mad rush for armaments; ... there is no place for the persecution of religion and of the Church."

The daily life of the Holy Father is one of austerity, devoutness, penance and indefatigable labor. His work day extends generally from 6:45 a. m. until midnight and sometimes even later, with a rest period of 45 minutes each afternoon. In the summer he walks in the Vatican Garden in the morning, but at other times permits himself this relaxation only in the afternoon. He studies and directs the disposition of many weighty matters constantly being submitted to him, writes discourses, allocutions and other documents, and gives personal and careful direction to current affairs of the Holy See. On certain days he receives cardinals and prelates who head the ecclesiastical dicasteries and there are also private audiences for visiting dignitaries. On Wednesdays there is a collective audience attended by thousands of persons and often large groups are received on other days.

If the Pope intends to address an audience, he is carried into the large Hall of Benedictions in the gestatorial chair, and from its height blesses those present as he is carried past them. When he does not speak, he receives visitors in the Loggia of Raphael and adjoining rooms, and passes among sometimes thousands of persons, extending his hand to each one to kiss, ready to respond with kind words when he is addressed. Audiences without discourses sometimes last four hours. In these audiences, he says, he finds relief from the heaviness of spirit occasioned by the government of the Church in such difficult times, for here he comes into contact with his children and can open his heart freely.

For the newlyweds who come in great numbers to seek his blessing, the Holy Father has ever a word of counsel and affection. His discourses at these audiences during the year were on the necessity of hearing the voice of God above the clash and clamor of the times, on the duties of women in the family, and on the minor offenses of egoism which arise to disturb conjugal life, urging humility and thoughtfulness of others which should characterize the lives of Christian spouses. He spoke also of the dangers of what he called temporary widowhood brought about by the war, and advised husband and wife to strive to preserve their memories of each other by every means in their power, by having photographs and by letter-writing, pointing out that handwriting alone will recall as nothing else the characteristics of the loved one.

In a three-day series of audiences at the beginning of the year Pope Pius received the diplomats accredited to the Holy See, extending New Year's greetings to them and their staffs. The Roman nobility came also to offer their good wishes to the Sovereign Pontiff.

On Candlemas Day, Feb. 2, representatives of the Roman basilicas, seminaries, colleges, religious communities and other ecclesiastical bodies presented blessed candles to His Holiness according to traditional Vatican ceremonies. Later in the month the parish priests and Lenten preachers in the churches of Rome were received and urged to fulfill their office during the penitential season with the most generous zeal. On Feb. 27 Raphael Guariglia, new Ambassador of Italy to the Holy See, presented his credentials to the Pope, solemnly professing his faith and that of the Italian people, and his joy in the harmonious relations between the Catholic Church and Italy. The Holy Father expressed pleasure in his sentiments and said the conciliation between the Holy See and the Italian nation remains a sure foundation for the continued friendship and concord between the states.

In view of the world-wide celebration planned for the silver episcopal jubilee of Pope Pius XII, there was not the customary ceremony marking the anniversary of his elevation to the papacy and his sixty-sixth birthday, March 3, but many messages of felicitations were received. On the third anniversary of his coronation, March 12, he presided at a Mass celebrated in the Sistine Chapel by Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte, at which were present members of the Sacred College, papal court, diplomatic corps and the Sovereign Pontiff's family and many prelates. Following the Mass the Cardinals offered the Holy Father their best wishes and special prayers for himself and all the enterprises of his sacred ministry. Greetings and messages came to him from heads of nations and dignitaries all over the world.

Early in April Harold Tittman, Charge d'Affaires of the mission established at the Vatican by President Roosevelt, in private audience with His Holiness presented to him his wife and two sons who had just joined him in Vatican City, where he is now in residence. The blind war veterans were received in audience on April 2 and the Sovereign Pontiff encouraged them always to be enlightened by the light of their souls through which they could more easily be united with God, illuminated by the light of God Himself, Whom one day they will be seeing in their heavenly country, and by the light of fraternity which beneficently supports them. He extolled them for the sacrifice they had made in fulfilling their duty towards their country, thanked them for their dear presence and blessed them and all the war blind throughout the world.

During the solemn Holy Week observances in the Vatican, Mass was celebrated on Holy Thursday by Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte, in the presence of the Pope, 14 cardinals and the full papal court and diplomatic corps. Members of the faculty and students of the Roman colleges took part in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament in the Pauline Chapel on Holy Thursday and until the Mass of the Presanctified on Good Friday, celebrated by Cardinal Rossi. The Holy Father had carried the Blessed Sacrament in procession from the Sistine Chapel to the Pauline Chapel on Holy Thursday and returned the Sacred Host to the Sistine Chapel on Good Friday for the Mass, at which he, 11 cardinals and members of the papal court and diplomatic corps were present. The Apostolic Preacher, Fr. Ottavio of Alatri, preached in Latin on the Passion of Our Lord, and after the unveiling of the crucifix the Sovereign Pontiff, cardinals and papal court venerated the Cross.

Among the students of the Latin-American College ordained priests on Holy Saturday and welcomed by Pope Pius in audience on April 16 were eleven Mexicans and four others, from Argentina, Chile, El Salvador and Venezuela. The Holy Father bestowed his Apostolic Blessing on them, their dioceses and relatives and wished them a holy and fruitful apostolate. Three weeks later His Holiness received twenty Mexican Missionaries of the Holy Ghost who were leaving the Eternal City for their native land, after completing their ecclesiastical studies. To each he addressed paternal words of rejoicing and hope for abundant fruits from their ecclesiastical labors, and gave them his blessing.

An agreement modifying the Concordat of 1892 between the Holy See and Colombia was signed at the Vatican on April 22 by Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State, and Ambassador Echandia of Colombia. The new agreement regulates the appointment of bishops, the delineation of dioceses, celebration of marriage, the administration of cemeteries and the collaboration of the clergy in the civil census, and the Government of Colombia agrees to make annual grants to major seminaries for the training of candidates for the priesthood.

In a letter to the Cardinal Secretary of State the Sovereign Pontiff asked him to communicate to the Bishops of the Catholic world exhortations to renewed prayers for peace during the month of May: "Supplicating with contrite and humbled soul, may all the faithful—especially the innocent children—never tire of imploring from the Divine Redeemer and from His Mother, that while the sky and sea are convulsed by a storm that grows more violent every day, light from on high, help from Heaven, may shine before Us who are at the helm of the Mystical Ship. May the nutriment necessary for soul and body not be lacking to the poor and starving. May the exiles be given back to their country: health restored to the wounded and sick, and liberty returned to the prisoners. Finally, may human cupidity be subjected to reason and a renewed order of justice and charity towards God and neighbor and the sole real peace, namely, a Christian peace, be restored to public and private life."

On May 5 the new Ambassador of Bolivia to the Holy See, Senor Bailon Mercado, presented his credentials to the Pope, imploring the Apostolic Blessing for Catholic Bolivia and her rulers, which request the Holy Father readily granted, with a promise of unceasing benevolence. On May 7 the departing Brazilian envoy to Italy, Brazilian consuls and 12 pupils of the Brazilian College in Rome came to bid farewell to the Sovereign Pontiff, receiving from him his blessing for themselves and their country, to which he wished them safe return.

The new Japanese envoy to the Holy See was received by Pope Pius XII on May 9. Presenting his credentials, Minister Ken Harada said the Japanese Empire wished to cooperate in every way to the end that relations between the Holy See and Japan may ever be most cordial. In response His Holiness expressed his earnest desire that the disagreements afflicting the world may be resolved on a basis of justice and that all nations may look forward to a peaceful future. The appointment of Ken Harada was fulfillment of a request for diplomatic recognition made by Japan more than once since 1922 and agreed to by the Vatican, with final ratification. No recognition of Japanese occupation is involved in the relations thus established with the Holy See. These are for Japan proper, Korea and Formosa, areas for which the Apostolic Delegation in Tokyo had previously been maintained; they do not include Manchukuo, conquered by Japan before the present World War, and no change is contemplated in the Holy See's Apostolic Delegation to the Philippines maintained in Manila since 1902.

The entire Catholic world marked the silver jubilee of the episcopal consecration of Pope Pius XII on May 13 with spiritual and religious observances. Because of the gravity of the times the Holy Father wished no external manifestations but rather the union of hearts in the offering of prayers. In the United States a special feature was the preparation of a nation-wide spiritual bouquet, that from each diocese being sent to the Apostolic Delegation and thence they were all forwarded to His Holiness. Solemn pontifical Masses were celebrated by members of the hierarchy on May 13 or the following day, the Feast of the Ascension, and in some places solemn observances were held on the preceding or following Sunday as well and priests offered Masses for the intention of the Holy Father. Many octaves, triduum and Holy Hours were held. Catholic newspapers and periodicals carried special articles on the Pope, and radio networks broadcast his jubilee message and devoted parts of news programs to comment on it. A radio address by Archbishop Spellman of New York over the nation-wide Blue Network paid tribute to him as "scholar, hero, saint, . . . a great Pope and defender of the truth and right," whose works, desires and prayers have ever been for peace. Pastoral letters issued by members of the American hierarchy all stressed his great work for peace and hailed his episcopal jubilee as a special opportunity for the faithful to sustain by united prayer the Pontiff's efforts for the welfare of the Church and a lasting peace. The central observance of the nation was a solemn pontifical Mass at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Washington, D. C., on May 14. The Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Cicognani, pontificated and the sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the Catholic University. All Latin-American countries observed the jubilee with notable religious ceremonies, at which Government officials were present. A week of special prayer was held in Canada. England and Ireland also marked the anniversary, as did the Netherlands, where articles were carried in the press and the Bishops issued a joint pastoral, and Germany, where on May 10 a collective pastoral letter of the hierarchy to the faithful was read in the churches and solemn observances were held in the cathedrals. Celebrations were also held throughout the Holy Land.

The heads of state of virtually every country in the world sent messages of congratulation to the Sovereign Pontiff on his episcopal jubilee. Among them were the King of Belgium, the King of Bulgaria, the President of China, the President of Finland, Marshal Petain, Chief of State of France, the King of England, Chancellor Hitler of Germany, the Queen of Holland, the Regent of Hungary, the President of Ireland, the King of Italy, Premier Mussolini, the President of Poland, the King of Rumania, Generalissimo Franco of Spain, the President of Slovakia, the President of Switzerland, the President of the United States and the Presidents of Latin-American countries. The Holy Father celebrated a solemn Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, on Ascension Thursday, attended by 50,000 persons. During it he pronounced a homily emphasizing the need of faith and concluding with an invocation to the Holy Spirit, and afterwards he appeared on the grand balcony of the Basilica and imparted the blessing Urbi et Orbi.

On his name day, June 2, Pope Pius responded to greetings of the Cardinals with grateful appreciation of their felicitations and counsel on the duty of all Princes of the Church, prelates, priests, religious and laymen to prepare through prayer, work and sacrifice for that future day when a strife-torn world will seek the light and grace of Christ. On Corpus Christi, June 4, His Holiness and 20 members of the Sacred College attended Vesper services in St. Peter's, Cardinal Salotti preached a sermon in which he recalled that at the same moment prayers before the Holy Eucharist were being recited in all continents, and the Pope imparted the Eucharistic blessing. After a brief indisposition during which audiences were suspended, the Pontiff fully recovered made his customary visit to the Vatican Basilica on the eve of the Feast of Sts. Peter and Paul.

The new Minister of Venezuela to the Holy See, Senor Jose Casa Briceno, presented his credentials on July 5, expressing sentiments of devotion and respect, and the Holy Father imparted his blessing to the Venezuelan nation. Finland's first Minister to the Holy See, George Achates Gripenger, in presenting his credentials, July 31, expressed the desire of Finland for ever cordial relations with the Vatican, and the Pontiff spoke of the benevolent consideration which the Holy See has given the Finnish people.

To audiences of several thousand at various times during the year Pope Pius discoursed on relations between employers and employees, as servants of God, as sons of God and therefore brothers, and as members of the same Mystical Body of Christ, and pointed out their reciprocal responsibilities.

The gold, silver and bronze medals of the Pontifical Year, the work of Aurelius Mistruzzi, bear in the form of angels ascending from St. Peter's dome representations of the radio messages delivered by the Holy Father. A new series of Vatican City postage stamps commemorated the war relief efforts of Pope Pius XII. "Ecclesia," official organ of information of the Papal Secretariate of State illustrating by pictures the charitable mission of the Holy See, in its initial number issued in September reviewed the activities of the Pope in alleviating the sufferings occasioned by war.

To the Brazilian National Eucharistic Congress the Holy Father spoke over the radio in Portuguese, expressing his joy that one of its aims was the nourishing of priestly vocations, and terming Brazil one of the greatest Catholic nations of the world. At the conclusion of his broadcast he received the rector and students from the Brazilian College in Rome and greeted them paternally giving them his blessing.

On Sept. 13 M. Leon Thebaud, new Minister of Haiti to the Holy See, presented his credentials to the Pope with expression of his country's firm will to preserve its fidelity to the Holy See, and he was assured that the spiritual and material advancement of the people of Haiti was the earnest wish of the Church. On Sept. 19, 22 and 26 His Holiness received in audience President Roosevelt's personal representative, Myron C. Taylor, on a brief visit to the Vatican from the United States. Vatican officials declared no extraordinary character was to be ascribed to the visits. Mr. Taylor departed on Sept. 28 by plane for Madrid. The Papal Nuncio to France, the Most Rev. Valerio Valeri, was granted an audience on Sept. 28. On Oct. 7 Pope Pius received in farewell audience the retiring Spanish Ambassador, Jose de Janguas Messia.

On the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the organization the Holy Father received 2,500 men of Italian Catholic Action and in a discourse to them on a new world order called upon Catholic men everywhere to extend to others by example and action a share of that truly Christian order which must be its basis. To members of the Italian Society for the Progress of Science received in audience, the Pope expressed hope for their post-war work and said, "The Church is the friend of all truth. It is not and cannot be the enemy of the true progress of science." Delegates to the International Congress on Mathematical Sciences were received by the Holy Father and to them he said, "Mathematics is a science of peace not conflict."

Representatives of the South American countries took up their residence in Vatican City when their countries broke off relations with Italy, increasing the diplomatic colony there to 162 persons, including 17 families. With the establishment of Vatican-China relations, an apartment was being prepared for the Chinese representative to the Holy See, Dr. Cheou Kang Sie. His appointment does not change the character, title or residence of the representative of the Holy See in China.

A special Mission Sunday message of Pope Pius XII was broadcast over Vatican City radio station voicing his esteem and solicitude for both the missionaries who labor for souls and the faithful who support them with material aid.

In a discourse delivered to a group of Rumanian journalists in October His Holiness spoke of the importance, responsibility and mission of the press and appealed to newspapermen throughout the world to stress these ideals which prepare peoples for a just and moderate peace.

The culmination of observances in Portugal marking the 25th anniversary of the apparitions of the Blessed Virgin at Fatima was a radio discourse on Oct. 31 by the Holy Father, in which he consecrated the war-torn world to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. This solemn act created a profound impression and it was recalled that Pope Pius XII was consecrated a bishop on the very day, May 13, 1917, of the first apparition of the Blessed Virgin, at the Iria grotto, near the village of Fatima, to three children, Lucia de Jesus and her cousins, Francisco and Jacinta Marto. When she appeared to them the third time, July 13, she said: "To save souls, the Lord desires that devotion to my Immaculate Heart be established in the world. If what I tell you is done, many souls will be saved and there will be peace. The war will end; but if they do not cease to offend the Lord, not much time will elapse, and precisely during the next pontificate another and more terrible one will commence." Ever-increasing crowds came to Fatima and many miraculous cures were claimed, but it was not until October, 1930 that the apparitions were declared by ecclesiastical authority as worthy of belief, and devotion to Our Lady of Fatima was officially authorized. It is during this second "more terrible" war that the present Pontiff consecrates the world to the Immaculate Heart and has granted indulgences for the recitation of the prayer which he gave during the radio discourse. In his broadcast he conveyed his Apostolic Benediction to the President and people of Portugal. President Carmona responded with a message of appreciation.

On Nov. 5 His Holiness presided at a pontifical requiem Mass offered in the Sistine Chapel for Cardinals Boggiani, Baudrillart and Leme da Silveira Cintra who had died during the year. To one of the Spanish Bishops making their ad limina visits to the Vatican the Holy Father praised Spain as "a spiritual reservoir of the world," and Generalissimo Franco for the Catholic spirit manifested in his discourses. In an address broadcast by radio to the closing exercises of the First National Eucharistic Congress of El Salvador, he said it was fitting that the faithful of the Republic of "the Saviour," the most beautiful of all possible names, should render homage at this time to the Divine Victim who saved the world—their Divine Saviour. He stressed the intimate relation of the Holy Eucharist and the Mass with the Sacrifice of the Cross and the need of man to participate to gain immortality. He concluded by blessing El Salvador and praying that the blessing be extended to include the entire universe in an embrace that will be a cordial pledge of peace and salvation. During the week of Nov. 29 the Pope together with the Cardinals and prelates of the Curia made a spiritual retreat.

An article on "Vatican Policy in the Second World War," appearing in the Swiss newspaper, "Die Tat," analyzed the enormous problems and difficulties faced by the Holy See in maintaining neutrality in a war-divided world and said, "The Holy See has not swerved from the path which her tradition and the genuine interests of mankind in general and Catholics in particular point out." Thus does the Holy Father remain the father of all.

ECCELSIASTICAL ADMINISTRATION

There are 1,736 separate ecclesiastical jurisdictions throughout the world, under the Holy See. These are: residential patriarchates, 10; residential sees, 1,213; abbeys and prelatures nullius, 54; vicariates, prefectures and missions sui juris, 459. In addition to the residential prelates, there are 4 titular patriarchs and 779 titular archbishops and bishops. During his pontificate, Pope Pius XII has created 28 residential sees, 4 abbeys and prelatures nullius, and 42 vicariates, prefectures and missions.

In the Western Hemispheres there are 476 ecclesiastical jurisdictions. The distribution is: North America, 207; continental Central America, 20; West Indies, 20; South America, 229. The United States has 118, including the Vicariate Apostolic of Alaska; Brazil has 101; Canada has 50.

There were 52 cardinals at the beginning of 1942. Three died during the year, so that with 49 members, the Sacred College of Cardinals is 21 short of its full complement.

Missionaries dependent upon the Sacred Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith totaled 73,897 in 1941, composed of 20,578 priests, 8,514 lay Brothers and 44,895 Sisters. The greatest number of these missionary priests (4,561) and Brothers (1,167) were in China, but the country having the largest number of these missionary Sisters (10,525) was Australia. The hazards of war resulted in a fluctuating number of missionaries, so that exact statistics are not available.

There are a total of 835 religious orders, of which 159 are orders of men and 776 are orders of women.

The Holy See has representatives in 58 countries. Of these 36 have diplomatic status and 22 are Apostolic Delegates. Forty countries have diplomatic representation at the Vatican.

PAPAL DOCUMENTS

Apostolic Letter—Formerly any document issued by the Holy See; now principally a Brief used for lesser appointments, for erecting and dividing mission territory, for designating basilicas and approving religious congregations.

Brief—Brief papal letter lacking the solemnity and formality of a Bull, signed with the seal of the Fisherman's ring and used for less important matters than a Bull.

Bull—Papal document with leaden seals used in appointing bishops and in canonizations.

Constitution—Papal law or grant used for dogmatic or disciplinary pronouncements. Since 1911 Constitutions have been used for erecting or dividing dioceses. They follow the old Bull form and are sub plumbo letters.

Decree—Legislative enactment taking the form of a constitution, apostolic letter or motu proprio, concerning faith and discipline as affects the general welfare of the Church.

Decretal—Papal letter containing an authoritative decision on some point of discipline.

Encyclical—Circular letter differing in form from a Bull or Brief, treating matters concerning the general welfare of the Church, addressed by the Pope to patriarchs, primates, archbishops and bishops in communion with the Holy See.

Motu Proprio—Decree following an informal method.

Rescript—Papal reply to questions or petitions of individuals.

THE PAPAL ENCYCLICALS

Communication of sound doctrine and the timely admonition against current evils by means of letters is definitely of Apostolic origin. Sts. Peter, Paul, John and James began writing to the members of the congregations where they had established the Church. The early pastors of souls continued this work of instruction by letter; and it is proper that the Supreme Shepherds of souls, the Roman Pontiffs, should thus guard their flocks by direct cautioning against abuses and by exhortation to virtue.

The encyclical letters of the recent Popes, who are at once pastors and guardians and recognized scholars of social conditions, have become text books to the Catholic and Christian world. A new era in encyclical history began with the reign of Leo XIII. Since he wrote his "Rerum Novarum" on the condition of the working classes, labor and capital both have looked to it and supplementary encyclicals for guidance and for protection.

Because so many of the encyclicals deal with particular and even provincial problems, many students have been unable to find a correct index to these encyclicals. Thus far only one volume, "Guide to the Encyclicals," has appeared giving complete sources and bibliographies of the encyclicals since Pope Leo XIII. With the permission of the author, Sister M. Claudia Carlen, I. H. M., we publish this list. Students who have the key to these encyclicals stand at the treasury of deep thought, loving concern for humanity and a careful analysis of the varied problems of men and their genuine Christian solution.

CONCORDATS

A concordat is an agreement between the Holy See and a civil government on disputable spiritual matters. In order to secure certain necessary immunities to the Church, the Popes have often conceded the exercise of certain rights to the State such as the nomination of bishops, the appointments of pastors, the number of the clergy, taxation of Church property, etc.

Some famous Concordats were those between Pope Callistus II and Emperor Henry V of Germany in 1122, ending the dispute over the appointment of bishops; Pope Pius VII and Napoleon in 1801, reestablishing the Church in France; Pope Pius XI and Premier Mussolini of Italy in 1929, settling the controversy about the holding of Church property, and the marriage and public school questions.

The Holy See has concordats with the following countries: Colombia, 1892; Poland, 1925; Italy, 1929; Rumania, 1929; Germany, 1933; Yugoslavia, 1935; Portugal, 1940; and a Modus Vivendi with Ecuador, 1937.

PAPAL ELECTIONS

When the Dean of the Sacred College proclaims publicly the death of the Pontiff, word is sent out to all the cardinals throughout the world. They are convoked to solemn conclave to elect a new Pope, to be held within fifteen to eighteen days after the death of the Pope. Until an election takes place, they remain in seclusion within a part of the Vatican Palace specially prepared for them.

On the fifteenth day after the death of the Pope, if all the cardinals are present, or if not all present then, on the eighteenth day the cardinals after celebrating Holy Mass go to the Sistine Chapel where voting takes place, on specially printed ballots, for the candidates who are found to have the qualifications for the office.

A two-thirds majority is required to elect. Two ballots are taken each morning and evening until a decision is reached. If no selection is made the ballots are burned with damp straw which produces a heavy black smoke, thereby notifying the people that no selection has been made. When a two-thirds majority is reached the ballots are burned without damp straw. The light smoke ascending from the chimney proclaims to the people the election of a new Pope. Acceptance of the office on the part of the one elected must be manifested before he is validly the new Pontiff. If the one elected is not already a bishop he must be consecrated.

The Pope is elected for life, i. e., for the remaining years of his life; although if he wishes he may resign. At the time he does so, a new Pope is elected. Any male Catholic, no matter of what race or color, may be elected Pope, even one who is not a priest. Should a layman be chosen he would have to be ordained and consecrated.

CONSISTORIES

Consistories are assemblies of Cardinals presided over by the Pope and called to deliberate with him. There are three kinds: (1) secret consistories, at which only the Pope and Cardinals are present; (2) public consistories, attended by other prelates and lay spectators; (3) semi-public consistories, attended by bishops and patriarchs.

The secret consistory is the most important. Thereat the Pope delivers an allocution on religious and moral conditions throughout the world. Sometimes the Pope seeks the opinion of the cardinals on the creation of new cardinals, gives the cardinal's ring to new cardinals, appoints bishops, archbishops and patriarchs, makes ecclesiastical transfers, divides or unites dioceses and asks for a vote on a proposed canonization.

At the public consistory the Pope bestows the red hat on newly created cardinals, hears the causes of beatifications and canonizations.

At the semi-public consistory the propriety of a proposed canonization is decided.

AD LIMINA VISIT

Bishops are obliged once every five years to visit the tombs of St. Peter and St. Paul, have audience with the Holy Father and present a written report of conditions in the diocese. The visits rotate over five years beginning January 1, 1911: first year, the bishops of Italy, Corsica, Sardinia, Sicily and Malta; second year, the bishops of Spain, Portugal, France, Belgium, Holland, England, Scotland, Ireland; third year, bishops from the other countries of Europe; fourth year, the bishops of the American Continents; fifth year, the bishops of Africa, Asia and Australia.

NOMINATIONS OF BISHOPS

The Sacred Congregation of the Consistory decreed July 25, 1916, that bishops should every two years send to their metropolitans a list of priests worthy of the episcopacy. The metropolitan forwards the results to the Apostolic Delegate who in turn forwards the list to the Congregation of the Consistory where the names are recorded to guide the Holy Father in his choice of bishops to fill vacancies and newly created sees.

CONCURSUS

A competitive examination of applicants for the permanent rectorship of a parish covering knowledge of ecclesiastical affairs, age, prudence, integrity and past services. Qualifications: must have been a priest of the diocese not less than ten years, must have had three years of parish work and have demonstrated ability to direct the temporal and spiritual affairs of a parish. A permanent rector is removed only by judicial process.

COUNCILS

A Council is an assembly of the prelates of the Church, called together by their lawful head, in order to decide questions concerning faith, morals, or ecclesiastical discipline. The following are the chief kinds of Councils: General or Ecumenical; Provincial; National or Plenary; and Diocesan.

GENERAL COUNCILS

A General or Ecumenical Council is one to which the bishops of the whole world are lawfully summoned by the Pope, or with his consent, and presided over by him or by his legates. Its decrees must also have the approval of the Sovereign Pontiff. General councils are infallible and cannot teach us anything wrong in faith or morals.

The following are the General Councils which have been held up to the present time. The first eight were held in Asia, or the eastern part of Christendom; the remainder in Europe, or the Western part:

Council (Place)	Date	Pope	Doctrine
1. Nicaea I.....	325	Sylvester.....	Condemned heresy of Arius; defined clearly that the Son of God was consubstantial ( homousios ) to the Father; formulated the Nicene Creed.
2. Constantinople I..	381	Damasus.....	Condemned heresy of Macedonius; defined the divinity of the Holy Ghost; confirmed and extended the Nicene Creed.
3. Ephesus .....	431	Celestine I....	Condemned the heresy of Nestorius; defined that there was one person in Christ and defended the Divine Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.
4. Chalcedon .....	451	Leo I.....	Condemned heresy of Eutyches (Monophysites); declared Christ had two natures, human and divine.
5. Constantinople II.	553	Vigilius.....	The so-called three Chapters, the erroneous books of Theodorus and the teachings of the three Nestorian bishops, were condemned.
6. Constantinople III.	680	Agatho.....	Declared against the Monothelites, who taught one will in Christ, by defining that Christ had two wills, human and divine.
7. Nicaea II.....	787	Adrian I.....	Condemned the heresy of the image-breakers (Iconoclasts).
8. Constantinople IV.	869	Adrian II....	The usurper Photius deposed, the patriarch Ignatius reinstated, and the Greek Schism suppressed.
9. Lateran I (Rome).	1123	Callistus II...	Called to confirm the peace between Church and State after the settlement of the Investiture Question.
10. Lateran II.....	1139	Innocent II...	Condemned the heresies of Peter of Bruys and Arnold of Brescia (Petrobrusians).
11. Lateran III.....	1179	Alexander III.	Condemned the heresies of the Waldenses and Albigenses; reformed ecclesiastical discipline; regulated for elections of Popes.

Council (Place)	Date	Pope	Doctrine
12. Lateran IV.....	1215	Innocent III...	Called to condemn prevailing heresies; to obtain aid for the progress of the Crusades; and for the promotion of ecclesiastical discipline. Annual confession and Communion prescribed for all.
13. Lyons I.....	1245	Innocent IV...	Called in behalf of the Holy Land, and on account of the hostility of the Emperor Frederick II toward the Holy See.
14. Lyons II.....	1274	Gregory X....	For the promotion of ecclesiastical discipline; for the union of the Greeks with the Latin Church.
15. Vienne .....	1311	Clement V....	Against fanatic sectarians (Beghards); suppression of the Knights Templars; the union of soul and body defined; help for the Holy Land.
16. Constance .....	1414-1418	Gregory XII... Martin V.....	Suppression of the Western Schism; ecclesiastical reform in "head and members"; Wyclif and Hus condemned.
17. Florence .....	1431-1443	Eugene IV....	For the union of the Greeks and other Oriental sects with the Latin Church; reestablishment of peace among Christian Princes.
18. Lateran V.....	1512-1517	Julius II..... Leo X.....	The relation of Pope to General Councils defined; condemnation of some errors regarding the nature of the human soul; crusade against the Turks.
19. Trent ..	1545-1563	Paul III..... Julius III..... Pius IV.....	Against the heresies of the so-called Reformers of the 16th century, viz., Luther, Calvin, and others. Reformed the discipline of the Church and clarified her position in doctrinal matters.
20. Vatican .....	1869 (op'd) 1870 (adj'd but not closed)	Pius IX.....	Canons relating to faith and the Constitution of the Church; defined especially in a solemn decree the primacy and infallibility of the Pope.

PROVINCIAL COUNCILS

A Provincial Council is a meeting of the bishops of one province. The metropolitan of an ecclesiastical province calls and presides over a provincial council to consider and adopt measures for the increase of faith, the regulation of morals, the correction of abuses, the settling of controversies, the establishment and maintenance of uniform discipline. Acts and decrees must be approved by the Sacred Congregation of the Council at Rome before being promulgated. One must be held at least once every twenty years.

PLENARY COUNCILS

Plenary Councils are National Councils, or meetings of the ordinaries of a region assembled under the presidency of the Pope's legate to determine matters of regulation and discipline. Their decrees are binding in the whole territory.

In the United States the archbishops of Baltimore by right of priority of the see, have presided over all the Plenary Councils, which have been attended by the archbishops, bishops, administrators, mitred abbots, vicars apostolic, prefects, apostolic coadjutors, auxiliary bishops, visiting bishops, provincials of religious orders, rectors of major seminaries and experts in theology and canon law.

The First Plenary Council of Baltimore was called May 9, 1852, with Archbishop Kendrick of Baltimore as Apostolic Delegate. It professed allegiance to the Pope and faith in the doctrines of the Church, regulated parish life, ceremonies, the administration of Church funds, and the teaching of Christian Doctrine.

The Second Plenary Council was called by Archbishop Spalding of Baltimore, October 7-21, 1866. It condemned the heresies of the day, made regulations in the organization of dioceses, the education and conduct of the clergy, ecclesiastical property, parochial duties, general education and secret societies.

The Third Plenary Council was called Nov. 9 — Dec. 7, 1884, by Archbishop Gibbons. It appointed a commission for the creation of a Catholic University. Elementary and higher school education was discussed, a commission was appointed to prepare a catechism of Christian Doctrine. Six holy days of obligation were determined for the United States: Immaculate Conception, Christmas, Circumcision, Ascension, Assumption, All Saints Day. It signed a petition to introduce the cause of beatification of the Jesuit Martyrs.

DIOCESAN SYNODS

A Diocesan Council, usually called Diocesan Synod, is a convention of priests of a diocese called by the bishop to consider matters for the good of the clergy and people. Except in special cases, it must be held in the Cathedral. Those who attend include: vicar general, diocesan consultors, rector of the seminary, deans, a delegate from each collegiate church, pastors of the city in which the synod is held, abbots and one superior from each religious order in the diocese, all of whom merely consult with the bishop who alone signs synodal decrees which become effective at once.

Hierarchy of the Catholic Church

The hierarchy is the governing body of the Church. It consists of the Pope, the College of Cardinals, the Sacred Congregations, the Patriarchs, Archbishops and Bishops, the Apostolic Delegates, Vicars and Prefects, certain Abbots and other prelates.

THE POPE

His Holiness the Pope is the Bishop of Rome, Vicar of Jesus Christ, Successor of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church, Patriarch of the West, Primate of Italy, Archbishop and Metropolitan of the Roman Province, Sovereign of the temporal dominions of the Holy Roman Church, and Sovereign of Vatican City.

PROTHONOTARIES APOSTOLIC

Prothonotaries Apostolic are members of the chief order of prelates in the Roman Curia. They are divided into four classes:

(1) Prothonotaries Apostolic de numero participantium, so called because they share in the revenues of the papal chancery; they sign the Papal Bulls, aid in the work of the consistories and in the process of canonizations and examinations of candidates, enjoy the use of pontificals and have many other privileges.

(2) Prothonotaries Apostolic Supernumerary, limited to the canons of the Roman patriarchal Basilicas of St. Peter, the Lateran and St. Mary Major and the cathedral churches of Concordia, Florence, Goritz, Padua, Treviso, Udine, Venice, Cagliari, Malta and Strigonia, who have been made domestic prelates by the Pope.

(3) Prothonotaries Apostolic ad instar (participantium), who are appointed by the Pope and are entitled to the same external insignia as Class 1.

(4) Prothonotaries Apostolic Titular or Honorary, who receive the dignity as a special privilege.

PAPAL LEGATES

Legates a latere — Cardinals appointed by the Pope to represent him at specific functions usually of national importance. All legates do not bear this title, as in the case of a cardinal sent as papal representative to a Eucharistic Congress.

Nuncios — Representatives of the Pope at a foreign government whose duty it is to handle the affairs between the Apostolic See and the State. In Catholic countries, the Nuncio is dean of the diplomatic corps. They are usually titular archbishops; occasionally bishops or archbishops with a residential see.

Internuncios — Legates of lower rank than the Nuncios whose duty it is to foster relations between the Holy See and the State. They are sent to governments of lesser importance.

Apostolic Delegates — Non-diplomatic legates sent to foreign countries to watch over the conditions of the Church in the State.

THE COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

The College of Cardinals is the Senate of the Church. The Cardinals act as advisers to the Pope and elect his successor. When complete the Sacred College numbers 70 members of whom 6 are cardinal-bishops, 50 are cardinal-priests and 14 are cardinal-deacons. The following is a list of the present College of Cardinals:

THE ROMAN CURIA

The Pope is the Supreme Head of the Church, possessing full and absolute jurisdiction in the governmental affairs of the Church. Since, however, it is practically impossible for him to exercise this ordinary authority immediately over the whole, universal Church, the Popes have found it necessary to establish various groups of churchmen to whom they delegate part of their jurisdiction to be exercised by them. These various bodies constitute the Roman Curia which, at present, according to the recent reform of Pius X, consists of twelve Congregations, three Tribunals, and five Offices.

Congregations

Congregation of the Holy Office

Prefect: His Holiness, the Pope.

Secretary: Francesco Cardinal Marchetti-Selvaggiani.

Assessor: Msgr. Alfred Ottaviani.

Commissary: Very Rev. John Lottini, O. P.

Office: Palazzo del S. Officio.

Duties: Guards the Catholic doctrine in faith and morals; judges heresy and those suspected of heresy; protects the dogmatic doctrine of the sacraments; decides in matters concerning the Eucharistic fast of priests celebrating Mass; in matters concerning the Pauline privilege, the marriage impediments of disparity of cult and mixed religion, and is able to grant dispensations from these two impediments; examines and condemns books and gives dispensations for reading condemned books; judges all questions pertaining to the dogmatic doctrine of indulgences, new prayers, and devotions.

Consistorial Congregation

Prefect: His Holiness, the Pope.

Secretary: Raffaello Charles Cardinal Rossi, O. C. D.

Assessor: Msgr. Vincent Santoro.

Office: Palazzo della Congregazioni, Piazza S. Callisto.

Duties: Prepares matter to be discussed at consistories; constitutes new dioceses, provinces, and cathedral chapters for all territories not subject to the Propagation of the Faith; divides dioceses; proposes bishops, apostolic administrators, coadjutors, and auxiliary bishops; makes the canonical inquiry of those to be promoted and carefully examines their records and tries their doctrine; all that pertains to the founding, preservation, and condition of dioceses belongs to this Congregation; receives and examines the reports of bishops; provides for apostolic visitation and examines the results; decides the competency of all the Congregations other than the Holy Office; provides for the spiritual care of emigrants.

Congregation for the Oriental Church

Prefect: His Holiness, the Pope.

Secretary: Eugene Cardinal Tisserant.

Assessor: Most Rev. Antonio Arata.

Office: Palazzo di Convertendi.

Duties: All matters of whatever kind which pertain to the discipline, the persons, or the rites of the Eastern Church, as also mixed questions either of persons or things which arise owing to the relation to the Latin Church, constitute the object of this Congregation's care.

Congregation of the Sacraments

Prefect: Domenico Cardinal Jorio.

Secretary: Msgr. Francis Bracci.

Office: Palazzo della Congregazioni, Piazza S. Callisto.

Duties: Regulates the discipline of the seven sacraments: gives decrees and dispensations regarding all sacraments, except in matters which belong to the Congregation of the Holy Office or of Rites; probes reasons for dispensations; receives and answers questions regarding the validity of Orders or Matrimony.

Congregation of the Council

Prefect: Francesco Cardinal Marmaggi.

Secretary: Msgr. Joseph Bruno.

Office: Palazzo della Congregazioni, Piazza S. Callisto.

Duties: Has authority over the discipline of the secular clergy and laymen. Takes care that the precepts are observed and grants dispensations when necessary. Oversees matters concerning canons and parish priests, pious sodalities, unions (even though these may be founded by religious, be under their direction, or in their parishes, or attached to their houses), pious legacies, work, Mass stipends, benefices, and offices, ecclesiastical goods, both movable and immovable, diocesan taxes, taxes of the Episcopal Curia, etc.; has power to dispense from the conditions for obtaining a benefice; to permit laymen to acquire ecclesiastical goods, usurped by the civil power. Deals with immunities. Prepares matters for the celebration of episcopal councils or conferences and recognizes the proceedings.

Congregation of Religious

Prefect: Vincenzo Cardinal La Puma.

Secretary: Most Rev. Luke Ermenegild Pasetto, O. M. Cap., Titular Archbishop of Iconio.

Office: Palazzo della Congregazioni, Piazza S. Callisto.

Duties: Has jurisdiction over the government, discipline, studies, property, and privileges of all religious, including lay members of Third Orders; gives dispensations to religious from the common law.

Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith

Prefect: Pietro Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi.

Secretary: Most Rev. Celsus Constantini, D. D., Titular Archbishop of Theodosia.

Office: Palazzo di Propaganda, Piazza di Spagna.

Duties: Entrusted with the care of all mission territory — those places where no hierarchy is established, or if established, is still in its incipient stages; constitutes and changes priests subject to it; has the power to judge and to act in all things coming within its scope and which it considers necessary and opportune; arranges for the celebration of councils in districts under its jurisdiction; approves the proceedings. Societies and Seminaries founded to train missionaries are under the supervision of this Congregation.

Congregation of Sacred Rites

Prefect: Carlo Cardinal Salotti.

Secretary: Msgr. Alphonse Carinci.

Office: Palazzo della Congregazioni, Piazza S. Callisto.

Duties: Supervises and determines all things which pertain to ceremonies and rites in the Latin Church; grants dispensations in such matters; gives insignia and privileges of honor; treats of all business concerning the beatification and canonization of the Servants of God or concerning the relics of these same; to this Congregation are joined the Liturgical Commission, the Historico-Liturgical Commission, and the Commission for Sacred Music.

Congregation of Ceremonies

Prefect: Gennaro Cardinal Granito Pignatelli di Belmonte.

Secretary: Msgr. Benjamin Nardone.

Office: Palazzo Apostolico Vaticano.

Duties: Regulates ceremonies in the papal chapel and court and the sacred functions which the cardinals perform outside the papal chapel; decides questions of the precedence of cardinals and legates whom the various nations send to the Holy See.

Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs

Prefect: Luigi Cardinal Maglione.

Secretary: Msgr. Dominic Tardini.

Office: Palazzo Apostolico Vaticano.

Duties: Constitutes and divides dioceses, promotes suitable men for vacant sees, whenever these affairs must be settled in conjunction with civil powers; handles matters referred to it by the Holy Father through the Cardinal Secretary of State, especially concordats and those matters which have a relation to the civil laws.

Congregation of Seminaries and Universities

Prefect: Giuseppe Cardinal Pizzardo.

Secretary: Msgr. Ernest Ruffini.

Office: Palazzo di S. Callisto, Rome.

Duties: Superintends all those matters which pertain to the government, discipline, temporal administration, and studies of seminaries; to it also is committed the direction of the government and studies in universities depending on the authority of the Church, even those directed by religious; examines and approves new constitutions; confers academic degrees and grants the faculty and establishes norms for the conferring of these.

Congregation of the Basilica of St. Peter

PATRIARCHS

Patriarchs are the highest ecclesiastical dignitaries after the Pope. In the early Church patriarchal rights were accorded only to the Bishops of Rome, Alexandria and Antioch. Jerusalem rose to importance when pilgrims began to flock to the Holy City and the Council of Chalcedon (451) cut away Palestine and Arabia from Antioch and formed the Patriarchate of Jerusalem. Constantine having made Byzantium "New Rome," Constantinople was also raised to patriarchal rank by the Council of Chalcedon.

There are now five major patriarchates. The Pope as Bishop of Rome is Patriarch of all the western Church. In the eastern Church there are Patriarchs of Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem. The Latin Patriarchs of Constantinople, Alexandria and Antioch are now merely titular. The Latin Patriarch of Jerusalem has jurisdiction over Palestine and Cyprus. The Coptic Patriarch of Alexandria and the Syrian, Maronite and Melchite Patriarchs of Antioch rule over Uniat Catholics of their respective Rites.

Minor Patriarchs in the East are the Patriarch of Babylon for the Chaldees and the Patriarch of Cilicia for the Armenians.

Minor Patriarchs in the West are merely titular. They bear the titles of Patriarchs of the West Indies, the East Indies, Lisbon and Venice.

The Patriarchs are as follows:

ECCLESIASTICAL PROVINCES IN THE UNITED STATES

For the better government of the Church, dioceses in one locality are grouped together under the headship of an archdiocese; such a formation is called a province. Without special faculty from the Holy See, the archbishop or metropolitan has no direct jurisdiction over the dioceses or bishops in his province; he is the first among equals, a president. This division into provinces is made in order to care more immediately for the local needs, to correct more easily local abuses, and to co-ordinate the work of the bishops. The following are the provinces in the United States proper.

Province of Baltimore includes the states of Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, the eastern part of Florida, and the District of Columbia: Archdioceses of Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C.; the dioceses of Charleston, S. C., Raleigh, N. C., Richmond, Va., St. Augustine, Fla., Savannah-Atlanta, Ga., Wheeling, W. Va., Wilmington, Del., and the Abbacy Nullius of Belmont, N. C.

Province of Boston includes the New England States: Archdiocese of Boston, Mass.; the dioceses of Burlington, Vt., Fall River, Mass., Hartford, Conn., Manchester, N. H., Portland, Me., Providence, R. I., Springfield, Mass.

Province of Chicago includes the state of Illinois: Archdiocese of Chicago, Ill.; the dioceses of Belleville, Ill., Peoria, Ill., Rockford, Ill., and Springfield, Ill.

Province of Cincinnati includes the states of Ohio and Indiana: Archdiocese of Cincinnati, Ohio; the dioceses of Cleveland, Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, Fort Wayne, Ind., Indianapolis, Ind., and Toledo, Ohio.

Province of Denver includes the states of Colorado and Wyoming: Archdiocese of Denver, Colo.; the dioceses of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Pueblo, Colo.

Province of Detroit includes the state of Michigan: Archdiocese of Detroit, Mich.; the dioceses of Grand Rapids, Mich., Lansing, Mich., Marquette, Mich., and Saginaw, Mich.

Province of Dubuque includes the states of Iowa and Nebraska: Archdiocese of Dubuque, Iowa; the dioceses of Davenport, Iowa, Des Moines, Iowa, Grand Island, Neb., Lincoln, Neb., Omaha, Neb., and Sioux City, Iowa.

Province of Los Angeles includes southern California and the state of Arizona: Archdiocese of Los Angeles, Cal.; the dioceses of Monterey-Fresno, Cal., San Diego, Cal., and Tucson, Ariz.

Province of Louisville includes the states of Kentucky and Tennessee: Archdiocese of Louisville, Ky.; the dioceses of Covington, Ky., Owensboro, Ky., and Nashville, Tenn.

Province of Milwaukee includes the state of Wisconsin and northern Michigan: Archdiocese of Milwaukee; the dioceses of Green Bay, Wis., La Crosse, Wis., and Superior, Wis.

Province of Newark includes the state of New Jersey: Archdiocese of Newark, N. J.; the dioceses of Camden, N. J., Paterson, N. J., and Trenton, N. J.

Province of New Orleans includes the states of Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and western Florida: Archdiocese of New Orleans, La.; the dioceses of Alexandria, La., Lafayette, La., Little Rock, Ark., Mobile, Ala., and Natchez, Miss.

Province of New York includes the state of New York: Archdiocese of New York, N. Y.; the dioceses of Albany, N. Y., Brooklyn, N. Y., Buffalo, N. Y., Ogdensburg, N. Y., Rochester, N. Y., and Syracuse, N. Y.

Province of Philadelphia includes the state of Pennsylvania: Archdiocese of Philadelphia, Pa.; the dioceses of Altoona, Pa., Erie, Pa., Harrisburg, Pa., Pittsburgh, Pa., Scranton, Pa.

Province of Portland in Oregon includes the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Alaska Territory: Archdiocese of Portland, Ore.; the dioceses of Baker City, Ore., Boise, Idaho, Great Falls, Mont., Helena, Mont., Seattle, Wash., Spokane, Wash.; and the Vicariate-Apostolic of Alaska.

Province of St. Louis includes the states of Missouri and Kansas: Archdiocese of St. Louis, Mo.; the dioceses of Concordia, Kans., Kansas City, Mo., Leavenworth, Kans., St. Joseph, Mo., and Wichita, Kans.

Province of St. Paul includes the states of Minnesota, South Dakota and North Dakota: Archdiocese of St. Paul, Minn.; the dioceses of Bismarck, N. Dak., Crookston, Minn., Duluth, Minn., Fargo, N. D., Rapid City, S. Dak., St. Cloud, Minn., Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and Winona, Minn.

Province of San Antonio includes the states of Texas (except the Diocese of El Paso) and Oklahoma: Archdiocese of San Antonio, Tex.; the dioceses of Amarillo, Tex., Corpus Christi, Tex., Dallas, Tex., Galveston, Tex., and Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.

Church and State

Primarily an institution devoted to the salvation of souls, the Church nevertheless performs many secondary functions, one of which is the preservation of the social order. She has always thrown her full weight against the destruction of society. Ceaselessly has she preached the duty of obedience to civil authority, respect for property rights and respect for human dignity.

The religious, social and political upheaval of the sixteenth century, known as the Reformation (1517-1648), destroyed Christian unity, and bitter antagonisms arose. During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries the obvious opposition to Catholicism declined. Formerly the Church was reprobated for her form of worship, her sacraments and her credence in miracles. With the rise of the Protestant states to power and leadership and what was thought to be the decline of the Catholic countries, a more tolerant and patronizing attitude was assumed. The twentieth century, however, has brought many problems and difficulties, superficially blamable on the first World War but remotely traceable to the principles forming the basis of the anti-Catholic culture. Confused and bewildered at the blow struck their boasted superiority these forces have now been confronted with the definite Catholic political, social and economic philosophy which they have so long disregarded. That they will embrace the Catholic teaching seems too sanguine a hope. That there is need for a united Christian front to oppose the attacks of a pagan Socialism and Communism has been pointed out by Pope Pius XI and Pope Pius XII in their encyclicals. The Church will continue its opposition to these, as well as to extreme Nationalism.

The Catholic citizen is in conscience bound to respect and obey the duly constituted authority provided faith and morals are thereby not endangered. Under no circumstances may the Church be subjugated by the State. Whatever their form may be, states are not conceded the right to force the observance of immoral or irreligious laws upon a people. That there is grave danger that certain states encroach upon the realm of faith and morals the following record for 1942 testifies.

GERMANY

Courageously the hierarchy of Germany continued to denounce the acts of oppression of the Church by the Reich. In a sermon at New Year's eve services in the Munich cathedral, Dec. 31, 1941, Cardinal Archbishop von Faulhaber declared that while Catholic soldiers at the front "stand shoulder to shoulder with other German men," and Catholic civilians share in every war sacrifice, still the Church "is treated with constant distrust, is spied upon, and oppressed by exceptional restrictions, and buildings belonging to the Church and to religious are confiscated on a far larger scale than private ones." With increasing frequency the worker is faced with the alternative of leaving the Church or resigning his position, and insidious slogans and catch phrases are being used by Nazi officialdom to induce Catholics to apostatize. Measures applying to youth and religious training, he declared, could have but one purpose: "to alienate the young systematically from the Church and thus prepare the way for apostasy." In the upper grades of secondary schools no religious instruction at all is any longer given, and in lower grades it is consistently impeded. On the basis that conservation of paper is an urgent war need, no paper is available for catechisms and prayer-books. "But controversial pamphlets against the Church are still permitted in gigantic editions. One booklet makes as its fundamental point the demand that our 2,000-year-old Christian tradition be torn out by the very roots; it has been circulated to the extent of half a million copies. Another book reviles the Papacy in the most revolting of terms, and is printed again and again."

The booklet to which Cardinal von Faulhaber referred is "Gott und Volk—Soldatisches Bekenntnis" (God and the People—A Profession of the Soldier's Faith), which proclaims: "We still have a battle to fight for the German man, for the German soul. . . . The fronts in this battle are evident. One is called Christ; the other is Germany. . . . We believe in Germany. We cannot at the same time believe in another kingdom above her, because we must live for our people and not for our personal happiness. . . . Nor can we give ear to the prating of apostles extraneous to the world, for whoever believes in Rome cannot believe in Germany. We cannot live two different faiths. There is room in our hearts for only one faith; namely, Germany."

Religious booklets for German soldiers were banned but this anti-Christian credo was widely disseminated. Its sentiments were echoed in an official instruction to his subordinates issued by Reichsleiter Bormann, successor to Rudolf Hess as National Socialist party chairman, in which he said:

"National Socialist and Christian ideologies are irreconcilable." Moreover he declared, "Nobody would know anything about Christianity if he had not been stuffed with it in his youth by the priests. . . . Thus if our youth in the future hear no more of Christianity, whose doctrine is inferior to ours, Christianity will automatically cease to exist."

This purposeful scheme of the Nazis is emphasized in a pastoral letter written by the Bishop of Muenster, the Most Rev. Clement August von Galen, who speaks of "the strict duty of parents to make every effort for the religious education of their children" and to send them to the Youth Services and Youth Hour now that the schools lack Christian instruction.

The third anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XII was observed in March, on Papal Sunday, and Cardinal von Faulhaber took occasion in his sermon to condemn "a flood of execrations and calumnies which flows through Germany to undermine the Pope's authority and to shake the fidelity of Catholics." He then convincingly summed up evidence of the authority of Rome, the center of Christendom, and the Divine institution of not a national, but a universal, Church.

In a joint pastoral read in the churches on Passion Sunday, March 22, the German bishops reviewed and publicly protested Nazi abuses and persecution. Those who depend on state or party positions must deny their religion or abandon it; religious instruction is proscribed and has been punished; anti-Christian influence is brought to bear in youth organizations, hostels and labor camps; the religious press has been almost entirely destroyed and printing of religious books severely restricted; priests without proof of guilt are banned from their dioceses and homes, and often interned; religious orders have been expelled from their houses and their activities curtailed on an ever-increasing scale, and seminaries have been confiscated, so that the German people will be in future without the pastoral services of priests and the sacrificing services of nuns; religious property has been seized and even places of worship confiscated and desecrated; citizens have been deprived of their liberty without evidence of crime; the insane and incurables are being killed; an anti-Christian wave of propaganda has been carried through the country "to suffocate the vigor of the Catholic Church in German lands."

Another joint pastoral of the hierarchy scored violations of the sanctity of marriage and urged the faithful to have recourse to the efficacious arms of prayer and mortification to resist prevailing enticements to break the law of God. They declared that to assert physical love is the supreme good is to attempt diabolically to unchain our lowest instincts and "another step in this direction will arrive with the aberration in which it is wished to create outside of marriage a new people, even systematically, supermen." They condemned the view that continence is harmful and criticized the movement to introduce obligatory marriage, thereby prohibiting chastity.

An exceptionally brief message was issued by the Bishops at their annual meeting at Fulda, extending comfort to the faithful. They expressed admiration for the "heroism and endurance" of German soldiers, and prayerful sympathy for the wounded, missing and prisoners, and for those who had lost loved ones. They directed their thoughts also to the priests at the front and at home who "augment and keep alive the courage and confidence of those under their care," the nuns "who with admirable love and devotion look after the wounded soldiers," those suffering "under terrible air attacks," and the millions working at home "sometimes to the limit of their strength."

The burial of many victims of air raids, with no Christian ceremony or cross, was deplored by Cardinal von Faulhaber, and he told his people that ten minutes after an air-raid warning he and his clergy will give a general absolution to "all who have prepared their soul by an act of penitence."

By every means in their power bishops and priests sustained the faith and courage of the German people.

POLAND

In their subjugation of Poland, the Nazis endeavored completely to denationalize the people and de-Christianize them. In their destruction of the things of the Church they aimed a death-blow at the heart of the nation, for over 90 per cent of the Poles are Catholics. And this destruction is almost complete. Churches, seminaries, convents and other Catholic institutions have been confiscated and converted into barracks, offices, storehouses and stables, after they were stripped of their sacred vessels and art treasures, many of which have been carried off into the Reich. The closing of the Church of St. Therese, the "Lourdes of Eastern Europe," at Vilno, Poland, took place in June, 1942, and it is feared that the miraculous picture of the Holy Mother of God of Ostra Brama has been removed from the country. All cultural organizations have been liquidated and Catholic social and benevolent organizations banned by law, the six universities are closed and Catholic schools suppressed, and Catholic libraries no longer exist, many valuable volumes having been destroyed. Even wayside crosses and small shrines were burned.

Seven Polish dioceses — Poznan, Gniezno, Wloclawek, Plock, Pelplin, Lodz and Katowice — have been liquidated, their bishops deported and 90 per cent of the clergy imprisoned, exiled or put to death. It was estimated that 800 priests had been executed or tormented to death. In Poznan only three churches and one chapel remain open, whereas formerly there were 30 churches and 47 chapels serving 300,000 people. Services are rigidly restricted. The religious share the fate of the clergy: some were killed and others imprisoned or deported.

In September, 1942, it was reported that 3,000 priests were still held in prisons or concentration camps, many of them suffering from hunger and exhaustion and the results of mistreatment. In a "village of death" set up outside of Warsaw 12,000 of Poland's political and educational leaders have been executed. Many are in concentration camps and some have died of ill-treatment or have gone insane. Thousands have been taken to Germany for forced labor, among them monks and nuns.

The Warthegau, or Wartheland, that portion of Poland annexed to the Reich, had before the war a population of 4,000,000 Catholics served by at least 2,000 priests. The Church enjoyed all the rights and prerogatives assured by the 1925 Concordat between Poland and the Holy See. Since the German annexation all communication with the Holy See or with the Papal Nunciature at Berlin has been prohibited. In vain the Berlin Nunciature tried to obtain permission from the Nazi government to send a representative into Wartheland to attend to exclusively religious matters.

The Catholic Church has ceased to have juridical status in Poland, being superseded by "religious associations" with juridical personality, subjected to police control. The priests in these associations must be men approved by the Gestapo.

NETHERLANDS

Catholic life is very strong in the Netherlands though only about one-third of the population are Catholics. Before the Nazi occupation there was a Catholic party in politics, a powerful Catholic press with 40 dailies and some 30 semi-weeklies and weeklies now all suppressed, a Catholic community life strengthened by unions of both employers and workers which have been dissolved, and a vigorous Catholic school system against which confiscation of school buildings and a drastic cut in teachers' salaries were directed. Catholic teachers remaining in the schools, however, refuse to indoctrinate the students with Nazism. A staunch stand has been taken against all aggression on religious freedom, and many Catholic leaders have been interned. The Nazi press is boycotted. Their own charitable organizations being abolished, the people refuse to contribute to the Nazi Winter Relief. Young men are forbidden by a joint pastoral of the hierarchy to enter the Nazi labor service, "without it being absolutely necessary." Archbishop de Jong of Utrecht urged Catholic physicians to boycott the Nazified Netherlands Union of Sickness Fund Physicians, intended to infiltrate Nazi principles into the spheres of medicine and public health. The Bishops, unable to have their pastoral letters printed, have them stenciled and duplicated by hand, and Catholic boys take two copies to each parish, one to the pastor and the other to a leading layman, so that if one is confiscated the other will remain. The practice of wearing a cross had become general among non-Catholics as well as Catholics until a Nazi decree forbade its display, as a "hostile demonstration." Priests and prominent Catholic laymen were among some 1,500 hostages seized in the Netherlands within two months.

BELGIUM

The Germans have refrained from taking direct or violent measures against the Church in occupied Belgium, but they have attempted to mould it into conformity with Nazi political aims, and between totalitarian theories and the Catholic faith there is complete incompatibility. Catholic social welfare institutions were designated as belonging exclusively to the field of politics and placed under direct control of the state. The democrat-Christian trade unions were compelled to join the U. T. M. I., "Union of Workers, Manual and Intellectual." Catholic Action organizations, including the J. O. C., J. A. C., J. E. C., were dissolved, and the cooperative unions, Boerebond and Agricultural Alliance, were suppressed. The Catholic press disappeared; books had to be submitted to the German exequatur; notices of religious ceremonies could not be printed; religious lectures outside the church were forbidden; sermons had to be submitted to the censor.

The opposition of the episcopate and the Belgian clergy to the Germans is vigorous and persevering not only as regards religious doctrines, but also in the social sphere and in the realm of patriotic duty.

LUXEMBOURG

After two years of Nazi rule in Luxembourg, religious life which flourished there among an almost wholly Catholic people is prostrate: the bishop is confined within his residence; scores of priests have been expelled from the country and others cast into prison or concentration camps; the Luxembourg Grand Seminary is closed and its students are either imprisoned or in forced labor camps; monasteries and convents are confiscated, except a few where nuns care for the sick; religious instruction is prohibited in the schools, which are used for paganizing youth; the Catholic press is suppressed in all its forms; religious organizations and cultural associations are banned; and the activity of the Church is restricted to the interior of the churches. But the people maintain an attitude of resolute opposition to Nazi domination and doctrine, sustained in their faith by the remaining clergy.

FRANCE

There was received in this country during the year a series of pamphlets published bi-monthly since November, 1941, and circulated surreptitiously in France. The United Front of Combat and Spiritual Resistance for the Liberation of France was responsible for these

"Cahiers du Chretien Temoignage," Christian documents in pamphlet form. They were accompanied by a letter from a French priest in unoccupied France which reached the N. C. W. C. News Service through highly reliable channels, its authenticity being clearly established. The letter was addressed to the hierarchy, priests and faithful of the Catholic Church and to members of all religious bodies living in the United States, the British Empire and nations allied in the war against the Axis powers. The writer declared himself to be "a Frenchman, priest and religious, an officer of the French Army, a veteran of two wars, now militant against Hitlerism in the so-called 'free' zone," and said: "We too are fighting for the cause that is yours."

To uphold "the cause of God, of Christianity, of morality, of all civilizations" these pamphlets were secretly printed and circulated by hand, as a means of keeping France informed on the spiritual menace of Nazism. The first pamphlet stated: "The French who present these cahiers to you are not making politics for or against this or that. Their one concern is to prevent slow asphyxiation of consciences. They supply you with registered facts and authentic documents. They remind you of doctrinal directions. They rely upon your ingenuity to amplify — prudently and courageously — the echo of these reports of every Christian testimony."

They declared that Hitler would make of patriotic French Catholics "criminals" not "martyrs," by the application of the three Nazi tactics — seduction, compromise and perversion — in both the occupied and the allegedly unoccupied sections of France. For this reason there is no "bloody persecution — not at the start," but those who find "equivocation" in Hitlerian pronouncements when weighed against the facts, or who oppose recognition of the spiritual principles of Nazism, are apt to be accused of "political Catholicism, opposition to the Marshal's Government, dividing the unity of France, or of being the allies of Gallicanism and Communism."

They revealed that mail censorship and telephone surveillance were instituted in France even as in Nazi Germany and cells of the National Revolutionary Youth were installed in schools and colleges. Priests, especially religious, and influential Catholics became the first victims of espionage and a propaganda campaign based on contraversion of the truth. Many pastors and vicars were imprisoned in Paris. A perversion and destruction program was hidden under overtures for collaboration and eventually "there was a thinly veiled bid for apostasy—an attempt to implant the anti-Christian mysticism of Nazism."

The destruction work was well advanced in the occupied zone, where publishers had to adhere to a list of prohibited books, and abolition of all unions, societies and associations except those founded on the public law included all Catholic Action organizations, among them the J. O. C., J. A. C., J. E. C., J. M. C., L. O. C., Scouts etc. It was being prepared surreptitiously in the "free" zone where censorship of everything susceptible of causing umbrage to the "occupying authorities" made copies of the encyclical, "Mit Brennerder Sorge" and the texts of the latest papal discourses unobtainable and the waves of Radio-Vatican jumbled. "Such are the designs of an enemy which is convinced that time, guile and force are sufficient to pervert anything."

With the complete occupation of France by the Nazis in November, 1942, her fate hangs in the balance.

YUGOSLAVIA

With the German and Italian occupation of Yugoslavia persecution and martyrdom followed. Communists became active and many unsuspecting Catholics were drawn into a Liberation Front, thousands of innocent people being imprisoned or executed. Scenes of indescribable sorrow accompanied forced deportation, hostages were shot and villages were razed. In a pastoral letter written in April, 1942, Bishop Rozman of Ljubljana said: "The damage done by occupation both spiritually and materially is incalculable." Church and rectory property was confiscated in 148 parishes, 193 priests were forcibly expelled from 148 parishes and are without the necessities of life, religious communities were evicted from 14 monasteries and convents, the Preparatory College of St. Stanislaus in St. Vid was confiscated, its 350 professors and students expelled and the valuable library ruined. Over 200,000 souls were without Mass and the sacraments, and the dying were without spiritual consolation. The nine remaining priests celebrated Mass twice daily and three times Sunday, and the faithful gathered every Sunday for prayers in common, but they were without instruction. "We cannot continue to exist unless God gives us special help."

MEXICO

Upon Mexico's entry into war with the Axis powers, Archbishop Martinez of Mexico and Bishop Guizar y Valencia of Chihuahua issued statements regarding the duty of Catholics to uphold the civil government, and the Central Board of Catholic Action sounded a ringing appeal for total cooperation with the nation's war effort and the furthering of national unity by prayer, sacrifice and service. Friendlier relations between the Church and State were generally apparent, as witnessed by a sermon in the metropolitan cathedral in which the Rev. Julio Vertis, S. J., said, "To President Avila Camacho is due in great part the spirit of tolerance and charity that now reigns everywhere," and a statement of the President expressing satisfaction with and appreciation of the work of the Church whose personal forces he termed a "factor of national unity."

STATUS OF THE CHURCH IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES OF THE WORLD

Afghanistan — Practically all the inhabitants are Mohammedans subject to the law of Islam. No priest is allowed to enter. Population, 10,000,000.

Alaska — Originally Christianized by the Franciscans and Russian missionaries, the territory is now subject to the ministrations of the Jesuits and secular priests from the United States. Population, 72,524; Catholics, 12,650.

Albania (Italian) — Friendly relations between the Church and State were established in 1936. The majority of the people are Mohammedans. Population (1938), 1,063,000; Catholics, 100,320.

Algeria — Most of the inhabitants are Mohammedans. The missionary work is in charge of the White Fathers. Population, 7,490,000; Catholics, 814,740.

Andorra — All the inhabitants are Catholics, living under the sovereign rule of the Bishop of Urgel, Spain. Population, 5,231; Catholics, 5,231.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN THE UNITED STATES

After the war of the Revolution, religious liberty was not granted by all the colonies at once. The Continental Congress in 1774, however, recommended "that all former differences about religion... from henceforth cease and be forever buried in oblivion." Some colonies then removed the religious restrictions on Catholics. Religious equality did not become universal until after the Philadelphia Convention of 1787 when the Constitution was adopted.

Due largely to a memorial presented by the Rev. John Carroll, it was provided in the sixth article of the Constitution that religious tests as a qualification for any office or public trust be abolished. It likewise was provided in the first amendment to the Constitution that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Still, since Catholics were not admitted to any state office unless they renounced both civil and ecclesiastical foreign jurisdiction, it was agreed to have an ecclesiastical superior in the United States through whom the spiritual jurisdiction of the Holy See would be retained but in whose office nothing might be found objectionable to national independence.

In the second quarter of the nineteenth century Catholics found that the elementary school system, controlled by Protestants, constrained their children to participate in non-Catholic services. Due to protests, public education then was separated from the control of any religious body. In order to give a Catholic religious education to their children, Catholics were forced to establish their own parochial schools.

Relations between the Church and State have been defined at the Plenary or National Councils at Baltimore, in 1852, in 1866 and in 1884. The Apostolic Delegation was established at Washington in 1893.

The Doctrines of the Church

Jesus Christ founded the Catholic Church to which He gave certain revealed truths embodied in what is called the deposit of faith. This deposit has a twofold source, namely Sacred Scripture and Tradition which together are called Divine Revelation. Holy Scripture or the Bible is the Word of God written under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Tradition is likewise the Word of God, not contained in the Bible but handed down by word of mouth and in writing from the Apostles to us in an unbroken succession.

Christ likewise endowed the Church with the authority to guard, interpret and teach these truths till the end of time. They are such that they can be defended by reason. Whenever the Catholic Church teaches any of these truths contained in the deposit of faith she uses either her solemn or her ordinary authority. A doctrine is solemnly taught when contained in one of the following: Definitions of Popes, Decrees of General Councils, Creeds, Professions of Faith. There are three principal Creeds or Symbols: the Apostles', the Nicene and the Athanasian. An outstanding Profession of Faith is that of Pius IV. The Church is also infallible in her ordinary teaching. This is exercised especially when dogmas are unanimously taught by the bishops of the whole world.

The doctrines of the Church are defined, that is, set forth in clear and unmistakable language, by the Pope when he speaks ex cathedra, that is, as the supreme pastor of the whole Church. Speaking thus about matters of faith and morals he cannot err. His definitions become dogmas—matters of belief. A creed is a summary of dogmas.

THE BIBLE

Sacred Scripture, or the Bible, is the written word of God. From the beginning the Church has considered the Holy Scripture a treasure entrusted to her keeping, and she has the sole right to explain to us its meaning. Sacred Scripture consists of the sacred books of the Old and New Testament which the Church declares are inspired, i.e., their writers were moved by God to write, and, while writing, were so guided by Him that they wrote down precisely what He wished them to express and nothing more. This is known as the Canon of Scripture.

According to Leo XIII's encyclical, "Providentissimus Deus" (translation of paragraph 110 of the Enchiridion Biblicum, 1927): "This is the ancient and unchanging faith of the Church, solemnly defined in the Councils of Florence and of Trent, and finally confirmed and more expressly formulated by the Council of the Vatican. These are the words of the last: 'The Books of the Old and New Testament, whole and entire, with all their parts, as enumerated in the decree of the same Council (Trent) and in the ancient Latin Vulgate, are to be received as sacred and canonical, not because, having been composed by human industry, they were afterwards approved by her authority; nor only because they contained revelation without error; but because, having been written under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, they have God for their author.' Hence, because the Holy Ghost employed men as His instruments, we cannot therefore say that it was these inspired instruments who, perchance, have fallen into error, and not the primary Author. For, by supernatural power, He so moved and impelled them to write—He was so present to them—that the things which He ordered, and those only, they first, rightly understood, then willed faithfully to write down, and finally expressed in apt words and with infallible truth. Otherwise, it could not be said that He was the Author of the entire Scripture."

The Old Testament Canon includes all the inspired writings under the Old Dispensation, whether written in the current language of the Jews (Hebrew or Aramaic), or in Greek. For the benefit of Greek-speaking Jews in Egypt the books of the Old Testament in Hebrew were gradually translated into Greek and became known as the Septuagint. After the destruction of Jerusalem, in a Council held at Jamnia (circa 98) it was decided that all books not written in the sacred tongue (or about which there was some doubt due to the loss of the originals), and books written outside the holy precincts of Palestine were excluded from the Canon of the Jews, thus bringing into existence the present-day Jewish Canon. The motivating force behind this decision was the party spirit of the Jews.

The terms "protocanonical" and "deuterocanonical," though not strictly correct, are applied to the books acknowledged, respectively, by the Jewish Canon of today, and the Jewish Canon of the Septuagint handed down by Christ and the Apostles to the Church.

Indeed the Council of Trent in its list of canonical and inspired writings lists all the books that were acknowledged by all Jews the world over, especially in Palestine and Egypt, in the second century before Christ. The Septuagint Greek version—the version referred to by Christ and His Apostles—testifies to this fact.

The New Testament Canon contains the collection of inspired Apostolic writings. In making the selection for this Canon the Church carefully guarded against accepting uninspired works, apocryphal and heretical writings and forgeries.

The Old Testament consists of: twenty-one Historical Books, relating to the history of the early ages of the world, or to that of the Jewish nation; seven Moral Books, consisting of prayers and holy maxims; and eighteen Books of Prophecies.

The Historical Books are: the Pentateuch, or five Books of Moses, viz., Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy; the Book of Josue; the Book of Judges; the Book of Ruth; the four Books of Kings; the two Books of Chronicles or of Paralipomenon; the Book of Esdras; the Book of Nehemias; the Book of Tobias; the Book of Judith; the Book of Esther; and the two Books of Machabees.

The Moral Books are: the Book of Job, the Psalms, the Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, the Canticle of Canticles, the Book of Wisdom, and Ecclesiasticus.

The Books of Prophecies are those of Isaias, Jeremias (including Lamentations), Baruch, Ezechiel, Daniel, Osee, Joel, Amos, Abdias, Jonas, Micheas, Nahum, Habacuc, Sophonias, Aggeus, Zacharias, and Malachy.

The New Testament consists of: the four Gospels, or histories of the life of Our Saviour, by Sts. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; the Acts of the Apostles, by St. Luke; the fourteen Epistles of St. Paul, viz., one to the Romans, two to the Corinthians, one to the Galatians, one to the Ephesians, one to the Philippians, one to the Colossians, two to the Thessalonians, two to Timothy, one to Titus, one to Philemon, and one to the Hebrews; one Epistle of St. James; two Epistles of St. Peter; three Epistles of St. John; one Epistle of St. Jude; the Book of the Apocalypse.

Books of the Bible

The Bible books are seventy-three,
Whose names in order you now may see.

Forty and six to the Old are given
Leaving the New but twenty-seven.
Genesis opens the list divine,
Exodus follows the next in line;
Leviticus and Numbers then arrive,
Deuteronomy fills the mystic five.
Josue and Judges bring Ruth to the fore

To glean the wheat escaping the mower.

Four Books of Kings pass quickly on,

Then the two called Paralipomenon.
Now two from Esdras the future probe,

For Tobias, Judith, Esther and Job.
Psalms and Proverbs with numbers
please,

While good men revel in Ecclesi-astes;

Canticle of Canticles — wondrous song,

Sweet with music, lovely and long.

Next Wisdom opens her lips so sage,

Ecclesiasticus lends a learned page.

Isaias, the prophet, draws the veil,

Jeremias weeps, Lamentations wail.

Baruch and Ezechiel both foretell,

Daniel and Osee give place to Joel.

Amos greets Abdias, Jonas sets sail,

To be rudely swallowed by a whale.

Micheas and Nahum things hidden explain.

Habacuc, Sophonias take up the refrain.

When Aggeus spoke the temple
rose,

Zacharias and Malachias the prophets close.

The books of the Old will end, if you please,

With two that are known as Ma-chabees.

From Old to New we hasten on —
To Matthew, Mark, to Luke and John.

The Gospels o'er, take up the Acts,
A book replete with mighty facts.
Fourteen Epistles, Paul indites:

To his dear Romans first he writes,
Two to the Corinthians were sent,
One to Galatia, one to Ephesus went.

Philippians and Colossians get advice:

Thessalonians hear from him but twice;

To Timothy a twain with lots of love,

To Titus wisdom from above.

Philemon and Hebrews his pen engage,

Till his hand grows weary, weak with age.

With lifeless finger and sightless eye,

'Twere hard to labor, sweet to die.

From James a letter in language quaint,

From Peter two that breathe the saint,

Three from the well-beloved John.

While Jude comes last with only one.

On eagle wings we take our flight

To the fountain of eternal light,

Where John with angels humbly
sips

The wonders of the Apocalypse.
— Rt. Rev. Msgr. Thos. S. Duggan.

Number of Books in Bible

An easy way to remember the number of Books in the Bible is the following: Our Lord had 72 disciples. This is also the total number of Books in the Old and New Testament. If this number is reversed, we have 27, or the number of books in the New Testament. Subtract this number from the total and the remainder is the number of Books of the Old Testament, if we include the Book of Baruch with that of Jeremias.

Protestantism and the Bible

The difference between the Catholic and Protestant Bible arises from a difference in authority. The Catholic Church possesses the divinely appointed authority to declare which of the Sacred Writings are inspired and which are only human documents. Protestantism on the contrary which has as a fundamental principle, on this point, the right to private interpretation, thereby eliminates any recognized authoritative teaching body. Lacking such a teaching body there can be no question of its having a canon in the strict sense of the term.

The Protestants rejecting Tradition and receiving only the Scriptures, nevertheless had to rely on the Church for the list of books which they did select. In the beginning the Reformers more or less adhered to this canon of the Church. But as private interpretation was their norm, differences were inevitable. The books rejected, in general, were, in the Old Testament: Tobias, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch, the two books of Machabees, and portions of Esther and Daniel; in the New Testament: the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of St. James, the second Epistle of St. Peter, the second and third Epistles of St. John, the Epistle of St. Jude and the Apocalypse.

When these books were called into question by the Reformation the Council of Trent on April 8, 1546, by a solemn decree drew up an official list of the books of the Old and New Testaments. This list was based on the tradition of the Church and contained exactly the same books as were given by Pope Damasus in a decretal of the year 374 by a synod held in Africa in 393, during the lifetime of St. Augustine; and by Pope Innocent I, in a letter to the Bishop of Toulouse, in 405. The Vatican Council reaffirmed this on April 24, 1870.

Moreover, with regard to the New Testament, the Church was already in existence before one book of the New Testament was written. Hence, she, and she alone, in virtue of the authority conferred on her by Christ, could determine which books were inspired, and which were not. This the Church has done.

With reference to the difference in wording and the use of names between the Catholic and the Protestant Bible this is due to the craze of the Protestant Reformers to go back to the Hebrew texts, instead of using the Greek Septuagint translation.

The American Revision of the New Testament

To meet the danger presented by English versions of the Bible which altered the true meaning of the Scriptures, the Rheims version of the New Testament was printed at Rheims in 1582. This work of exiled English priests and educators remained the standard English version for Catholic use for 168 years. However, the English language had undergone many changes during these years and there was a pressing need for an English version of the Bible more in keeping with the time.

Recognizing this need, Bishop Challoner, Vicar Apostolic of the London District, undertook the task, and in 1750 presented a new version of the entire Bible in English. Up to the present we have continued to use editions of the English Bible which are, in language and substance, the text that Bishop Challoner gave us 193 years ago. Since that time many of the words and forms of that venerable text have become obsolete, while long and labored sentences and an outmoded method of punctuation often obscure the original message of the Scriptures. The need of a better vernacular version was recognized by the First Provincial Council of Baltimore in 1829 and again in 1858 by the Ninth Provincial Council of Baltimore. However, until recent times, the Church in America has been too much occupied with other concerns and not sufficiently equipped to undertake the task.

Now in a better position, the Church in America in 1941 presented a newly revised English version as the answer to this need. It was prepared under the supervision of the Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. It is the fruit of five years of labor on the part of some twenty-seven Catholic biblical scholars employing principles approved by the Biblical Commission at Rome. The American revision enjoys, therefore, the authority and scholarship becoming an improved Catholic version of the New Testament in English.

While embodying many improvements, this work of American biblical scholars is not a new version but a revision of the Challoner-Rheims version based upon the Latin Vulgate. While the Clementine edition of the Vulgate served as the main source, the readings of this edition have been improved by recourse to more ancient texts of the Vulgate. Though adhering to the Latin text, the Semitic and Greek peculiarities and idioms reflected in that text have been rendered in a sense that is native to them.

As an aid to reading and understanding the New Testament, the old verse form and paragraphing have been abandoned, and headings that show the main divisions of the books with marginal notes describing their contents have been introduced. The new text is arranged with one column to a page and in paragraphs instead of the former verse form. Verse and chapter enumerations have been placed in the margin.

It is hoped that the new revision, while primarily made for study and exposition, may eventually be adopted for the liturgical use of the Church in this country.

Indulgence for Reading the Bible

An indulgence of 300 days is granted to all the faithful who read the Holy Gospels at least a quarter of an hour. A plenary indulgence under the usual conditions is granted once a month for the daily reading (Leo XIII, Dec. 13, 1888).

Prayer before Reading the Holy Scriptures

O, King of Glory, Lord of Hosts, who didst triumphantly ascend the heavens, leave us not as orphans, but send us the Promised of the Father, the Spirit of Truth.

We implore Thee, O Lord, that the Consoler Who proceedeth from Thee, will enlighten our souls and infuse into them all truth, as Thy Son hath promised.

O God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, vouchsafe to grant us, according to the riches of Thy glory, that Christ by faith may dwell in our hearts, which rooted and grounded in charity, may acknowledge the love of Christ, surpassing all knowledge. Through the same Christ our Lord. Amen. (Eph., iii, xiv, xvii, xix.)

Prayer after Reading the Holy Scriptures
(Prayer of St. Bede the Venerable; died 735.)

Let me not, O Lord, be puffed up with worldly wisdom, which passes away, but grant me that love which never abates, that I may not choose to know anything among men but Jesus, and Him crucified. (I Cor., xiii, 8; ii, 2.)

I beg Thee, dear Jesus, that he upon whom Thou hast graciously bestowed the sweet savor of the words of Thy Knowledge, may also possess Thee, Fount of all Wisdom, and shine forever before Thy countenance. Amen.

Biblical Calendar

The year was divided into twelve months, the names of which are:

Abib or Nisan (April)	Tishri or Ethanin (October)
Ijar (May)	Marhhescevan (November)
Sivan (June)	Chisleu (December)
Thammuz (July)	Tebeth (January)
Ab (August)	Sheba (February)
Elul (September)	Adar (March)
Veadar—intercalary month—every three years.

The month was divided into weeks of seven days, and the last day of each week was called the Sabbath.

Each day was divided into watches or hours corresponding to night and daytime.

Biblical Coins

Before the Babylonian exile there is no trace of money but only of weights. Gold and silver were weighed in the balance by means of little stones, models and examples of which were preserved in the Tabernacle (Exodus, xxx, 13). After the exile there is frequent mention of Hebrew coins. Pagan coins, too, were used.

Light shekel, silver .....40 cents	Farthing (Matt., v, 26).....½ cent
Heavy shekel, silver .....80 cents	Farthing (Matt., x, 29) .....1 cent
Shekel, gold .....$12.87	Penny (Matt., xviii, 28) ...17 cents
Manah, silver (Mna) .....$20.24	Groat (Luke, xv, 8) .....17 cents
Manah, gold (Mna) .....$323.96	Drachma .....17 cents
Talent, silver .....$1,215	Didrachma (Matt., xvii, 23) .30 cents
Talent, gold .....$19,440	Tribute Money (Matt., xvii, 24)
Stater (or Sicle) .....51 cents	.....32 cents
Gerah or Obol.....2½ cents	Piece of Silver (Matt., xxvi, 15)

TRADITION

The Bible is silent or at least is not clear on a number of matters such as the baptism of infants and the exact number of the sacraments, concerning which the Church follows tradition.

Tradition consists of the truths of the Catholic Faith revealed by Jesus Christ to His apostles and handed down to us through the teaching of the Church and the writings of the holy fathers and doctors.

The Apostolic Fathers are Christian writers of the first and second centuries who are known or who are considered to have had personal relations with the Apostles and whose writings echo genuine Apostolic teaching. Chief in importance are: St. Clement (58-97), Bishop of Rome and third successor of St. Peter in the Papacy; St. Ignatius (50-98), Bishop of Antioch and second successor of St. Peter in that see, reputed to be a disciple of St. John; St. Polycarp (69-155), Bishop of Smyrna and a disciple of St. John. The author of the Didache and the author of the Epistle of Barnabas are also numbered among the Apostolic Fathers.

The Fathers of the Church are those "who stood at the cradle of the infant Church." They were writers who lived in the first eight centuries after the birth of Christ, who led saintly lives, propagated Christian doctrines, and suppressed heresy. The unanimous acceptance of a doctrine by the Fathers makes it an article of faith; the unanimous rejection brands it a heresy. The Church recognizes the Fathers as her mouthpieces. To be numbered among the Fathers, four qualities are required of a writer. First, he must have lived when the Church was in her youth; hence St. Gregory the Great who died about 604 is regarded as the last Father of the West, and St. John Damascene who died about 754 is considered as the last Father of the East. Second, he must have led a saintly life. Third, his writings must not only be free from error, but must excel in the explanation and defense of Catholic doctrines. Fourth, the writings must bear the seal of the Church's approval. Among the Fathers of the Church not acclaimed as Doctors (the list of Doctors including no martyrs) are: St. Justin Martyr (100-165), a layman and a Christian apologist of Asia Minor and Rome; St. Irenaeus (130-200), Bishop of Lyons, who opposed Gnosticism; and St. Cyprian (200-258), Bishop of Carthage, who opposed Novatianism.

The Doctors of the Church include many Fathers of the Church. They are ecclesiastical writers of eminent learning, and a high degree of sanctity, who have received this title because of the great advantage the whole Church has derived from their doctrine. Their writings are not necessarily entirely free from error. The required conditions before a man can be proclaimed a Doctor of the Church are: first, eminent learning; second, a high degree of sanctity; and third, proclamation by the Church. They are, in chronological order, as follows.

Name	Office	Work	Dates
St. Hilary.....	Bishop of Poitiers.....	Opposed Arianism .....	300- 368

EVERY CHRISTIAN MUST BELIEVE:

1. That there is one God, a pure spirit, Maker of heaven and earth, without beginning or end, omnipresent, knowing and seeing all, omnipotent, infinite in perfection.

2. That there are three persons in God, equal, and of the same substance: the Father, the Son, born of the Father, and the Holy Ghost proceeding eternally from the Father and the Son, all three eternal in wisdom and power, and all three the same Lord and the same God.

3. That God created the angels to be with Him forever, that some of them fell and became devils; that God created Adam and Eve, the first parents, placed them in Paradise, wherefrom they were justly banished for eating the forbidden fruit; therefore we are born in sin and would have been lost had not God sent us a Saviour.

4. That the Saviour is Jesus Christ, the Son of God, equal to the Father in all things; perfect Man with a body and soul like ours.

5. That Christ was conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary, by the power of the Holy Ghost, without any man for His father; that she remained a pure virgin; that during His life He founded the Christian religion and offered Himself a sacrifice for the sins of the world by dying on the cross to gain mercy, grace, and salvation for us.

6. That after His death and burial He rose to life on the third day, manifested Himself to His disciples for forty days; ascended into heaven, where He continually intercedes for us; whence He sent down the Holy Ghost upon His Apostles to guide them and their successors in truth.

7. That He is the head of the Catholic or Universal Church, His Spirit acting as its director; that He founded the Church on a rock; that it is always victorious against the powers of death and hell; that it is always One because its members profess one faith, one communion, under one pastor, the successor of St. Peter to whom Christ committed His whole flock; that it is always Holy because it teaches a holy life; that it is Catholic because it has subsisted in all ages, and has taught all nations the truth; that it is Apostolic because it derives doctrines, mission, and succession from the Apostles.

8. That the Scriptures, Old and New Testaments, were deposited by the Apostles with the Church, who is the guardian and protector, interpreter, and judge of all controversies concerning them; as interpreted, these Scriptures, with the teaching of the Church founded on Tradition, must be received by all as the practice and rule of faith.

9. That Christ instituted seven sacraments: Baptism, Confirmation, Holy Eucharist, Penance, Extreme Unction, Holy Orders, Matrimony.

10. That Christ also instituted the sacrifice of His Body and Blood as a remembrance of His death and Passion in the Mass, where every day He is immolated upon the altar, being Himself both priest and victim; that we are united with Him, adore Him, give Him thanks, obtain His grace and pardon in the Mass.

11. That in the Church there is a communion of saints by means of which we communicate with the holy ones in heaven, give thanks to God for His gift to them and beg a share in their prayers; that we communicate with the faithful in purgatory by offering prayers, alms and sacrifice to God for them.

12. That without divine grace we cannot make even one step toward heaven; that all our merits are the gifts of God; that Christ died for all men; that God is not the author of sin; that His grace does not take away our free will.

13. That Christ will come from heaven on the last day to judge us all; that the dead, good and bad, shall rise from their graves to be judged according to their works; that the good shall go to heaven, body and soul, to be happy for all eternity; that the wicked shall be condemned, body and soul, to the everlasting torments of hell.

EVERY CHRISTIAN MUST DO THE FOLLOWING THINGS:

1. Worship God by faith, in humbly adoring and embracing all truths which God has taught, however obscure and incomprehensible they may appear to us; by hope, in honoring the infinite power, goodness and mercy of God, and the truth of His promises, by the expectation of mercy, grace and salvation through the merits of Christ; by charity, in loving God wholeheartedly for His own sake, and neighbors for God's sake; by the virtues of religion, namely, adoration, praise, thanksgiving, oblation, sacrifice and prayer, daily if possible. Avoid all idolatry, false religion and superstition, including fortune-telling, witchcraft, charms, spells, dreams, observation of omens, all of which are heathenish, contrary to the dependence of the Christian soul on God.

2. Reverence the name of God and His truth by the observance of all lawful oaths and vows, by avoiding all false, rash, unjust, or blasphemous oaths and curses.

3. Dedicate some notable part of his time to divine service, consecrate those days God has ordered to be kept holy.

4. Love, reverence, and obey parents and lawful superiors, spiritual and temporal; observe the laws of the Church and State, care for children and others under his care in both their souls and bodies.

5. Abstain from all injuries to his neighbor's person, by murder or other violence; from all hatred, envy, and desire of revenge; from spiritual murder by drawing him into sin by words, actions, or bad example.

6. Abstain from adultery, uncleanness of thought, word and action.

7. Avoid stealing, cheating, or wronging his neighbor's goods and possessions; give everyone his own, pay debts, make restitution for damages he has caused.

8. Avoid wronging his neighbor in character or good name, by detraction or rash judgment, or by dishonoring him with reproaches or affronts, or by robbing him of peace of mind by scoffs and contempt, or by carrying stories backward and forward, thus robbing him of his friends. Restitution or satisfaction for any wrongs done to him must be made.

9. Refrain from all desires of lust with regard to a neighbor's wife.

10. Resist all irregular desires for the goods of a neighbor, whatever they may be, and avoid even internal, unjust actions against him.

THE SACRAMENTS OF THE CHURCH

The Catholic Church teaches that there are but seven sacraments, instituted by Jesus Christ Himself. They are the ordinary channels or means of grace for those properly disposed to receive them. The sacraments of Baptism, Confirmation and Holy Orders can be received only once because they imprint a character or indelible mark on the soul. To confer a sacrament validly, that is, to produce the effects intended by Christ, the one administering it, besides having the necessary power, must intend to do what the Church wishes. The state of grace is not a requirement for validity.

Baptism — By this sacrament we are made Christians, children of God and heirs of heaven. It is absolutely necessary for salvation. No other sacrament can be received before its reception. It is administered by means of water. This is baptism strictly so-called. If it cannot be had, then baptism of blood or baptism of desire can suffice. Its effects are the removal of the stain of original sin, the stain of actual sin and the remission of the punishment due to sin. It can be validly received by infants.

The ordinary minister of baptism is a priest; in case of necessity, anyone can baptize by using the formula: "I baptize thee in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

Confirmation — By this sacrament we become strong and perfect Christians. It increases grace and strengthens one in the Catholic Faith, and cannot be neglected without grave sin.

The bishop is the ordinary minister of confirmation.

Holy Eucharist—This sacrament is the real, true and substantial Presence of the Body and Blood, Soul and Divinity of Jesus Christ under the appearance of bread and wine. At the Consecration during the Mass the substance of bread and wine is changed into the Body and Blood of Christ. The Holy Eucharist is the true food of the soul. It helps one to avoid mortal sin and to grow in virtue by conferring and increasing grace in the one who receives it worthily. The Holy Eucharist need not be received under two species except by the priest in the Mass.

The priest is the ordinary minister of this sacrament.

Penance—This sacrament was instituted by Christ for the purpose of forgiving sins committed after baptism. All validly ordained priests have the power to forgive sins, a power had in virtue of the words: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them; and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained" (John, xx, 22-23). To exercise this power, however, the permission of the proper authorities must be had. In case of necessity, this may be presumed.

When receiving this sacrament the penitent is his own accuser and the priest acts as judge, giving a penance in proportion to the gravity of the sins. To obtain absolution it is necessary that a person be truly sorry for his sins, make them known to the confessor and make due satisfaction, that is, perform the penance imposed on him by the priest. The penitent must confess all mortal sins which he remembers and which have not yet been forgiven. Sorrow for sins can be perfect or imperfect: perfect, which arises because the Supreme Good, God, has been wronged; imperfect, which comes from other motives, as hatred of sin, fear of hell, loss of heaven. This sacrament is absolutely necessary for one who has fallen into mortal sin after baptism. An act of perfect contrition outside confession reconciles the sinner to God but still he must have the desire to confess his mortal sins.

The minister of this sacrament is the priest.

Extreme Unction—This is a sacrament instituted by Christ through which those in danger of death from bodily illness or infirmity are strengthened by grace for the good of the soul and often of the body, by the anointing with holy oil and the prayers of the priest. It remits all sin, if the sick person has remained in the state of sin inculpably and has at least attrition; and destroys the remains of sin.

Extreme Unction can be administered validly only by a priest.

Holy Orders—Instituted by Christ, this sacrament confers on a man grace and spiritual powers, enabling him to perform validly and worthily the sacred and ecclesiastical functions. The three major orders are subdiaconate, diaconate and priesthood. In virtue of his ordination a priest has the power to consecrate the Body and Blood of Christ and to forgive sins.

The ordinary minister of Orders is a consecrated bishop.

Matrimony—This sacrament, instituted by Christ, gives grace to sanctify the legitimate union of man and woman, to help them beget children properly and educate them seriously. Marriage is indissoluble. The Church alone has the power to constitute marriage impediments and to grant separations, in which case neither party is free to marry again while the other lives. Clerics in major orders and religious with a solemn vow of chastity cannot marry validly.

The Church teaches that the persons themselves are the ministers of this sacrament. For Catholics the presence of the priest is required for validity; he is the minister of the ceremonies.

rites and ceremonies of holy eucharist

(It is proposed to give in the Almanac over a period of years the rites and ceremonies for the administration of the seven sacraments. This is the third installment. See the 1941 Almanac for the rites and ceremonies of Baptism, and the 1942 Almanac for those of Confirmation.)

Holy Eucharist is that sacrament of the New Law, which was instituted by Christ for the spiritual refreshment of our souls, and in which the Body and Blood of Christ under the appearance of bread and wine are present truly, really and substantially. The conversion of the bread and wine into the Sacred Species, which is called Transubstantiation, takes place during the Consecration of the Mass. By the act of consecration are fulfilled the words of Christ, "And the bread that I will give is My flesh for the life of the world" (John 6:52). Christ has commanded us to eat this Sacred Bread, for He says, "Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink His blood, you shall not have life in you."

Catholics ordinarily receive Holy Communion at Mass. They may, however, receive Holy Communion outside of Mass, and in their own homes when sick. When Holy Communion is administered to those who are at the point of death it is referred to as Holy Viaticum, in which case the prayers of the ceremony differ slightly from those which are ordinarily prescribed.

Minister—The ordinary minister of the sacrament of Holy Eucharist is the priest. The extraordinary minister is the deacon, who must, however, have the permission of the bishop or pastor to exercise this ministry.

Rite: Outside of Mass—The priest, vested with surplice and stole, whose color is white or the color of the day, approaches the altar preceded by the server. Having ascended the altar steps, the priest unfolds the corporal, opens the tabernacle, and taking out the ciborium which contains the Consecrated Particles, places it upon the corporal, uncovers it and genuflects. The server then says the Confiteor. Again genuflecting, the priest, withdrawing slightly toward the Gospel side of the altar, turns toward the people and recites the prayers:

V. "May almighty God have mercy upon you, forgive you your sins, and bring you to life everlasting."

R. "Amen."

V. "May the almighty and merciful Lord grant you pardon, absolution and remission of all your sins."

R. "Amen."

Upon the completion of these prayers the priest, again facing the Blessed Sacrament, genuflects. He now takes the ciborium with his left hand and with his right he lifts up one of the Sacred Hosts, and, turning toward the communicants, says:

"Behold the Lamb of God, behold Him Who taketh away the sins of the world."

The priest then says three times:

"Lord, I am not worthy that Thou shouldst enter under my roof; say but the word and my soul shall be healed."

When finished, the priest approaches those who are about to receive, starting on the Epistle side. As the priest withdraws each Host he makes with it the sign of the cross, and as he places the Sacred Species upon the tongue of the recipient he says:

After all have received, the priest returns to the altar, places the ciborium upon the corporal and genuflects. He then removes any fragments which may be clinging to his hands, or to the paten, replaces the ciborium in the tabernacle, genuflects and locks the tabernacle. While thus engaged and before finishing, the priest says these prayers:

"O sacred banquet, in which Christ is received, the memory of His Passion renewed, the mind filled with grace, and a pledge of future glory given unto us." (During Paschal time "Alleluia" is added.)

V. "Thou didst give them bread from heaven. (Alleluia.)"

R. "Containing in itself all sweetness. (Alleluia.)"

"Let us pray

"O God, who in this wondrous sacrament hast left unto us a memorial of Thy Passion: grant us, we beseech Thee, so to venerate the sacred mysteries of Thy Body and Blood, that we may ever feel within us the fruit of Thy redemption. Who livest and reignest with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost, God, world without end."

This latter oration, however, is replaced, during the Paschal season, by the following:

"Pour forth upon us, O Lord, the spirit of Thy love, that, by Thy loving kindness, Thou mayest make to be of one mind those whom Thou hast fed with the Paschal sacraments. Through our Lord, Jesus Christ, Thy Son, Who livest and reignest with Thee in the unity of the same Holy Spirit, God, world without end."

R. "Amen."

When the priest has finished all the actions mentioned above he turns toward the people, and, making the Sign of the Cross over them, he pronounces this blessing:

"The blessing of God almighty, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, descend upon you and abide forever."

R. "Amen."

Turning back toward the altar the priest refolds the corporal and then departs, preceded, as before, by the server.

Rite: For the Sick, and Viaticum
—The rites for these two ceremonies are, in general, the same, and, ordinarily, all that is prescribed should be observed. Since, however, Viaticum is especially for those at the point of death it is permitted, and sometimes required, that many of the prescribed prayers be omitted in order that the one dying can comply with the precept and be spiritually strengthened on his journey into eternity. Hence, Viaticum can be administered at any hour of the day or night, regardless of the fact that that person may have eaten after midnight. When time allows, the full ceremony should be carried out as follows:

The priest, wearing the stole, approaches the altar upon which two candles have been lighted. Unfolding the corporal and opening the tabernacle, the priest genuflects, and withdrawing the Consecrated Hosts, he places as many as will be needed into a small vessel called the pyx. He then purifies his hands, genuflects and closes the tabernacle. The priest now loops the cord attached to the pyx around his neck, places the pyx next to his breast, and, after folding the corporal, departs.

Upon his entrance into the sick room the priest says:

V. "Peace be to this house."

R. "And to all who dwell therein."

The priest, approaching the table which has been properly prepared for the occasion (see Sick Calls), unfolds the corporal, places the pyx upon it, and genuflects. Following this, he sprinkles the room and the sick person with holy water, and says:

Antiphon: "Thou shalt sprinkle me with hyssop, O Lord, and I shall be cleansed: Thou shalt wash me, and I shall be made whiter than snow."

Psalm: "Have mercy on me, O God, according to Thy great mercy."

V. "Glory be to the Father," etc.

Repeating the antiphon, the priest continues with the following versicles, responses and oration:

V. "Our help is in the name of the Lord."

R. "Who hath made heaven and earth."

V. "O Lord, hear my prayer."

R. "And let my cry come unto Thee."

V. "The Lord be with you."

R. "And with thy spirit."

"Let us pray

"Hear us, O holy Lord, almighty Father, eternal God; and vouchsafe to send Thy holy angel from heaven, to guard, cherish, protect, visit and defend all that are assembled in this house. Through Christ our Lord."

R. "Amen."

At this juncture the priest hears the confession of the patient if necessary. If, however, the sick person is already in the state of grace, and able to do so, he says the Confiteor. Another person may and should do this if the patient is too weak to do so. At its end, the priest turns toward the one about to receive the Blessed Sacrament and imparts the absolution:

"May almighty God have mercy upon you," etc.

"May the almighty and merciful Lord grant you pardon," etc.

Then, as in Communion outside Mass, he genuflects, and, holding the Consecrated Host in his fingers, he addresses the one to receive with the words:

"Behold the Lamb of God," etc.

Following this there is said three times:

"Lord, I am not worthy," etc.

This the sick person should repeat at least once.

The sacrament is now administered as the priest says:

"May the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ," etc.

If, however, the Sacrament is conferred as Viaticum, the latter prayer is changed to:

"Receive, brother (or sister), the Viaticum of our Lord Jesus Christ, that He may preserve thee from the malignant enemy, and bring thee to life everlasting. Amen."

The priest, if he finds death imminent, may omit all the prayers except the absolution as given above and the prayer, "Receive, brother," etc. In extreme necessity, the latter alone suffices.

After administering the Sacrament the priest returns to the table where he purifies his fingers. and if necessary, the pyx. He then prays:

V. "The Lord be with you."

R. "And with thy spirit."

"Let us pray

"O holy Lord, almighty Father, eternal God, we earnestly beseech thee, that the most sacred body of our Lord Jesus Christ Thy Son, which our brother (or sister) hath now received, may be to him (or her) an eternal remedy, both of body and soul: who liveth and reigneth with Thee, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, God forever and ever. Amen."

If the priest has been carrying more than one Host he now makes the Sign of the Cross over the sick person with the receptacle containing the Sacred Species, saying nothing. If no Host remains the priest makes with his hand the Sign of the Cross over the sick person as he utters the blessing:

"The blessing of God almighty," etc.

When Holy Communion is distributed to many sick persons in the same building, but in different rooms, as, for example, in a hospital, all the prayers up to the absolution following the Confiteor are said in the plural number at the bedside of the first one visited. At the bed of each individual the priest imparts the absolution in the singular number, and says but once the prayer:

"Lord, I am not worthy," etc.

At the last bedside the priest says all the prayers which follow the administration of the Sacrament, using again the plural number. Here, too, he raises the Blessed Sacrament in silent benediction if any of the Sacred Species remain, or bestows the blessing if all have been consumed.

An Explanation of the Catholic Faith

(A unified explanation of the Faith of the Catholic Church is being given in a four-year cycle. It is a more detailed treatment than that contained in the section "The Doctrines of the Church," and is meant to integrate and co-ordinate the truths taught there. This is the third of four installments.)

PART IV THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS (Continued)

The previous installment has shown what Christ affirmed on God, creation, the angels and man; and what He taught as to man's duties towards his Creator, his neighbor, society and himself.

What Jesus Revealed

A. The Holy Trinity

There is but one God, one Supreme Being; but there are at the same time three Divine Persons in God: Father, Son and Holy Spirit. This truth cannot be explained adequately, because it is a mystery, the mystery of the Holy Trinity. A theological mystery, properly so-called, is a truth which, while not opposed to reason, cannot be discovered by unaided human reason nor understood in its essence even after its existence has been revealed.

The Old Testament, while it does not expressly teach this mystery, nevertheless does allude to it. Isaiah tells us that the Seraphim in heaven cry: "Holy, holy, holy, the Lord God of hosts" (Is. 6, 3); and the Jewish priests repeated the name of God three times when they blessed the people in their ritual (cf. Num. 6, 23-26). A more positive and explicit revelation of the mystery could be given only by God. This was indeed given by Christ. "No one has at any time seen God. The Only-begotten Son, Who is in the bosom of the Father, He has revealed Him" (John 1, 18). "All things have been delivered to Me by My Father; and no one knows the Son except the Father; nor does anyone know the Father except the Son, and him to whom the Son chooses to reveal Him" (Matt. 11, 27). Christ revealed the existence of the Trinity when He said to His Apostles before His ascension: "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" (Matt. 28, 19).

The mystery of the Holy Trinity is not repugnant to reason, for in it no contradiction is introduced. It does not claim that there are at the same time three Persons and only one Person, or one nature which is also three natures; but it teaches that there is one nature and three Persons. After the mystery has been revealed, we can reason that there is some distinction between nature and person. We find human nature only when we find a person; for that reason we come to think that the two must always be associated, and we use the two notions almost interchangeably. Yet reflection shows that the nature is the principle by which the individual acts, whereas the person is principle which acts and to which all the activities are attributed. This distinction is perhaps more mental than real, but the mere fact that it can even be alluded to shows that there is, even in human beings, a suggestion of the distinction between the divine nature and the Three Divine Persons which is a truth of revelation.

The Three Divine Persons have only one nature, the nature of God. When we say that the three Divine Persons have the one nature, we speak in a different manner than when we say the same thing of men; with God the unity is numerical, while with men it is a unity of kind. All three enjoying this numerically one nature, each divine Person is therefore God.

The Father is God. On the day of His Resurrection, Our Lord said to Mary Magdalen: "Do not touch me, for I have not yet ascended to My Father; but go to My brethren and say to them, 'I ascend to My Father and your Father, to My God and your God'" (John 20, 17). He uses the words "Father" and "God" as synonyms.

The Son is God. In the Gospel according to St. John we read: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God; and the Word was God.... And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us. And we saw His glory—glory as of the Only-begotten of the Father—full of grace and of truth" (John 1, 1, 14). St. John, after showing a distinction of Persons ("the Word was with God"), says this Word was God. He tells us that the Word was made flesh or became man; this is Christ. Christ Himself claims to be the Son of God the Father, and equal to Him: "I and the Father are one" (John 10, 30).

B. The Incarnation

The Son of God, the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity, by assuming human nature, became man. This man, the God-man, is Jesus Christ. By the miraculous intervention of the Holy Spirit, He was conceived in the womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary, was born an infant, and grew through natural stages to manhood.

Jesus Christ is true God. He is also true and complete man, having a perfect human body and a perfect human soul with an intellect and will and sentient faculties. These two complete natures, namely the divine and human natures, are united in the one Person of the Word. The divine nature was not lost, neither was the assumed human nature destroyed or

The Holy Spirit is God. St. Peter, speaking to Ananias said: "Ananias, why has Satan tempted thy heart, that thou shouldst lie to the Holy Spirit and by fraud keep back part of the price of the land? ... Thou hast not lied to men, but to God" (Acts 5, 3-4). The Holy Spirit is hereby shown to be God.

The three divine Persons are distinct from one another. Although each of the three Persons is God, they are not for that reason all the same Person. It is only in substance or nature that they must be one; as Persons, they are separate and distinct. The Father begets the Son; the Father is distinct from the Son for the reason that the Person begetting and the Person begotten cannot be identical. The Holy Spirit proceeds from both the Father and the Son; He is distinct from them for the reason that no one can proceed from himself. The generation of the Son and the procession of the Holy Spirit are eternal. The Son and the Holy Spirit did not begin to exist at any given time, but have existed forever with the Father because the Son is forever begotten and the Holy Spirit is forever proceeding.

absorbed by the Divinity or mixed with it so as to lose its own identity. The humanity and Divinity remain distinct, but nevertheless united in one Person. There are not two persons in Christ, one human and the other divine. By assuming human nature, the Son of God did not join Himself to a human person, but only to a human nature which was begotten at the very moment of His conception. Christ is only one person, the Son of God, the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity.

The union of the divine and human natures in the one Person of Christ is called "the Hypostatic Union" (from the Greek word hypostasis, which is used in philosophy as a technical term for person). The Hypostatic Union is defined as the singular and marvelous union of divine nature and human nature in the one Person of the Word, resulting in Jesus Christ. It is more than an accidental union, such as, for example, exists in two parts of a machine, or in the mixture of two liquids. It is more than a moral union, such as exists between members of an association. It is greater than the union between God and man effected through grace. It is a substantial union of a unique kind. Ordinary substantial unions are, for example, chemical combinations, or the union of body and soul in the formation of man. But in such unions, the one substance is united directly to the other. In the Hypostatic Union, however, the two substances, namely the divine and human natures, are united in and through the Person.

Christ is God and man. St. John devoted his Gospel to proving the Divinity of Jesus and His mission. In the prologue of that Gospel he calls Jesus by the name "Word," and teaches His eternity and Divinity in the words: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God; and the Word was God." Another proof of the Divinity of Jesus is had from the words of the Angel in announcing His conception to Mary. The Angel called the Son that Mary was to bear the Son of the Most High: "And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb and shalt bring forth a son. . . . He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High" (Luke 1, 31-32). God the Father testified to the Divinity of His Son when Christ, physically present in His manhood, was baptized in the Jordan. As Christ came up from the water, the heavens opened and the Father said: "This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased" (Matt. 3, 17). Again on the occasion of the Transfiguration on the mountain, the Father spoke out of a cloud in the same way: "This is My beloved Son, in Whom I am well pleased; hear Him" (Matt. 17, 5). St. Paul says of Christ in his Epistle to the Philippians (2, 6-8) that "though He was by nature God, He did not consider being equal to God a thing to be clung to, but emptied Himself, taking the nature of a slave and being made like unto men."

Even while appearing in His humanity, our Lord Himself testified to His Divinity, as, for instance when He was brought before the Jewish Sanhedrin. "The high priest said to Him, 'I adjure Thee by the living God that Thou tell us whether Thou art the Christ, the Son of God.' Jesus said to him, 'Thou hast said it. Nevertheless, I say to you, hereafter you shall see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of the Power and coming upon the clouds of heaven'" (Matt. 26, 63-64). The high priest clearly understood that Jesus called Himself God, for he immediately accused Him of blasphemy. On another occasion, speaking of Himself as God, Christ said: "I and the Father are one" (John 10, 30); while speaking of Himself as man He said: "The Father is greater than I" (John 14, 28).

Despite the two natures, there is only one Person in Christ. Christ as God, and Christ as this man, are the same Person. This is clear from what has already been shown. Christ was conceived in the flesh and born of a woman, but He was conceived by the Holy Spirit. He was baptized in the Jordan in His human nature, and the Father at the same time called Him His beloved Son. St. John tells us that "the Word was God," and then tells us that "the Word was made flesh." St. Paul tells us that "though He was by nature God," He took on an additional nature and became man. In all these statements, qualities and actions proper respectively to divine and human nature are attributed to one Person. There is therefore only one Person in Christ to Whom we refer all His actions and qualities, whether those actions and qualities be human or divine.

It follows from what has been said, that the Blessed Virgin Mary is the Mother of God. Her Son existed before her as God, but He took His human nature from her. She is His mother in the natural order. Since the Person Who is her Son is God, she is truly the Mother of God.

Since Christ is both God and man, He must be adored as God. When we speak of some friend, we speak of him not as a human body but as a person. We say: "John did it," not "John's hand did it." So with Christ. His human body taken by itself is not God. We do not say His humanity is His divinity, because they are most certainly different. But that person, that Man, Christ, is God; and hence, even in His human nature, He must be adored as God, because the human nature is hypostatically united to the divine nature.

Since Christ was God He knew all things, but in His human nature He could and did acquire knowledge. Just as we human beings see, hear and feel, and thus have new experiences, in the same human way did Christ's psychological processes work.

All these truths are embraced in the Mystery of the Incarnation. Though reason can show that there is no contradiction in the doctrine, it is beyond the powers of the human mind to understand the Incarnation itself. It is a truth revealed by God, and accepted by faith on the testimony of God and His Church. Once it has been revealed however, human reason can show that it was fitting, both on the part of God and on the part of man, that the Son of God become man. For by the Incarnation glory is rendered to God, the Son of God becomes the firstborn of men, God's goodness and love for men are made manifest, and a means is provided for redeeming man from his state of sin and the slavery of Satan, and restoring him to a state of friendship with God.

C. The Redemption

1. Meaning of Redemption. The Catholic doctrine of the Redemption teaches that Christ personally satisfied for our sins and merited grace and eternal life for us through His Passion and death. He did this principally by offering Himself as a victim on the cross. Everything which He did and suffered during His life contributed to our reparation, but His death on the cross was the chief work of Redemption.

The purpose of the Redemption was to satisfy God's justice which had been outraged by Adam's sin and the sins of the whole human race; at the same time it was to restore mankind to the supernatural state which he had lost, and to the right of inheriting eternal life with God in heaven. In order to accomplish this end the Son of God became man; and, as Head of the human race, He acted as an official Mediator between man and God. By sacrificing Himself on the cross He paid the penalty due to sin, which of ourselves we could never have paid; and He merited grace for us through which we are able to profit by His sacrifice and to secure heaven.

God was not bound to provide for our redemption. He had not been bound in justice to give Adam and Eve the right to heaven as His adopted children in the first instance. By ordinary nature they were entitled only to an everlasting natural happiness. The right to heaven which He did confer on them was a pure gift, a supernatural gift, something above their nature. For that reason God was not bound in justice to restore that gift to mankind when Adam and Eve had lost it for them. However, He loved his creatures so much that He sent His own Son to redeem us (cf. John 3, 16).

Jesus Christ is the true and only primary Mediator between God and men. The Blessed Mother and the saints are mediators for us, but not in the same sense as Christ. Christ is the principal and indispensable link between God and men. The Council of Trent defines that we are saved by the merit of the one Mediator, our Lord Jesus Christ. St. Paul wrote: "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, Himself man, Christ Jesus, Who gave Himself a ransom for all, bearing witness in His own time" (Tim. 2, 5-6). St. Peter declared of Christ: "This is 'the stone that was rejected by you, the builders, which has become the corner stone.' Neither is there salvation in any other. For there is no other name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved" (Acts 4, 11-12).

Our faith holds that the redemption was an actual buying back, a satisfaction of justice through the payment of a price. The Council of Ephesus tells us that He offered Himself for us, and the Council of Trent says: "the meritorious cause [of our justification] is... our Lord Jesus Christ, Who, when we were enemies, for the exceeding charity wherewith He loved us, merited for us justification by His most holy Passion on the wood of the cross and made satisfaction for us to God the Father" (Sess. VI, ch. 7). St. Peter puts it thus: "You know that you were redeemed from the vain manner of life handed down from your fathers, not with perishable things, with silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ" (1 Pet. 1, 18-19); and again: "Unto this, indeed, you have been called, because Christ also has suffered for you, leaving you an example that you may follow in His steps,... Who Himself bore our sins in His body upon the tree;... and by His stripes you were healed" (1 Pet. 2, 21-24). St. Paul wrote: "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor. 15, 3). Elsewhere he says: "In Him we have redemption through His blood, the remission of sins, according to the riches of His grace," and Christ also loved us and delivered Himself up for us an offering and a sacrifice to God" (Eph. 1, 7; 5, 2).

Christ Himself showed that His death was to be for the redemption of mankind: "The Son of Man... has not come to be served but to serve, and to give His life as a ransom for many" (Mark 10, 45). At the Last Supper He said: "This is My blood of the new covenant, which is being shed for many" (Mark 14, 24).

2. The Redemption embraces all sin. By His sacrifice on the cross, Christ offered to His heavenly Father adequate reparation, not only for original sin, but also for all the actual sins men have committed or will commit, and for all the penalties due to sin. The fund of Christ's reparation is inexhaustible. No number or magnitude of sins is beyond the power of His redemptive sacrifice. "And you, when you were dead by reason of your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, He brought to life along with Him, forgiving you all your sins, cancelling the decree against us, which was hostile to us. Indeed, He has taken it completely away, nailing it to the cross" (Col. 2, 13-14). Christ "gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity" (Tit. 2, 14). "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanses us from all sin" (1 John 1, 7).

Our sins are not unconditionally forgiven by Christ's sacrifice. They are forgiven in virtue of that sacrifice, but on condition that we make ourselves recipients of its merits through the means provided by our religion. When a person is baptized, he is cleansed of all stain of sin including any actual sins he may have committed, and he is at the same time liberated from all penalty due to sin. If he should die without having committed any further sin, he is taken immediately to heaven. If a man sins after baptism, he again incurs guilt and falls under penalty in proportion to the gravity and imputability of the sins. If he commits mortal sins, he deserves hell; if the sins are venial, the penalty is only temporal punishment. But because the Redemption extends to all sins, the new guilt and penalties can likewise be washed away. The means for this is grace, and its effects are realized by contrition, by the sacraments and by mortification.

3. Redemption embraces the entire human race. The price Christ paid for our salvation is more than enough to cover the debt caused by original sin and all actual sins. It is superabundant not only to the extent that all men ever born and ever to be born can gain eternal life by His grace, but also to the extent that all who ever could come into existence though actually they will not, would not exhaust its atoning power. St. Paul says: "Not like the offense is the gift. For if by the offense of the one the many died, much more has the grace of God, and the gift in the grace of the one man Jesus Christ, abounded unto the many. . . . Where the offense has abounded, grace has abounded yet more" (Rom. 5, 15, 20). Christ died for Catholics, non-Catholics, Jews and pagans, and not only for those who will eventually be saved, but even those who will refuse His grace and be lost. "The grace of God our Saviour has appeared to all men, instructing us, in order that, rejecting ungodliness and worldly lusts, we may live temperately and justly and piously in this world; looking for the blessed hope and glorious coming of our great God and Saviour, Jesus Christ, Who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity and cleanse for Himself an acceptable people, pursuing good works" (Tit. 2, 11-14). Pagans are not excepted, for St. Paul says elsewhere: "We work and are reviled for this reason, that we hope in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of believers" (1 Tim. 4, 10).

St. Paul shows in his Epistle to the Romans that the Redemption is intended also for those who will eventually be lost because of mortal sin. "Do not destroy [i. e., cause to be lost] him for whom Christ died" (Rom. 14, 15). The implication is clear. If a soul is lost, it does not receive and profit by the fruits of the Redemption; and yet St. Paul clearly says that Christ died for that soul.

4. The Redemption realized in individuals. Though Christ died for all, all men are not necessarily saved. The death of Christ is the universal cause of salvation, but we are not saved without effort on our part. Only those who make themselves partakers in the merits provided by Christ will profit by His death. It is not sufficient merely to believe in the doctrine of the Redemption. We must also be baptized to become children of God. We must also make use of the other sacraments as means of further grace, and then cooperate with that grace by observing the commandments of God and the precepts of the Church. If we have fallen into serious sin, we are obliged to return to the sacraments and begin again our Christian life. Christ commanded His Apostles: "Go, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you" (Matt. 28, 19-20). It is sufficient for infants that they be baptized, but persons with the use of reason are obliged to an active cooperation in order to participate in the merits of Christ's death. The Council of Trent expressly condemns the error that justifying faith is nothing more than a confidence in divine mercy, which remits sins for Christ's sake; it likewise condemns the error that a man who is justified is not bound to observe the commandments of God and the Church, but only to believe, as if the Gospel were a bare and absolute promise of eternal life without the condition of observing the commandments (Sess. VI, can. 12, 20).

THE THREE THEOLOGICAL VIRTUES

Faith — Hope — Charity

THE FOUR CARDINAL VIRTUES

Prudence — Justice — Fortitude — Temperance

FRUITS OF THE HOLY GHOST

1. Charity, which enables us to love God above all things, and our neighbors as ourselves, for God's sake.

2. Joy, which helps us to serve God with cheerful hearts.

3. Peace, which keeps us unmoved in our minds, and helps us to enjoy a perpetual calmness of conscience, in the midst of the storms and tempests of the world.

4. Patience, which enables us to suffer willingly and with resignation all the trials of this life for the love of God.

5. Longanimity, by which we persevere steadfastly in our duty; and never stop or grow weary, whatever trials we may have to endure.

6. Goodness, by which we avoid injuring others, and are always ready to be of service to others.

7. Benignity, which causes us to conduct ourselves toward others with kindness and sweetness of temper, both in our manners and conversation.

8. Mildness, which keeps back all emotions of passion and anger, and makes a person really amiable, and beloved both by God and man.

9. Fidelity, which enables us to keep to our engagements and fulfill our promises.

10. Modesty, which enables us to observe a becoming deportment and reservation in all our outward actions, and avoid bestowing an undue amount of praise upon ourselves.

11. Continence, which enables us to restrain and resist carnal inclinations, and become abstemious both in our meat and drink.

12. Chastity, by which we are enabled to keep a pure soul in a pure body, and have a great love and esteem for angelic purity.

GIFTS OF THE HOLY GHOST

1. Wisdom, which teaches us to direct our whole lives and actions to the honor of God and the salvation of our souls.

2. Understanding, which enables us to comprehend more perfectly the great mysteries of our faith.

3. Counsel, which leads us to make a right choice in things relating to our salvation, and to avoid the deceits of the devil.

4. Fortitude, whereby we are enabled to undergo and despise all dangers for God's sake, and to be firm and constant in the performance of our Christian duties.

5. Knowledge, by which we know and understand the will of God, learn the duties of religion, and distinguish good from evil.

6. Piety, which makes us devout and zealous in the service of God, and faithful to Him in all things, and practise the duties of our religion.

7. Fear of the Lord, which checks our rashness, keeps us from sin, and makes us obedient to the law of God and dread ever offending Him.

THREE EMINENT GOOD WORKS

Prayer — Fasting — Almsgiving

THE EVANGELICAL COUNSELS

Poverty — Chastity — Obedience

Catholic Ready Reference

(All liturgical appurtenances are given on pp. 179-182)

Abandonment — First stage of the soul's union with God: by conforming to His will, accepting trials and sufferings, surrendering natural consolations for the purpose of purification.

Abbess — A title commonly ascribed to the superioress of a community of nuns. The office of abbess existed as early as the sixth century. Since then it has had a very gradual development, and in the course of time, Canon Law has decreed the manner of election, the extent of powers, and the rights and privileges of an abbess. A bishop may confer the dignity of abbess which is regularly symbolized by a ring and staff.

Abbey — An independent canonically erected monastery generally built around a quadrangle, ruled by an abbot or abbess, and consisting of the following: almonry, calefactory, cellars, cells, chapter house, choir, cloister, conference room, dormitory, guest house, infirmary, kitchen, novitiate, oratory, parlor, refectory, workshops.

Abbot — The superior of a community of men consecrated to God by the religious vows, and dwelling in monastic institutions. It is also used to designate the office of such a superior. The earliest abbots were frequently laymen, since among several hundred monks in the first ages of the Church, there might be only one or two priests. In time, however, the abbot on his inception was obliged to enter the sacerdotal state. As with the abbess, the election, duties and privileges of an abbot have had a gradual development since the sixth century. Some abbots were invested with episcopal jurisdiction over their subjects, and hence were permitted the use of the mitre, crozier and ring, indicative of their authority.

Abdication — The renunciation of a benefice or dignity. It must be voluntary and not in any way connected with a sale. Papal abdication must be made into the hands of the College of Cardinals, which body must elect a successor.

Abduction — The carrying off or keeping of a woman against her will. Abduction is an impediment and renders a marriage with the one abducted invalid.

Abjuration — Renunciation of apostasy, heresy or schism.

Abortion — When a practitioner or other person intentionally removes the fetus, even in the earliest period of pregnancy, direct abortion is committed and is a grievous sin, amounting to homicide. When in an operation on the mother, the child is accidentally injured or expelled, indirect abortion occurs. Indirect abortion is sometimes permitted with sufficient and grave reason, as, for instance, to save the mother's life, providing every precaution be taken to save the life of the child, and providing the child receive timely baptism. Direct abortion has always been condemned by the Church as a crime of the most heinous nature. According to the New Code of Canon Law, those who procure abortion, not excepting the mother, if the abortion has actually taken place, incur an excommunication reserved to the ordinary (C. 2350). Those who co-operate physically or use moral force also incur this excommunication.

Absolution — Absolution is had when the priest using the authority he has received from our Lord, grants the remission of sins. This faculty, as it is called, is possessed by all priests, when a person is in danger of death. But in ordinary cases, priests must have the additional faculty which is called jurisdiction. Since a priest acts as a judge in the Sacrament of Penance, and passes sentence on the penitent, it is quite natural that he can only judge and pass sentence upon those who are subject to him. In general, a bishop has jurisdiction within his own diocese, which jurisdiction he can and usually does delegate to the priests of that diocese.

Absolution, General — A blessing of the Church, to which a plenary indulgence is attached, given at stated times to religious and tertiaries. It also is given without confession of sin where confession is impossible, such as to soldiers on the battlefield. Persons so absolved must acknowledge the sins from which they were absolved in their next confession.

Abstinence — Abstinence, in its restricted and special sense, denotes voluntary deprivation of certain kinds of food and drink, in a rational way, and for the good of the soul. On a fasting-day the Church requires us to limit the quantity as well as the kind of our food. On an abstinence-day, the limit imposed affects only the nature of the food we take.

Accessory to Another's Sin — Ways of being accessory to another's sin are by counsel, by command, by provocation, by consent, by praise or flattery, by concealment, by partaking, by silence, by defense of the evil done.

Acclamation — At the Mass of the Coronation of the Pope, the people cry out three times: "Long life to our lord who has been appointed Supreme Pontiff and universal Pope." Acclamation is also a form of papal election, when a candidate is proclaimed pope without a previous consultation or formal election.

Acolyte — Acolyte is the highest of the four minor orders. It is the duty of an acolyte to serve the priest at Mass, by supplying wine and water, and carrying the lights. The functions of acolyte are now freely performed by laymen, though the order is still always received by those who aspire to the priesthood.

Action Francaise — A movement founded in France about 1897 by Charles Maurras, an atheist, who sought Catholic Royalists' support to restore the monarchy. It made religion subservient to politics and fostered hate and violence, and propagated paganistic doctrines through its review, "Action Francaise," which was condemned by the Pope. In 1939 the managing committee of the newspaper petitioned Pius XII for revocation of the condemnation and professed veneration for the Holy See and the Pope. After consideration by the Holy Office, the ban was lifted.

Act of God — An accident that cannot be controlled by man, such as lightning, is attributed to God, the author of the laws of nature.

Actual Grace — A supernatural gift of God, enabling the intellect and will to elicit acts related to eternal life; called actual because it assists the faculty of the soul only when it is in operation.

Actual Sins — Personal acts or omissions contrary to the law of God; they may be mortal or venial, interior or exterior sins, due to weakness, ignorance or malice, against God, one's neighbor or oneself.

Ad Bestias — Lat. "to the beasts" — referring to Christians condemned to death in the arena.

Ad Libitum — Lat. "at one's pleasure" — referring to a choice of a prayer in the Office or in the Mass.

Ad Limina Visit — A pilgrimage to the tombs of Saints Peter and Paul, required of all bishops every three to ten years when also they render an account of their dioceses to the Pope. The term is derived from the Latin Ad limina apostolorum: "to the thresholds of the Apostles."

Administrator — The priest or bishop appointed to administer a diocese or parish which is vacant.

Adoption — Act by which a person legally takes the child of another as his own. Those who are declared incapable of marrying by civil law on account of legal adoption, are likewise forbidden to contract marriage by Canon Law (C. 1080).

Adoration — An act of religion offered to God alone because of His infinite perfection and supreme dominion. It is expressed outwardly in postures of reverence and prayers of praise.

Adultery — Carnal intercourse of a married person with another who is not the lawful spouse. The Catholic Church holds that the bond of marriage is not and cannot be dissolved by the adultery of either party. Canon Law, however, allows separation from bed and board, whether permanent or temporary, for various causes. Of these, adultery is one of the chief. The right to this separation accrues to either party in consequence of the adultery of the other, provided that the guilt be certain and notorious, whether in fact or in law. The adultery of either party is a sufficient cause entitling the innocent person to claim judicial separation for life. According to the statutes of many states, adultery is a sufficient cause for the absolute severance of the nuptial bond. The Church, however, does not recognize these divorces. Catholics cannot obtain an absolute divorce on the ground of adultery.

Advent — The word signifies "coming" or "arrival." It is applied to the period of waiting which preceded the coming of the Son of God, and this name is given to the four weeks preceding Christmas to recall to the minds of the faithful this period of preparation for the first coming of the Saviour in His birth as man. It begins with the Sunday nearest the feast of St. Andrew. The reason for this is that St. Andrew showed his brother Simon Peter the way to Christ. Records of a liturgical period called Advent are found as far back as the year 380, at the time of the Council of Saragossa.

Affinity — The relationship existing between a man and his wife's relatives and a woman and her husband's relatives. Affinity invalidates marriage in any degree of the direct line, and in the collateral line to the second degree inclusively (C. 1077).

Agape — In the very first age of the Church the Eucharistic celebration was preceded by an ordinary meal, and this was known as the Agape. The strictly liturgical agape disappeared within less than a hundred years after the preaching of the Gospel. Adaptations of it survived until about the fifth century.

Age of Reason — The time of life when one begins to distinguish clearly between right and wrong, understands an obligation and takes on moral responsibility; generally at seven years of age.

Agnosticism — A theory which claims that man cannot know reality because he is unable to apprehend it or it is unknowable. Applied to religion, it claims that human reason cannot know God. The Church in the Vatican Council declared that with the natural light of human reason, God may be known.

Agnus Dei — A disc of wax having on one side the impression of a lamb, and on the other the name and arms of the Pope. It is generally covered with textile and worn suspended from the neck. Its purpose is to protect its possessor from evil.

Agrapha — Sayings supposed to have been spoken by our Lord.

Alleluia — An ejaculation derived from the Hebrew, meaning "Praise the Lord;" used in the Church during joyful seasons.

Allocution — An address delivered from the throne by the Pope to the cardinals in secret consistory.

Alma Mater — Lat. "nourishing mother" — applied to universities and schools which are considered the foster mothers of students.

Alms-deeds — Material help given to another for God's sake and necessary in a Christian society as a bond uniting all in dependence on God.

Alpha and Omega — The first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, used to refer to Christ, the beginning and end of all things.

Altar — A table on which the Sacrifice of the Mass is offered. By decree of Pope St. Felix I it was required that the Sacrifice be offered on the tombs of martyrs, in conformity with which relics of martyrs are now placed in every altar, and hence also the tomb-like structure of the modern altar. A portable altar consists of an altar-stone which must contain the relics of two canonized martyrs.

Amen — A Hebrew word signifying "truly," "certainly." It is an assent to a truth or an expression of a desire, and is equivalent to: "so be it." In this sense it may express consent to the divine will. In the words of Christ: "Amen, I say to you," it means "of a truth."

At the end of prayers "Amen" signifies a desire to obtain what we ask. Thus it is said by the server at Mass, as a sign that the faithful unite their petitions to those of the priest.

Anathema — A thing given over to evil, so that "anathema sit" means "let him be accursed." St. Paul uses it against those who repudiate our blessed Savior. Those against whom it is used are excluded from the communion of the Church. Those who are so condemned, however, may return to the Church if they repent.

Angelic Doctor — St. Thomas Aquinas (1225-1274), so called because of the sanctity of his life and the sublimity of his philosophical and theological writings.

Angels — Spiritual beings, created by God, but superior in nature and intelligence to man. When they were created is an open question. The angels have no body, but they are capable of assuming bodies, as we read in Scripture.

They are purely spiritual intelligences. They do not have to reason, as we do; their knowledge is intuitive, depending on the images received from God. God put them on probation with the help of sanctifying grace, but Lucifer and many others fell through pride and were cast into hell without hope of pardon. The very greatness and perfection of angelic nature, says St. Gregory the Great, made their sin unpardonable.

The good angels went into everlasting bliss. They are ministering spirits serving God. We offer veneration and inferior honor to these angels due to their noble nature. God alone do we adore with latria, or supreme adoration.

Angelus — The practice of ringing a bell for the recitation of the Hail Mary, introduced by the Franciscans in 1263, has since developed into the universal custom of reciting a prayer at morning, noon and evening, in honor of the Incarnation. During paschal time the Regina Coeli takes the place of the Angelus.

Anglican Orders — Anglican Orders were declared invalid under Pope Leo XIII who had the question of their validity thoroughly investigated and gave the decision September 18, 1896, in his bull "Apostolicae Curae."

Annulment — A civil or ecclesiastical declaration that a supposed marriage never was valid owing to a known or hidden impediment.

Annunciation — The Angel Gabriel's announcement to the Virgin Mary that she was to become the Mother of God. The event is commemorated in the daily recitation of the Angelus during the greater part of the year and by a special feast on March 25.

Antichrist — It is the constant belief of the Church since the time of Irenaeus that before our Lord comes again, a great power will arise which will persecute the Church. In St. Matthew's Gospel we read that the false Christs and false prophets shall be so clever "as to deceive, if possible, even the elect." While the antichrist, properly speaking, may be expected just before the end of the world, those who attack Christ and His Church should be so classified and avoided as antichrists.

Antipopes — False popes who, while not duly elected, claimed the papacy and attempted to rule the Church. There have been thirty-seven antipopes.

Apocrypha — Greek "hidden" — writings that claim sacred origin supposed to have been hidden for generations. They lack genuineness and canonicity, and are not included in the Bible.

Apologetics — Science of the explanation of religious teaching according to reason. SS. Justin and Irenaeus were the first apologists.

Apostasy — A breaking away from religion after baptism — a rejection of the Faith. When manifested outwardly with consciousness of the obligation to remain in the Faith, apostasy involves excommunication reserved to the Holy See.

Apostle — One who is sent. The apostles were men sent by Christ to spread the Gospel throughout the world. The apostles were bishops, and so had the power to consecrate, ordain, confirm, etc. They received a divine commission to preach the Gospel to the whole world — to be witnesses of Christ "even to the end of the earth." They had the power of founding churches, ordaining bishops, and other ecclesiastics. All these powers, however, they exercised in subjection to St. Peter, who was the head of the Church. The bishops are successors of the apostles, but their power is limited to the sphere of their jurisdiction, whereas that of the apostles was universal.

Apostolic Delegate — The representative of the Pope who watches over and informs His Holiness of the state of the Church in a certain territory. When countries have diplomatic relations with the Holy See he has a diplomatic character, otherwise purely ecclesiastical. He precedes all ordinaries in his territory excepting cardinals.

Apostolic Indulgences — Attached to crucifixes, rosaries, medals, etc., by the Pope or an authorized priest when the articles are blessed. Such articles must be carried on one's person or kept in a suitable place.

Apparitions — Remarkable appearances or manifestations made by God in an extraordinary manner, either before the senses in flesh and blood or in luminous form.

Archimandrite — The superior of a monastery in an Eastern Church, such as among the Melchites or Uniate Greeks; also an honorary title of officials in Eastern Churches.

Articulo Mortis — Lat. "at the moment of death" — referring to indulgences granted to those about to die.

Ascension — Christ's ascending into heaven forty days after His Resurrection. It is commemorated by a special feast, which is a holyday of obligation.

Ashes — Ashes were used in ancient religions to express humiliation and sorrow, and their use was continued in the early and medieval Church as a symbol of penance. On Ash Wednesday blessed ashes are placed on the foreheads of the faithful to remind them they are but dust and ashes, and that they should enter upon the holy season of Lent, of which this is the first day, with a humble and mortified spirit. This is a sacramental.

Asperges — The first word of the ninth verse of the fiftieth psalm "Asperges Me," meaning "Thou shalt sprinkle me" — sung during the ceremony of sprinkling with holy water before High Mass on Sundays.

Aspiration — A prayer said in a breath, derived from the Latin, Aspiro, to breathe, and so containing only a few words, as for example, "My Jesus, mercy." Indulgences are applied to many of these prayers.

Assumption — The reception into heaven of the body of the Blessed Virgin shortly after her death. Its commemoration on August 15 is a holyday of obligation.

Atheism — A system opposed to theism, which denies God's existence and refers mortality to a material rather than a spiritual source.

Atonement — The suffering of Christ caused by sin; the payment of the debt to divine justice that He alone could make. The atonement was an act of love because the complete anguish He endured was not absolutely necessary.

Attributes of God — Though God is one and simple, we form a better idea by applying characteristics to Him, such as: almighty, eternal, holy, immortal, immense, immutable, incomprehensible, ineffable, infinite, intelligent, invisible, just, loving, merciful, most high, most wise, omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent, patient, perfect, provident, self-dependent, supreme, true.

Attrition — Imperfect contrition based on an inferior motive such as the loss of heaven or the punishment of hell, not on the pure love of God.

Audiences, Papal — Receptions by the Holy Father to groups or individuals. Requests for audiences are made to the Master of the Chamber.

Aureole — A symbolic oval of light placed over the heads of saints in Christian art to symbolize their special honor in heaven; also called a halo or nimbus.

Authority — The right of some to impose the duty of obedience on others. There must be authority everywhere as well as obedience, but men are not bound to live under any particular form of authority.

If a particular form of authority encroaches upon the rights and liberties of the people, a revolution may be justified. When the authority of the State and that of the Church conflict, the State is not to be obeyed against God. All authority comes from God.

Auto da fe — The public ceremony in which those convicted of heresy by the Inquisition were given their final sentence.

Banns of Marriage — Three publications of an intended marriage on Sundays or holy days in the churches of the parties concerned for the purpose of discovering any impediments that may invalidate the marriage. Ordinarily the pastor should not perform the marriage until three days after the last publication of the banns.

Baptism — The sacrament of initiation and regeneration. By pouring water on the head of the person to be baptized, while invoking the Holy Trinity, he is cleansed of original sin and made a disciple of Christ. This is baptism by water, which may be administered also by immersion or aspersion. There are two other kinds of baptism: by blood (or martyrdom) and of desire (perfect charity or love of God, and therefore implicitly the desire for the sacrament).

The significance of the ceremonies of baptism is very beautiful, yet few people ever think of them. Among the ceremonies are the following:

The person baptized is to receive in baptism the name of a saint, that the person may profit by the example and patronage of that saint. The priest breathes thrice upon his face to signify the new spiritual life which is to be breathed into his soul; he puts salt into his mouth, as a sign that he is to be freed from the corruption of sin. Then the priest solemnly exorcises the person; anoints his ears and nostrils with spittle — after our Lord's example, who restored sight to the blind man — and asks him in three separate interrogations whether he renounces Satan, all his works and all his pomps.

He next anoints him with the oil of catechumens on his breast and between his shoulders. The ancient athletes were anointed before their contests in the arena, and in the same way the young Christian is prepared for the "good fight" which lies before him. The recipient, through his sponsors if he be a child, professes his faith by reciting the Creed, and then the priest pours water three times on his head, in the form of a cross, at the same time pronouncing the words, "I baptize thee, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." After baptism, chrism is put on the top of his head to signify his union with Christ, the head of the Church; he receives a white garment, and a burning candle in his hands, a symbol of the light of faith and charity.

These rites are recommended by their beautiful symbolism and the majestic words which accompany them as well as by their venerable antiquity.

Basilica — Originally the form of building used for early Christian churches, being an adaptation of a pagan edifice for Christian worship; the ground plan resembles a cross; the roof is supported by pillars with arched windows in the clerestory; the facade faces the East. Today the name basilica is applied to historic and privileged churches, such as those of St. Peter and St. John Lateran.

Beatification — A pontifical declaration that a member of the Church deserves to be regarded as residing in heaven due to a saintly life or heroic death. An examination of the life, virtues and writings is first made in the diocese of the candidate, as well as by the Church officially, before the person is declared blessed.

Beatific Vision — The vision of God enjoyed by the blessed in heaven, called beatific because it is the supreme source of happiness in heaven.

Beatitudes — Eight blessings given in the Sermon on the Mount (Matt., v, 3-10): blessed are the poor in spirit, the meek, those who mourn, who seek justice, the merciful, peacemakers, the clean of heart and the persecuted.

Bells — Sacramentals used to remind us of God and our duties to Him, introduced toward the close of the fourth century. Tower bells have been rung at the elevation of the principal Mass in a church since the thirteenth century.

The power of calling the faithful to Church is often attributed to the efficacy of the bell; but, of course, this notion is a superstitious one. This power is due only to the blessing and prayer of the Church.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament — A religious service which originated in the fourteenth century with the custom of exposing the Blessed Sacrament. A blessing with the Host is given before it is taken from the ostensorium and replaced in the tabernacle.

Benediction with Ciborium — A less solemn form of benediction in which the Host remains in the ciborium and is not visible.

Benefice — Church property or revenue attached to spiritual offices for the support of the clergy.

Benefit of Clergy — The privilege of the clergy to be exempt from the jurisdiction of civil courts, once in effect in the American colonies, now abolished.

Benevolence — A disposition akin to charity, consisting in wishing well for the happiness of others.

Betrothal — A mutual agreement to marry. The contract to marry must be made in writing, signed by the parties and, in addition, by either the pastor or the ordinary of the place, or by at least two witnesses, if neither the pastor nor the ordinary sign. If either or both parties be unable to write, mention of that fact must be made in the document, for the validity of the act, and another witness must be added to sign the document. Promises of marriage made according to the prescribed form will be binding in conscience, but they do not give rise any more to the diriment impediment of public decency, nor to any canonical prohibiting impediment properly so called.

Betting — The backing of an issue with a sum of money, or other valuables, binding in conscience, if the object is honest, if the two parties have the free disposal of their stakes, if the bet is thoroughly understood by both parties, and if the outcome is not known beforehand. Bets are often null and void in the eyes of the law.

Bible, The — This name was given to the sacred books of the Jews and the Christians. The Catholic Bible is composed of a number of inspired books contained in the Vulgate translation and enumerated by the Council of Trent.

Some few Catholic theologians have, indeed, maintained that the Scriptures may err in minimis — i. e., in small matters of historical detail which in no way affect faith or morals. But in doing so, they do not contradict any express definition of Pope or Council, though such an opinion has never obtained any currency in the Church.

Secondly, the Church affirms that all Scripture is the word of God, but at the same time it maintains that there is an unwritten word of God over and above the Scripture. The Catholic view is reasonable. If our Lord had meant His Church to be guided by a book, and by a book alone, He would have taken care that Christians should be at once provided with sacred books. As a matter of fact, He did nothing of the kind. He refers those who were to embrace His doctrine, not to a book, but to the living voice of His apostles and of His Church. "He who heareth you," He said to the apostles, "heareth Me." Scripture is a source, but by no means the only source, of Christian doctrine. We must also appeal to the tradition of the Church. The Church from the beginning taught by word and letter.

Again, it belongs to the Church, and to the Church alone, to determine the true sense of the Scripture; we cannot interpret contrary to the Church's decision, or to "the unanimous consent of the Fathers," without making shipwreck of the Faith. The Catholic is fully justified in believing with perfect confidence that the Church cannot teach any doctrine contrary to the Scriptures, for our Lord has promised that the gates of hell shall not prevail against His Church. On the other hand, Christ has made no promise of infallibility to those who expound Scripture by the light of private judgment.

It is not necessary for all Christians to read the Bible. Many nations, without knowledge of letters, without a Bible in their own tongue, received from the Church teaching which was quite sufficient for the salvation of their souls. Indeed, if the study of the Bible had been an indispensable requisite, a great part of the human race would have been left without the means of grace till the invention of printing. More than this, parts of the Bible are evidently unsuited to the very young or to the ignorant, and hence Clement XI condemned the proposition that "the reading of Scripture is for all."

Bible in Public Schools — The practice of reading the Bible in the public schools has been opposed by non-Christians and Catholics, as generally only Protestant versions are used. Catholic school teachers in the public schools enjoined upon to read the Bible may compare the Catholic with the Protestant versions and read verses common to both.

Bigamy — The contracting of a marriage while a previous one is still binding.

Bigotry — Ignorant adherence to a belief, opinion, or practice, combined with intolerance of others holding different views.

Bination — The celebration of Mass twice in one day by the same priest, permitted when there are not enough priests to satisfy the needs of a community.

Biretta — A stiff square cap with a number of ridges on top worn by clerics when entering the sanctuary and at other times.

Birth Control — The prevention of pregnancy, condemned by the Church as intrinsically evil because it defeats the primary purpose of marriage, i. e., the procreation of children, and lessens the respect of husband and wife, fulfilling only the secondary and baser purpose of allaying concupiscence.

Blasphemy — Evil, contumelious or reproachful language directed at or concerning God.

Bollandists — Belgian Jesuits, editors of the "Acta Sanctorum," an extensive collection of research into the lives of the saints.

Breviary — A book containing an abridgment of psalms, antiphons, responses, hymns, and selected parts of Holy Scripture. It has been in use from the infancy of the Church, though it has been subject to many revisions. In the present breviary we have seven hours corresponding to Matins with Lauds, Prime, Tierce, Sext, None, Vespers and Compline.

Bribery — An immoral act aiming to defeat justice by influencing those in office to act in a particular manner for a stipulated sum of money or other valuables.

Brief — A letter issued by the Sovereign Pontiff at Rome, written on fine parchment in modern characters, subscribed by the Pope's secretary of briefs, and sealed with the Pope's signet-ring, the Seal of the Fisherman.

Brothers — Members of religious congregations and orders of men who follow a rule of life for the purpose of realizing personal sanctification and who perform works of Christian charity.

Bull — So named from the *bull*a (or round leaden seal, having on one side a representation of SS. Peter and Paul, and on the other the name of the reigning Pope), which is attached to the document (by a silken cord if it be a bull of grace, and by one of hemp if a bull of justice) and which gives authenticity to it.

Bullarium — A collection of papal bulls. That of Cocquelines containing the bulls of all popes from Leo the Great to Benedict XIII is the most famous.

Burial — Interment with ecclesiastical rites and in consecrated ground granted to all baptized, converts and catechumens; denied to apostates, heretics, schismatics, Freemasons, etc., those excommunicated, deliberate suicides, duelists, those who have ordered their bodies cremated, and public sinners.

Burse — A square case into which the priest puts the corporal which is to be used in Mass; a fund for the education of poor students.

Calendar, Ecclesiastical — An arrangement founded on the Julian-Gregorian determinations of the civil year, marking the days set apart for particular celebration.

Calumny — Lying about one's neighbor. Imputing to him faults of which he is not guilty.

Calvary — The hill near Jerusalem where Christ was crucified, so called from the Latin word calvaria, meaning skull, from the shape of the eminence.

Candelabrum — Name applied to a chandelier for lamps, now also applied to a candlestick, generally one holding a number of lights.

Candles — When used for liturgical purposes, candles should be made of pure virgin beeswax, typifying the flesh of Christ, Who was born of a virgin Mother. The wick symbolizes the soul of Christ and the flame His divinity absorbing and dominating both body and soul. Candles are blessed and distributed to the faithful for use in the home on Candlemas day, the feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin, celebrated on February 2. Blessed candles are a sacramental. Every Catholic home should have at least one, to be lighted when the Blessed Sacrament is brought to the sick.

Candlestick — A symbol of the Eucharist. Six are placed on the main altar, three on either side of the crucifix.

Canonical Hours — Times set apart for the recitation of the Divine Office: Prime, meaning first hour; Tierce, the third; Sext, the sixth; None, the ninth; Vespers, evening, and Compline, the last. Matins and Lauds are recited in the morning.

Canonization — A papal declaration that one already beatified is to be regarded as a saint and to be venerated everywhere. Proof of two miracles through intercession must first be accepted as having occurred after beatification. The celebration of canonization is solemnly held at St. Peter's, Rome.

Canon Law — Canon Law is the assemblage of rules or laws relating to faith, morals and discipline, prescribed or propounded to Christians by ecclesiastical authority. These are binding laws and liable to be enforced by penalties. In the early Church whenever a difficult case was set before a bishop, he had three things to guide him: Scripture, tradition and the holy canons. The latter were the disciplinary rules which Church synods, beginning with the Council of Jerusalem, had established. A new code came into use in 1918 and contains five books, covering general rules, ecclesiastical persons, sacred things, trials, crimes and punishments.

Canon of Scripture — The list of inspired books accepted by the Church as books of the Bible.

Canopy — A cloth, wood, or metal covering for an altar or throne for dignitaries; also a white cloth carried over the Blessed Sacrament in procession.

Cantata — Originally meant a story set to music for one or two voices; now generally applied to choral music.

Canticle — A sacred scriptural chant or prayer differing from the psalms, used in the Divine Office, such as the Benedictus and Magnificat.

Capital Sins — Grave offenses which give rise to many more sins. They are: pride, covetousness, lust, anger, gluttony, envy, sloth. The opposite virtues are: humility, liberality, chastity, meekness, temperance, brotherly love, diligence.

Cappa Magna — A long garment with a train, lined with silk or fur, worn by bishops and cardinals.

Cardinal — The cardinals are commonly known as the princes of the Church. They owe their appointment solely to the Pope and are chosen usually from among those priests and bishops notable for their learning, piety and prudence.

The duties of the cardinals are twofold. They take an active part in the government of the universal Church; and at a vacancy of the Holy See, their duties are confined to protecting the Church and maintaining all things in their due order, till a conclave can be assembled for the election of a new Pope, who is chosen from among them. According to a regulation made by Sixtus V, their number is not to exceed seventy of whom six are cardinal bishops, residing in Rome and administering the suburbicari-an sees (these number seven but two are frequently united), fifty are cardinal priests, charged with the spiritual ministry of the faithful, and fourteen are cardinal deacons who exercise the ministry of material charity: distribution of alms, care of hospitals, orphanages, etc. By Canon Law today all cardinals must be priests and at least twenty-four years of age, and all are made members of one or more of the Roman Congregations.

Cardinal Protector — A cardinal entrusted with the care of a particular religious group.

Cardinal Virtues — The four principal virtues of justice, prudence, temperance and fortitude.

Cases of Conscience — Problems exemplifying the application of the moral and canon law, such as in the case of a thief: in how far he is obliged to make restitution.

Cassock — A gown worn by clerics and priests — usually black for priests, purple for bishops and prelates, red for cardinals, white for the Pope.

Catacombs — In the days of the early Church, the Christians were subject to many and vigorous persecutions. It was necessary, therefore, that they should bury their dead and hold public worship in places far removed from the eyes of their persecutors. Hence the catacombs, which were long subterranean passageways, whose walls were lined on both sides with niches in which the dead were buried. These niches were sealed with a slab set in mortar. There were places where these tunnels widened out so as to make room for a moderate assembly of the faithful, and it was in these chapels that Mass was celebrated upon altars of stone. Sometimes there were three or four stories to these catacombs, each hallowed out underneath the preceding one as a necessity arose.

During the first two centuries the Christians used the catacombs in peace and safety. During this time the underground chambers were decorated with painting and sculpture. With the third century persecution became fierce and in numerous cases the Christians were followed to their catacombs and there martyred. After the third century they became a place of pilgrimage. During the seventh and eighth centuries the Lombard invaders desecrated, plundered and partly destroyed them. After this they were for the most part closed and by many forgotten, and it was not until the sixteenth century that interest in them revived.

Catafalque — An erection like a bier during the Masses of the dead, when the corpse itself is not there, covered with black cloth and surrounded by candles.

Catechism — A summary of Christian doctrine usually in the form of question and answer for the instruction of Christian people.

Catechumen — One undergoing instruction before Baptism and reception into the Church.

Cathedra — The chair throne on which the Bishop sits during church functions. The term refers to pronouncements made by the Pope from the Chair of Peter.

Cathedral — Official church of a bishop.

Cathedral Schools — Church schools introduced in the eighth century resembling somewhat the public schools of today and in use up to the eighteenth century.

Cathedraticum — The annual tax paid by all churches and benefices subject to a bishop, for his support.

Catholic — Term meaning universal. It was applied to the early church to distinguish it from heretical sects. It is one of the marks of the true Church.

Catholic Action — "The participation of the laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy" (Pope Pius XI), by the pursuit of personal Christian perfection and a union of all classes around those centers of sound doctrine and multiple social activity sustained by the authority of the bishops.

Catholic Church — A divinely instituted society with members in every land believing the same truths, ruled by the successors of St. Peter. The total membership is about 335,000,000.

Catholic Encyclopedia — A work of reference on the constitution, doctrine, discipline and history of the Catholic Church, completed in 1914 and now being revised.

Celibacy — An ecclesiastical law of the Western Church binding all its clerics in major orders, in virtue of the dignity and the duties of the sacred priesthood, to refrain from entering the marriage state.

Censer — A metal vessel in which incense is burned, with a cover suspended by chains; swung before the Blessed Sacrament and used to incense priests and people.

Censorship — Examination before publication of religious writings by a priest especially appointed to the task. Nihil Obstat on a book means that it has been examined and that nothing hinders its publication.

Censure — A spiritual penalty imposed by the Church for the correction and amendment of offenders. This is the case with those who have committed a crime and are contumacious, and are deprived of the use of certain spiritual advantages. Censures are divided according to their nature and the extent of punishment they inflict.

Ceremonies — External acts, gestures or movements that accompany prayers and public worship.

Chained Bibles — Bibles chained to a wall or table in the Middle Ages to save them from stealth. Contrary to a widespread and false opinion among Protestants, they were so secured to afford people the opportunity of reading the Scriptures rather than prevent them from doing so. Protestants themselves chained Bibles.

Chalice — The precious cup used in Mass for the wine which is to be consecrated. The chalice must be consecrated by the bishop and cannot be touched except by persons in Holy Orders.

Chamberlain — The title of several classes of palace officials of the Roman Court.

Chancel — Part of the choir near the altar.

Chancellor—Ecclesiastical notary of a diocese who draws up all written documents in the government of the diocese, takes care of, arranges and indexes diocesan archives, records of dispensations and Church trials.

Chancery — A branch of Church administration that handles all written documents used in the government of a diocese.

Chant is the music proper (but not exclusively so) to the liturgy of the Catholic Church. It is the "vehicle of the sacred text" which the Church uses when she sings her dogmas. It is a unisonous, diatonic, simple or florid melody moving with free rhythm in one or more of the eight modes.

Chapel — An informal church oftentimes attached to a larger edifice. There are many kinds, such as cemetery chapels, lady chapels, wayside chapels.

Chaplain — A priest appointed by the bishop to care for the spiritual welfare of a part of the army, religious communities or institutions.

Chaplet—One-third of the rosary, or fifty-five beads on which are recited fifty Hail Marys and five Our Fathers.

Chapter — A general meeting of delegates of certain religious orders to consider important interests of their communities.

Charity — A supernatural, infused virtue by which God is loved for His own sake. This motive is necessary for charity in the true sense of the word.

Chastity — A moral virtue, opposed to lust, by which is moderated, in the case of the married, and excluded, in the case of the unmarried, the desire to indulge in carnal pleasure. It may also be considered as one of the three Vows of Religion.

Cherubim — The second among the nine choirs of angels.

Children of Mary—Sodalities of our Lady for women and girls; in existence for the past century.

Chrism — A mixture of olive oil and balm, blessed by the bishop and used in the Church in Confirmation, Baptism and other ceremonies. The oil signifies fullness of grace and the balm mixed with it signifies incorruption.

Christ — The Greek word Christos meaning "Anointed," is a translation of the Hebrew word Messiah, designating the King who, for the Jews, was to come. Thus, when our Lord came, "the Christ" was His official title, while "Jesus" was His ordinary name.

The work and office of Christ: Christ came chiefly to take away sin, to teach, to be the Head of the Church, to hold the supreme kingly, priestly, and judicial power, and, finally, by His vicarious atonement on the cross, to suffer and die for us, thus effecting the remission of our sins, and enabling us once more to become heirs to the Kingdom of Heaven.

Christians—A name first applied about the year 43 to the followers of Christ at Antioch, the capital of Syria. It was used by the pagans as a contemptuous term. The Jews did not use it, but rather chose to call the followers of the new religion "Nazarenes," or "Galileans." Probably the term arose from a mistaken conception of the word "Christus," it being taken as a proper name, whereas it means "The Anointed." The term as used today designates: (1) true imitators of the life of Christ, (2) Catholics, (3) all baptized persons believing in Christ, in counter-distinction to Jews and heathens.

Church — From the Greek Kuria-kon, meaning "house," used to designate the House of God from the beginning of the fourth century. Private houses were first used for this purpose, but at the beginning of the third century, churches, properly so-called, began to be erected. After the universal toleration granted to the Church by the Emperor Constantine (in the Edict of Milan, 313), these assumed large and magnificent proportions. Churches, particularly the early ones, ordinarily had the sanctuary in the East end, facing the rising sun, and were divided into respective parts, for the bishops and priests (presbyterium), and for the laity (the nave). This last was again divided into parts for the men and women, and the different classes of the faithful, according to their rank in the Church. The chief church of the diocese is called the cathedral.

Church and State — Where Catholicism is the religion of the majority of the people, as in Italy to-day, the Church endeavors to work harmoniously with the State, since the two have jurisdiction over the same persons. In the case of a disagreement, the authority of the Church should prevail over the State or some agreement be made between them.

Churching — A pious and laudable custom, reserved for women who have borne children in wedlock. Properly speaking, it is to be performed by the parish priest. Having sprinkled the woman with holy water in the form of a cross, the priest says a prayer of thanksgiving, blesses her, and in these words invites her: "Come into the temple of God. Adore the Son of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who has given thee fruitfulness in childbearing."

Church Militant — The faithful still living on earth as distinct from the Church Suffering in purgatory and the Church Triumphant in heaven.

Church Unity Octave — Eight days of prayer offered from January 18 to January 25, that all lapsed Catholics return to the Church, and all those outside the Church be converted. This devotion was started by the Friars of the Atonement about 1910.

Ciborium — The vessel in which the Sacred Hosts are kept for distribution at Communion.

Circumcision — A custom observed by the Jews as a sign of the covenant between God and Abraham. The circumcision of the Child Jesus out of reverence for the law is commemorated by the Church on January 1.

Clandestinity — Illegal secrecy, an impediment to valid marriage if the ceremony be performed by any other than the parish priest or bishop of the diocese or delegate of either.

Clergy, Married — Oriental clerics may not licitly, and more probably not validly, marry after the reception of the subdiaconship. If they have been married before that time, they may use marriage rights.

Clergy, Religious — Clergy who take the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience and who are subject to a religious superior. They are also called "regular" clergy because they observe a rule of life.

Clergy, Secular — Clergy immediately subject to a bishop of a diocese, devoted to ordinary parochial work and the administration of the Church throughout the world. They take a vow of chastity and make a promise of obedience to their bishops.

Cleric — One who has been assigned to the Divine ministry by the reception of the clerical tonsure, and thus rendered capable of obtaining the power of orders and jurisdiction, benefices and pensions; loosely used to designate also one who enjoys the clerical privileges of immunity and exemption, such as a religious, a novice, or a member of a society having community life without vows.

Clericalism — Term used by Free-thinkers for the application of moral principles to economic, social and political matters and for what is termed the exaggerated claims of the clergy.

Cloister — The enclosure of a convent or monastery, which the enclosed may not freely leave or outsiders enter.

Closed Times — Seasons of the year when the nuptial blessing is not given, except with special permission: during Advent and Lent, on Christmas and Easter Sunday.

Coadjutor Bishop — A Bishop deputed by the Holy See to assist the diocesan bishop in the administration of a diocese or in pontifical functions. Also called Auxiliary.

Code — A digest of rules or regulations such as the Code of Canon Law.

Coeducation — Arguments in favor of the education of both sexes without consideration of sex are: economy, better discipline, and beneficial social intercourse. Objections are that boys can and should be subjected to a stricter regimen than girls and that the lowering of sex tension leads to indifference and grave moral evils. Coeducation is not generally employed in Catholic secondary schools.

College, Sacred — The body of cardinals.

Colors, Liturgical — The colors approved by the Church for use in public worship. Certain colors are prescribed for certain feasts. Draperies of the altar and vestments of the clergy are white, red, green, violet or black, according to the Office of the day.

Commandments of God — The "Decalogue" or "ten words" written by the finger of God on two tablets of stone, and given to Moses on Mt. Sinai. As defined by the Council of Trent, they bind the conscience of all mankind, manifesting to us God's will in our behalf, and, by their observance, enable us to attain to everlasting salvation. They are:

1. I am the Lord thy God. Thou shalt not have strange gods before Me.

2. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain.

3. Remember thou keep holy the Sabbath day.

4. Honor thy father and thy mother.

5. Thou shalt not kill.

6. Thou shalt not commit adultery.

7. Thou shalt not steal.

8. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

9. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods.

Commandments of the Church — The Church, being our mother, and having the deposit of faith to preserve and make known to us, therefore has the power to make rules for us. Thus she commands us:

1. To hear Mass on Sundays and holy days of obligation.

2. To fast and abstain on the days appointed.

3. To confess at least once a year.

4. To receive the Holy Eucharist during the Easter time.

5. To contribute to the support of our pastors.

6. Not to marry persons who are not Catholics, or who are related to us within the third degree of kindred, nor privately without witnesses, nor to solemnize marriage at forbidden times.

Commissariat of the Holy Land — A territory assigned to the Friars Minor for the purpose of collecting alms for the holy places in Palestine. There are some forty throughout the world, one being located at Mt. St. Sepulchre, Washington, D. C.

Communion — It is a tenet of the Catholic faith that the Body and Blood, Soul and Divinity of Jesus Christ are given in the Communion, and that Christ is received whole and entire under either species, i. e., under the form of bread alone, or wine alone.

Communion, Frequent — The Church exhorts the faithful to receive daily, if possible. It is recommended to keep free from venial sin in order to receive more worthily. The practice of frequent Communion was introduced by Pius X.

Communion of Saints — The union of the faithful in heaven, on earth and in purgatory. Belief in the Communion of Saints is expressed in the ninth article of the Apostles' Creed. According to the teaching of the Church, it is added as an explanation of the preceding article, "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church." It embraces the Church Triumphant, the Church Militant, and the Church Suffering. The faithful here upon earth are in communication with each other by their good works, charity and prayers. Our communication with the poor souls consists in our praying for their liberation from the cleansing fires of purgatory. We are in communion with the elect in heaven when we ask them to intercede to God in our behalf, by honoring and imitating them and by obtaining their help and prayers.

Communism — A social or economic system founded on the community of goods. In political practice it involves absolute control by the community in all matters pertaining to labor, religion and social relations. It embodies the principles of Karl Marx. Actually it has become a philosophy of life directing men to merely material ends, and militantly combats religion; as in Russia today. Pope Pius XI on March 19, 1937, issued the encyclical, "Divini Redemptoris," on Atheistic Communism.

Concelebration — In the Western Church this rite is now used only at the ordination of priests and the consecration of bishops when several priests say Mass together, all consecrating the same bread and wine. In all Eastern Churches concelebration is common.

Conclave — This term is applied to the place where the cardinals assemble for the election of a new pope, and to the assembly itself. In a General Council held at the Lateran in 1179, it was decreed that the election should henceforth rest with the cardinals alone, and that, in order to be canonical, it must be supported by two-thirds of their number. After the death of a pope, the cardinals who are absent are immediately to be summoned to the conclave by one of the secretaries of the Sacred College; the election is to begin on the fifteenth or the eighteenth day after the death. Originally this period was for ten days, but, to allow those at a great distance to arrive on time, the period was lengthened to fifteen or eighteen days at the most. On the day on which the conclave officially begins a solemn Mass of the Holy Ghost is said in the Pauline Chapel, and after it the cardinals form a procession and proceed to the Sistine Chapel where the voting takes place. During the conclave the cardinals occupy apartments in the Vatican Palace. After three days the amount of food sent in is restricted; if five more days elapse without an election being made, the rule used to be that the cardinals should from that time subsist on nothing but bread, wine, and water; but this rigor has been modified. Morning and evening, the cardinals meet in the chapel, and a secret scrutiny is usually instituted, in order to ascertain whether any candidate has the required majority of two-thirds. A cardinal coming from a distance can enter the conclave after the closure, but only if he claims the right of doing so within three days of his arrival in the city. There are three valid modes of election: by scrutiny, by compromise, and by what is called quasi-inspiration. Compromise occurs when all the cardinals agree to entrust the election to a small committee of two or three members of the body. Scrutiny is the ordinary mode; elections have usually been made by this mode with reasonable dispatch. However, owing to the disturbances of the times, the conclave of 1799, at which Pius VII was elected, lasted six months.

Concordat — From Lat. concordata, "things agreed upon." A treaty between the Holy See and a secular state touching the conservation and promotion of the interests of religion in that state.

Concubinage — Unlawful intercourse between a man and woman living together more or less permanently.

Concupiscence — A desire of the lower appetite contrary to reason: "the flesh lusteth against the spirit." According to the Catholic view, if the rational will resists such inordinate desires there is no sin. The Protestant view holds concupiscence is of itself sinful, identifying it with original sin.

Confession — Sacramental Confession consists of accusing ourselves of our sins to a priest who has received authority to give absolution. Confession must be: (1) entire, (2) vocal, (3) accompanied by supernatural sorrow and firm purpose of amendment, (4) humble and sincere. The form of Confession is as follows: The penitent, kneeling at the confessor's feet, says: "Pray, Father, bless me, for I have sinned." The priest gives the blessing prescribed in the Roman ritual, "The Lord be in thy heart and on thy lips, that thou mayest truly and humbly confess thy sins, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." The penitent then enumerates the sins of which he has been guilty since his last confession, and adds, "For these and all other sins which I cannot now remember I am heartily sorry; I purpose amendment for the future, and most humbly ask pardon of God, and penance and absolution of you, my Spiritual Father."

Confessional — This is the seat which the priest uses when hearing confessions. According to the Roman ritual, it ought to be placed in an open and conspicuous part of the church, and to have a grating between the priest and the penitent. The division of the confessional into compartments does not appear to go back further than the sixteenth century. This arrangement became general in the following century.

Confessor — In modern Church usage, this term refers to a male saint who did not die for the Faith. It also refers to a priest who has the necessary jurisdiction to hear confessions and absolve.

Confirmation — A sacrament of the new law by which grace is conferred on baptized persons which strengthens them for the profession of the Christian faith. It is conferred by the bishop, who lays his hand on the recipients, making the sign of the cross with chrism on their foreheads, saying, "I sign thee with the sign of the cross and confirm thee with the chrism of salvation, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Besides conferring a special grace to profess the faith, it sets a seal or character on the soul, so that this sacrament cannot be repeated without sacrilege.

Confraternity — An association, generally of laymen, having some work of devotion, charity, or instruction for its object, undertaken for the glory of God. When a confraternity reaches the stage of which affiliations, similar to itself, are formed in other places, and adopt its rules, it takes the name of archconfraternity, and acquires certain particular privileges.

Congregation, Religious — A community bound together by a common rule, either without vows (as the Oratorians, the Oblates of St. Charles, etc.) or with vows (as the Passionists, the Redemptorists, etc.).

Congregational Singing — Strongly recommended by Pope Pius X in 1903 and Pope Pius XI in 1929 as a means of aiding the piety of the faithful and increasing the solemnity of the service.

Conscience — A knowledge of one's self which dictates what is morally right or wrong. When in doubt, certainty should be acquired before acting, or at least moral certainty.

Consent — The essence of matrimony: it must be voluntary, mutual, unconditional.

Consistory — A meeting of official persons to transact business, and also the place where they meet. Before the Reformation every English bishop had his consistory, composed of some of the leading clergy of the diocese. In the Catholic Church the term is now seldom used except with reference to the papal consistory, the ecclesiastical senate in which the Pope, presiding over the College of Cardinals, deliberates upon grave ecclesiastical affairs.

Consubstantiation — The error of those who hold that the Body and Blood of Christ exist with the substance of the bread and wine in the Eucharist.

Continence — The state of one who controls the sex instinct.

Contrition — Sorrow and detestation for past sins and determination to sin no more.

Cope — A long cape-like vestment worn by the priest at Benediction and at other liturgical functions.

Cornerstone — A stone prominent in the corner of the foundation of a building inscribed with the date and having a cavity containing coins and other mementoes of the time and circumstances.

Corporal Works of Mercy, The — To feed the hungry, to give drink to the thirsty, to clothe the naked, to harbor the harborless, to visit the sick, to ransom the captive, to bury the dead.

Cotta — Another name for surplice.

Council — An assemblage of churchmen, called to settle ecclesiastical affairs. Councils may be: General or Ecumenical, presided over by the Pope; provincial, presided over by an archbishop; diocesan, presided over by a bishop.

Counsels, Evangelical — While keeping the commandments is sufficient for salvation, the counsels of more complete renunciation promise greater rewards. They are: poverty, chastity and obedience, made permanent by vows.

Counter-Reformation — The Catholic reform from 1522 to 1648 to restore genuine Catholic life and stem the tide of Protestantism. The Council of Trent gave the reform official direction.

Court, Diocesan — Officials assisting a bishop of a diocese: vicar, chancellor, examiners, consultants, auditors, notaries, etc.

Creation — The production by God of something out of nothing, before the existence of anything.

Creator — A title belonging in a strict sense to God alone, since He is the supreme self-existing being, the absolute and infinite first cause of all things.

Creature — That which has been made out of nothing by God.

Credence — The table on the Epistle side of the altar on which the water, wine, and other articles used at Mass are placed.

Creed — A summary of the chief articles of faith, used by Christians to make a profession of their faith.

Four creeds are at present used in the Catholic Church: the Apostles', the Nicene, the Athanasian and that of Pope Pius IV. The Apostles' Creed is in common use.

Cremation — A violent and unnatural destruction of the human body by fire, looked upon as an abomination before God. Catholics may not carry out the order of one who desired his body cremated, nor may they be buried in consecrated ground if they order their own bodies cremated.

Crib — A representation of the manger which held the Christ Child in Bethlehem. The custom of erecting Cribbs dates back to 1223, when St. Francis of Assisi obtained from Pope Honorius III permission to represent the mystery of Christmas in the form of a Crib.

Crosier — The bishop's staff.

Crucifix — A sacramental bearing the image of Christ on a cross placed over an altar where Mass is to be offered, also used with devotion by the faithful.

Cruets — Small vessels for wine and water for the celebration of Mass, made of glass, gold or silver.

Crypt — A secret vault to which the bodies of martyrs were brought before burial. The term is now applied to a burial place for dignitaries under the altar of a church, or the basement of a church used for worship or burial.

Cult — The veneration of a person or thing. Private veneration may be paid to anyone of whose holiness we are certain, but public devotion may be paid only to the Saints of God.

Curia — The Sacred Congregations.

Custos — In the Franciscan Order, a superior presiding over a number of convents called collectively a custody.

Dark Ages — Term erroneously applied to the Middle Ages to give the impression that there was no progress during the Ages of Faith. The term, "dark," is now applied only to the first half of the period.

Deacon — The word means minister. Such an order has existed from the earliest times. Today, deacons merely assist the priest in the celebration of Solemn Mass and on certain occasions may preach and baptize.

Deaconess—A woman who performed certain functions, notably at baptism, for the female sex in the early Church, particularly in the East. The office disappeared in the Church by the twelfth century. The office was not an order, as the Sacrament of Orders can be received only by a man. Some Protestant sects still have deaconesses.

Dean—An ecclesiastical official; the head of a cathedral or collegiate chapter; a vicar forane or episcopal assistant. A Dean of Peculiars is one in charge of a church or district, exempt from the jurisdiction of the bishop of the diocese in which it is situated.

Dean of the Sacred College—The president of the College of Cardinals, who calls the College together, conducts its deliberations and represents it abroad.

Death—The cessation of mortal life; an experience common to all men. Death is an effect of sin.

Decalogue—The Ten Commandments of God. (See Commandments.)

Decorations, Papal—Given to laymen of exemplary character who have promoted the welfare of society, the Church or the papacy. The titles are: prince, baron and count. The papal orders of knighthood are: Supreme Order of Christ, Order of Pius IX, Order of Gregory the Great, Order of St. Sylvester, Order of the Golden Spur, Order of the Holy Sepulchre. Other decorations are the medals Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice, Benemerenti, Holy Land.

Dedication of Churches—This means the act whereby a church is solemnly set apart for the worship of God. It is a custom carried over from the Jewish religion and imposed as a law by Pope Evaristus. Having once been consecrated, a church cannot be transferred to common use. The act of consecration must be done by a bishop.

Definitors—Members of the governing council of an order, each one having a decisive vote equal with the general or provincial superior.

Despair—A deliberate yielding to the conviction that one's sins are unpardonable; a grievous offense against God's goodness and mercy.

Detachment—The withholding of affection from creatures and all earthly things to give it to God alone.

Detraction—The destruction of a good name by the revelation of a fault or crime, whether or not the fact be true. Restitution must be made according to the damage done. The only time when faults may be revealed is to prevent evil by informing prudent persons.

Devil—The fallen angel, Lucifer, who sinned by pride but who still possesses the knowledge he had and may exercise influence over living and inanimate things, as in a case of diabolical possession.

Devil's Advocate—Popular name for the Promoter of the Faith who raises all possible objections in the cause of beatification.

Devotion—A pious practice in honor of Our Lord, the Blessed Virgin, the angels or saints.

Dies Irae—Hymn used as the Sequence in Requiem Masses, written in the thirteenth century by the Franciscan, Thomas of Celano.

Diocese—A section of a country and its population which is governed by a bishop. The word originally meant administration and was used under the Roman law.

Discalced—Applied to religious who go barefoot or wear sandals. The practice of so doing was introduced in the Western Church by St. Francis of Assisi.

Disciple—A follower of our Lord or the apostles. Our Lord had some seventy disciples.

Disciplina arcana—Lat. "discipline of secret"—in the Ancient Church the knowledge of the Trinity and of some of the sacraments was kept from catechumens in order to shield these teachings from ridicule or misinterpretation.

Discipline — Systematic training under authority; also punishment given with a view to correction.

Dismissio Ipso Facto — Lat. ipso facto, by the fact itself — referring to acts which by their very performance carry the dismissal of a religious from his or her community, such as flight with a person of the opposite sex even without the intention to marry.

Dispensation — This is the relaxation of a law in a particular case. A law made for the general good may not be beneficial in a special instance wherefore a dispensation from one in authority may be obtained. Pastors, bishops, and religious superiors may dispense. A dispensation is granted from fasting, abstinence, certain vows, reading the office, etc.

Dissolution of Marriage — If there is no intercourse after a valid marriage, it may be dissolved by an act of the Pope at the request of one or both parties, providing there is just cause of a private or public nature.

Divination — Seeking to know future or hidden things by unlawful means such as dreams, necromancy, spiritism, examination of entrails, astrology, augury, omens, palmistry, drawing straws, dice, cards, etc.

Divine Office — The official prayer by which the Church through her clergy, daily offers adoration and supplication to God. It is sometimes recited publicly for the laity, and the daily recitation is observed by some orders of nuns, and as a devotional practice by some of the laity. It consists of psalms, hymns, prayers, and readings from the Bible, patristic homilies and lives of the saints. It is also called Canonical Hours.

Divine Right of Kings — A claim to absolute authority by civil rulers, regardless of how they rule, approved by Luther and Melancthon but never by the Church. Authority originates in God, and resides in the people who entrust it to reliable agents.

Divorce — A legal separation of married persons. There are three types: absolute, separating from the bond of matrimony, which is what is commonly understood by the term today; from the bed, making the denial of the marriage debt lawful; from the bed and board, by which the rights of cohabitation are denied. The matrimonial bond is indissoluble but an annulment may be decreed. The State has no right to grant divorces since it has no authority to annul a valid marriage.

Doctor of the Church — Title given to one who is ascribed as possessing learning to such an eminent degree that he is fitted to be a doctor not only in the Church but of the Church. Great sanctity must also be present and finally the title must be conferred by the Pope or a General Council.

Dogma — A truth contained in the word of God, written or unwritten (Scripture or Tradition), and proposed by the Church for universal belief.

Dogmas, Principal — Outstanding defined teachings of the Church are: The Church has the authority to interpret the Scriptures upon which the Catholic rule of faith is based; the Pope is infallible when speaking ex cathedra; there are three Persons in God — the Father, Son and Holy Ghost; through an act of disobedience Adam and Eve fell from grace and lost immunity from disorderly affections of the body and also the immortality of the body which punishments were passed on to the human race; Christ redeemed the human race from original sin; Christ was God as well as man; salvation is accomplished through co-operation with divine grace; grace is distributed by means of the Sacraments; man's present life will end in heaven, hell or purgatory.

Douay Bible — The name given to the English translation of the Vulgate version of the Bible, which was begun at Douay, France, and continued at Rheims; hence called also, the Douay-Rheims version. It was revised by Bishop Challoner in 1750. This Challoner-Rheims version has in turn been revised by Catholic scholars under the patronage of the Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. The New Testament was completed in 1941, and published in the United States.

Dowry — Property which a wife brings to her husband in marriage or that which a religious woman brings to her community to be invested for her support until death, when it becomes the property of the community. Should the religious leave, the property is returned without interest.

Doxology—The Doxology, or "ascription of glory to the Trinity," is usually called, from its initial words, the "Glory be to the Father." The first part of the Gloria dates back to the third or fourth century, and arose, no doubt, from the form of Baptism. The concluding words, "As it was in the beginning," are of later origin. The Gloria is recited after each psalm in the Divine Office said by the priests, and is also said after the "Judica," at the beginning of Mass.

The Glory be to the Father is called the lesser Doxology. The greater Doxology is the Gloria in Excelsis Deo, which is very often recited at Mass. It is believed to be of Eastern origin and is to be found in the Apostolic Constitutions in a form substantially the same as that now used. The common belief is that St. Hilary, Bishop of Poitiers (A. D. 366), translated it into Latin.

Dulia — Veneration or homage paid to the saints.

Duty — A moral obligation determined by conscience or right reason. The law of God prevails over that of men.

Easter Duty — The obligation of Catholics to approach the sacrament of Penance and receive the Eucharist during the Easter time: in the United States from the first Sunday in Lent to Trinity Sunday.

Easter Water — Holy water blessed with special ceremonies and distributed on Holy Saturday.

Ecstasy—A state of supernatural contemplation in which the senses are suspended; conferred by God upon certain saints.

Edification — The giving of good example to one another by Christians.

Ejaculations — Short prayers, many of which are indulgenced.

Elevation — The Elevation of the Host and chalice immediately after Consecration was introduced in detestation of the denial of transubstantiation by Berengarius. The practice started about the year 1100. The further custom of ringing a bell at the Elevation began in France during the twelfth century.

Emancipation — The abolition of penal laws against Catholics in England and Ireland.

Ember Days — Wednesday, Friday and Saturday following December 13th, the first Sunday in Lent, Pentecost, and September 14th. They are days of fast and abstinence instituted for the purpose of doing penance and thus purifying the soul at the beginning of each quarter of the year.

Emblem — An object or device in Christian art, denoting the virtues or actions of the saints, as, for example, keys for St. Peter, to whom Christ said: "I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."

Encyclical — A letter addressed by the Pope to all the bishops in communion with him, in which he condemns prevalent errors, or explains the line of conduct which Christians ought to take in reference to urgent practical questions, such as education and the relation between the Church and State.

End Justifies the Means — This principle has frequently but falsely been attributed to members of the Society of Jesus. Father Roh, S. J., in the year 1852 publicly offered 1,000 guineas to anyone who in the judgment of the law faculty of Heidelberg University could prove that any Jesuit had ever taught this doctrine, or any equivalent. The money has never been claimed.

Epikel — Greek, "reasonable" — a reasonable interpretation of the law. For instance, a mother may reasonably be excused from Mass on Sunday if there be no one present to care for her infant or sick child.

Episcopate — The dignity and sacramental powers bestowed upon a bishop at his consecration; the body of bishops collectively.

Epistle — A selection from one of the letters of the apostles, read at Mass after the Collects; also called a lesson.

Equivocation—The use of phrases or words having more than one meaning in order to conceal information which the questioner has no right to seek. It is permissible to equivocate in answering impertinent and unjust questions.

Eternity — The perennial interminable, perfect possession of life in its fullest totality without beginning or end — attributed to God, Who has no past or future. Also applied to man's destined state of eternal happiness or damnation, in so far as it is endless.

Ethics — The science of the morality of human acts in the light of human reason. Ethics comprises personal, social, economic, political and international activities.

Eucharist — The Church regards the Eucharist as a sacrament and as a sacrifice. Considered as a sacrament, the Eucharist is the true Body and Blood of Christ under the appearance of bread and wine. Like other sacraments, it was instituted by Christ. Considered as a sacrifice, it is the Mass, in which Christ offers Himself in an unbloody manner, as He once offered Himself in a bloody manner on the cross.

Eucharistic Congress — An international or national assemblage of Catholics to honor the Blessed Sacrament. The first owed its inspiration to Bishop Gaston de Segur and was held in Lille, France, in 1881.

Eugenics — The study of heredity and environment for the physical and mental improvement of future generations. Extreme eugenics is untenable since it uses immoral means to a good end, such as compulsory breeding of the select, birth control among the poor and sterilization of the unfit. Moderate eugenicists recommend the segregation of the unfit and are to be commended for that.

Evangelists — The authors of the four gospels, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

Evil — A condition resulting from imperfection of constitution or action; an absence, defect or perversion of action called also, sin.

Evolution — The development from rudimentary conditions to more highly organized results. Widespread evolution has been accepted as a fact but has not been proven. Catholics may be friendly to hypotheses but should refuse to accept appearances as proofs. There is no proof that the human organism was generated from lower animals, nor that the soul is generated by human parents.

Examination of Conscience—Self-examination as a preparation for confession of sins.

Ex Cathedra — Lat. "from the chair" — referring to infallible decrees of the Pope on questions of faith or morals when he speaks with supreme authority from the chair of St. Peter.

Excommunication — An ecclesiastical censure by which a Christian is separated from the Church. It is a power included in the binding and loosing, given by Christ to Peter and the Apostles: "If he will not hear the Church, let him be to thee as the heathen and publican" (Matt. xviii, 17). Major excommunication deprives one of all Church communication, is equal to anathema and is publicly pronounced. Minor excommunication deprives one of participation in the sacraments.

The effects of excommunication are summed up: As a man by Baptism is made a member of the Church in which there is a communication with all spiritual goods, so by excommunication he is deprived of the same spiritual goods — until he makes amends and satisfies the Church. The censure may be removed in the Sacrament of Penance.

Exorcism — The ceremony of driving out demons from persons, places or things; based on the teachings of the Bible.

Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament — The Church has always adored Christ in the Eucharist but it is only in times comparatively modern that the Holy Sacrament has been publicly exposed for the adoration of the faithful. As early as 1373 we read of the bishop carrying the Host in procession, the monstrance in which it was borne having sides of glass. Before that time the Host was generally carried in vessels which hid the Host from view. Later in the sixteenth century the Host was exposed more frequently, especially in times of public distress, generally for forty continuous hours. There are various rules with regard to the public exposition which cannot take place without the permission of the bishop or by apostolic indult. Twelve candles of wax must burn before the Host.

Extreme Unction — Extreme Unction may be defined as a sacrament in which the sick, in danger of death, are anointed by the priest for the health of soul and body. St. James describes the nature and effects of this sacrament: "Is any man sick among you? Let him bring in the priests of the Church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord" (v, 14).

Faculties—Powers granted by an ecclesiastical superior to his priests, to hear confessions, etc.

Faculties of the Soul — Imagination, memory, understanding, and will.

Faith — A firm, unshaken belief based on the word of God.

Faith, Act of—Belief in the truth of a thing, not because it is proven but because God says it is true.

Faith, Rule of—For Catholics the Bible and tradition on the authority of the Church; for Protestants, the Bible alone.

Faith and Reason — The Church teaches that reason may know certainly God's existence, His attributes, and the existence of revelation. Reason cannot understand however, mysteries such as the Blessed Trinity. Faith and reason, therefore, are of mutual assistance to each other.

Family — The foundation of society, consisting of husband, wife and children. The perfect example of family life is the Holy Family. Divorce, birth control, and outside interests injure the family and threaten both Church and State.

Fanaticism — Extreme unreasonable speech or conduct. Since religion deeply affects the mind, religious fanatics often perpetrate monstrous acts.

Fascism — A political system which makes the good of the state paramount and places control in the hands of a dictator. Fascism was established in 1922 in Italy under the dictatorship of Mussolini.

Fast — Abstinence from food or drink before receiving the Eucharist; the taking of only one complete meal a day, with small quantities in the morning and evening on appointed days. The Communion fast begins at midnight of the accepted time in a region.

Fast Days—Ember days, the vigils of Pentecost, Assumption, All Saints, and Christmas, and all days of Lent up to noon Holy Saturday.

Fathers of the Church — Eminent teachers or writers who instructed the early Church in the teachings of the Apostles.

Fear is a mental agitation or trepidation because of present or future danger. Grave fear should not be allowed to deter us from duty. Full responsibility, however, is not attached to evil done out of fear. Marriage contracted through fear of death or injury is invalid.

Field Mass — Mass celebrated in the open in time of war, or on special occasions with the bishop's permission.

First Communion — First reception of the Host, generally by children, who should be carefully prepared beforehand.

Fisherman's Ring — A signet ring engraved with the effigy of St. Peter fishing from a boat and encircled with the name of the reigning Pope. It is used to seal briefs. It is broken up after each pope's death.

Five Scapulars — Any five of the eighteen scapulars approved by the Church may be worn together.

Fixed Festivals — Feasts that occur the same date every year, such as Christmas, December 25; Circumcision, January 1; Purification, February 2; Annunciation, March 25.

Flectamus Genua — Lat. "Let us bend the knee" — one of the prayers of the Mass on Ember days, and certain days of Lent.

Flowers on the Altar — Plants, cut or artificial flowers may be used excepting during Advent, when they are allowed only on the third Sunday, and during Lent, when they are allowed only on the fourth.

Forgiveness of Sin — Catholics believe that forgiven sins are removed from the soul. God can forgive sin either immediately, in answer to an act of perfect contrition, or mediately through the Sacrament of Baptism or Penance.

Fortune Telling — If indulged in for the purpose of seriously obtaining information it is a grievous sin against the first commandment. It should not even be indulged in for sport because of the danger to faith.

Forty Hours' Devotion — Solemn exposition of the Blessed Sacrament for forty hours, commemorating the forty hours during which the body of Christ rested in the tomb. These hours are interrupted in the United States for the convenience of the faithful. A plenary indulgence is granted to all contrite persons who have approached the Sacraments of Penance and the Eucharist, visited the church and prayed for the intentions of the Holy Father.

Freedom of Thought — There is no freedom in error. One is not free, for instance, to believe that the Church has erred in its beliefs or teachings.

Freedom of Worship — A mixture of religion and politics often destroys the freedom of worshipping God according to the dictates of one's conscience.

Freemasonry — A religious sect diametrically opposed to Christianity. It has its own altars, temples, priesthood, worship, ritual, ceremonies, festivals; its own creed; its own morality. The chief reason why Freemasonry was first condemned by Pope Clement XII was that it professed to represent a primitive religion in which all men agree. This is in marked contrast to the Catholic idea of revelation. This still remains one of the chief Catholic objections, since it is evident that apostasy frequently follows entrance into a Masonic lodge. The Masonic oath was likewise condemned in 1738 as immoral in principle since it imposes blind obedience. Another reason for the Catholic attitude is found in the injuries inflicted on the Church by organized Masonry. In regard to foreign countries this is very evident. In the United States, Masonry, especially the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite 33rd degree through its official organ, "The New Age," has shown itself as hostile and bent upon the destruction of Catholicism. "The American Freemason" through its editorial pages has emphasized that there can be no peace, nor even truce, between Freemasonry and the official Roman Church. Many of the leaders of Freemasonry, Pike, Richardson, Buck and Stewart, have shown open and unmistakable antagonism to the Catholic Church. Eight different Popes in seventeen different pronouncements, and at least six different local Councils have condemned Masonry.

The majority of American Masons go no further than the Third Degree or Blue Lodge system and have no antagonism toward the Church. Many indeed are not even cognizant of the real aims and purposes of the organization. They have joined the Masons for social and business reasons. To these many and benevolent Masons, not interested in the history or fundamental principles of Masonry, the attitude and position of the Catholic Church as regards Masonry is bewildering. They can see no justification for such condemnation. However, a study of the question pro and con will show any fair mind the reasons for the action of the Catholic Church. A thorough and accurate Catholic view of Masonry is contained in "The Catholic Encyclopedia" where the subject is discussed at length.

Freethinker — One who bases his beliefs on the findings of his reason and refuses to accept the Revelation.

Free Will — The faculty of making a reasonable choice among motives. The Council of Trent solemnly condemned those who taught that from the sin of Adam man lost his free will.

Friar — A term originally applied to members of mendicant orders, now to monastic and military orders also: Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, Augustinians, Servites, Minims, Third Order Regulars of St. Francis, Capuchins, etc.

Fruits of the Holy Ghost — Charity, joy, peace, patience, benignity, goodness, longanimity, mildness, faith, modesty, continence, chastity.

Funeral Pall — Black cloth with a white cross spread over a coffin during the last rites.

Funeral Rites — Mass for the deceased, absolution and interment by the priest. Black is the color used, except in the case of infants, when white is employed.

Gallicanism — A body of doctrines which found particular favor in the French or Gallican Church, and limited the power and authority of the Pope in favor of the Bishops, and extended unduly the power of the State over ecclesiastical affairs; condemned by Pope Alexander VIII in 1693.

Gambling — Staking large sums of money in pure chance is often the occasion of staking beyond means, risking other people's money or property, or losing what rightfully belongs to one's family.

Gaudete Sunday — Third Sunday in Advent; named from the first word of the Introit of the day, Gaudete, meaning "Rejoice."

Gehenna — A Jewish name of a valley invariably used by Christ to designate hell.

Genuflection — Genuflection is a natural sign of adoration or reverence frequently used in the Church. The faithful genuflect when passing the tabernacle; the priest genuflects many times during the Mass. A double genuflection, i. e., one on both knees, is made on entering or leaving a church where the Blessed Sacrament is exposed.

Gethsemane — Name in Hebrew meaning "oil press" — a plot of ground on the Mount of Olives where the Saviour spent much time with His disciples. The hours He spent there in prayer the night before He died are known as the Agony in the Garden.

Gifts of the Holy Ghost — Wisdom, understanding, counsel, fortitude, knowledge, piety, fear of the Lord.

Gluttony — Eating too often, too much, too costly food, or living to eat instead of eating to live.

God — In the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds we begin by professing our belief in the one God, creator of heaven and earth. The Fourth Lateran Council and the Vatican Council define God as "The one absolutely and infinitely perfect spirit who is the Creator of all." The latter Council also adds that we can, by the natural light of reason and from the consideration of created things, attain to a "sure" knowledge of God. Taking the above definition for granted, we proceed to state the following propositions of St. Thomas proving from reason the existence of God. In brief, his argument from design is as follows: There are plain marks in the mechanism of created things which show that they are the work of an intelligent being. They display a high degree of wisdom united to immense power. Plainly this intelligence does not reside in the things themselves. Therefore, the world was created and is governed by an intelligent being whom we call God.

Godparents — Godfather and god-mother, sponsors at Baptism, who assume guardianship over the baptized, instruct them and see that they carry out their baptismal vows. Godparents contract spiritual relationship with the persons for whom they act as Godparents.

Golden Rose — An ornament blessed by the Pope on Laetare Sunday and sent to outstanding Catholics annually since the year 1050. The office of Bearer of the Golden Rose, abolished during the pontificate of Leo XIII, was re-established by Pius XII in 1941.

Good Friday — Friday in Holy Week. The day on which Christ died.

Gospel — The practice of reading the Gospels in the Christian assemblies is mentioned by Justin, Martyr, and prescribed in all the liturgies. The first Council of Orange, 441, and that of Valencia in Spain ordered the Gospel to be read after the Epistle and before the Offertory, in order that the catechumens might listen to the words of Christ and hear them explained by the bishop.

Grace — A supernatural gift of God bestowed upon angels or men for the purpose of fitting them for eternal life. Since the fall of Adam we receive grace only through Christ. Without it eternal life cannot be obtained.

Grace at Meals — Prayers said before meals, asking a blessing, and after meals, giving thanks.

Gregorian Chant — Church music.

Gregorian Masses — A series of thirty Masses celebrated on thirty consecutive days for the soul of one specified deceased person.

Gremial — A cloth placed over the knees of the bishop during various ceremonies.

Guardian Angels are angels appointed to protect and guide each individual soul through life.

Habit — The disposition to do things easily by repetition. Also the dress worn by religious.

Hagiography — Writings or documents about saints, holy persons, holiness.

Happiness — St. Thomas taught that happiness is unattainable in this life since it consists in the contemplation of God. Incomplete happiness may be obtained by self-restraint, detachment and sacrifice of transitory enjoyment for future happiness.

Heart of Jesus (Sacred Heart) — The special and formal devotion to the heart of Jesus owes its origin to a French Visitation nun, St. Margaret Mary Alacoque, who lived in the latter part of the seventeenth century. Our Lord Himself appeared to her and declared that this worship was most acceptable to Him. Permission to celebrate the Feast of the Sacred Heart on the Friday after the octave of Corpus Christi was extended to the whole Church in 1856.

Heart of Mary, Immaculate — The principles on which this devotion rests are the same as those which are the foundation of the Catholic devotion to the Sacred Heart. The devotion to the Immaculate Heart was first propagated by John Eudes, who died in 1680. In 1855, Pope Pius IX extended the feast — which is kept either on the Sunday within the octave of the Assumption or on the third Sunday after Pentecost — to the whole Church.

Heaven — The place and state where God will give virtue its due reward, since vice often triumphs and virtue goes unrewarded here on earth. There we will see God face to face, be like unto Him in glory, and enjoy eternal happiness.

Hell — The place and state of eternal punishment demanded by God's justice as the lot of the damned.

Heresy — Heresy is defined in many places in the Old Testament. The accurate meaning of the term heretic is given by Tertullian. The name, he says, applies to those who of their own will choose false doctrine, either instituting sects themselves, or receiving the false doctrine of sects already founded. Formal heresy is a most grievous sin, for it involves rebellion against God, Who requires us to submit our understandings to the doctrines of His Church.

Hermits — A hermit or an anchorite is a dweller in the desert. St. Paul was the first hermit. After ninety years spent in solitude he died in the year 342.

Heroic Act of Charity — The offering to God for the souls in purgatory all the satisfactory works performed during life and all suffrages accruing to one after death. It is revocable at will.

Hierarchy — According to its ordinary signification, the word applies to the clergy only with varieties of meaning: 1. There is hierarchy of divine right, consisting, under the primacy of St. Peter and his successors, of bishops, priests, and deacons. 2. In the hierarchy of Orders we have by divine institution the diaconate, the priesthood and the episcopate; by ecclesiastical institution the subdiaconate and the four minor orders of porter, reader, exorcist and acolyte. 3. There is also the hierarchy of jurisdiction. This is of ecclesiastical institution and consists of the administrative and judicial authorities which, under the supreme pastorate of the Holy See, are charged with the maintenance of the purity of the faith and of union among Christians, with the conservation of discipline, etc.

Holy Ghost — The Third Person of the Blessed Trinity Who proceeds from the Father and the Son and is, in every respect, equal to Them.

Holy Hour — Form of devotion taught to St. Margaret Mary Alacoque by our Lord. The hour may be divided into parts for prayer, reflection, meditation and congregational singing.

Holy Orders — A sacrament instituted by Christ, by which spiritual power is given and grace is conferred for the performance of the sacred duties of the priesthood.

Holy Saturday — Vigil of Easter. Lent ends at noon on this day.

Holy See — The papal power, referring to the Pope personally or the various papal congregations and tribunals; Rome, the official seat of the Church.

Holy Spirit — The Third Person of the Holy Trinity. Name in modern usage preferred to Holy Ghost.

Holy Thursday — Thursday in Holy Week. The day on which Our Lord instituted the Holy Eucharist and the priesthood.

Holy Water — Water blessed by the Church is a sacramental, and has been in constant use among Catholics since the time of the Apostles. Washing with water is a natural symbol of spiritual purification. "I will pour out upon you clean water and you shall be clean." (Ezechiel, xxvi, 25). On Holy Saturday water and salt are exorcised by the priest and so withdrawn from the power of Satan, who since the fall has corrupted and abused even inanimate things. Prayers are said that the water and salt may promote the spiritual and temporal health of those to whom they are applied and drive away the devil with his rebel angels. Finally the water and salt are mingled in the name of the Trinity. The water thus blessed becomes a means of grace.

Holy Week — The week preceding Easter in which the Church commemorates Christ's death and burial. In the East, Holy Week was distinguished from the rest of Lent by extreme strictness of the fast.

Hosanna — Hebrew word meaning "O Lord, save, we pray."

Host, The — Christ present on the altar under the appearances both of bread and wine; Christ present under the form of bread alone; the bread before it is consecrated. It is in this meaning that the word is employed in the ordinary language of Catholics at the present day, and the word in this sense occurs in the Offertory of the Roman missal, when the priest prays, "Receive, O Holy Father, this unspotted Host, etc.," taking the bread, not for what it is, but for what it is to become at the consecration of the Mass.

Humeral Veil, The — An oblong scarf of the same material as the vestments worn by the subdeacon at High Mass, when he holds the paten between the Offertory and Pater Noster; worn by the priest when he raises the monstrance to give benediction with the Blessed Sacrament, and by priests and deacons when they remove the Blessed Sacrament from one place to another, or carry it in procession. It is worn around the shoulders, and the paten, pyx or monstrance is wrapped in it.

Humility — A virtue which restrains the appetite for high things, recognizes natural weakness and checks presumption. Through it we realize our dependence on God without Whom we are nothing.

Hypnotism — A profound artificial sleep in which the mind is awake and does the bidding of the hypnotist. Hypnotism should not be practised except by reliable medical men because of the danger to body and soul.

Hypostatic Union — Two natures united in one person in Christ.

Idolatry — Worship of any but the true God. Catholic veneration of images is not directed towards the images themselves, but only as they represent the original.

I H S — The first three letters of the name of Jesus in Greek.

Illegitimacy — Condition of one born out of wedlock.

Immaculate Conception — Theologians distinguish between active and passive conception. The former consists in the act of the parents which causes the body of the child to be formed and organized, and so prepared for the reception of the rational soul which is infused by God. The latter takes place at the moment when the rational soul is actually infused into the body by God. It is the passive, not the active conception which Catholics have in view when they speak of the Immaculate Conception. For there was nothing miraculous in Mary's generation. She was begotten like other children. The body, while still inanimate or without the soul, could not be sanctified or preserved from original sin, for it is the soul, not the body, which is capable of receiving either the gifts of grace or the stain of sin. And although the Blessed Virgin sprang from the fallen race of Adam, and thereby incurred the "debt" or liability to contract original sin, still in Mary's case God's mercy did interpose. For the sake of Him Who was to be born of her and for "His merits foreseen," grace was poured into her soul at the first instant of its being. The best summary of the Church's doctrine is very nicely contained in these few words: "Thou art innocent," says Bossuet, addressing Christ, "by nature, Mary only by grace; Thou by excellence, she only by privilege; Thou as Redeemer, she as the first of those whom Thy precious blood has purified."

This doctrine was defended by the heroic Franciscan philosopher and theologian, Blessed John Scotus, and it was finally defined as an article of faith and a truth contained in the original teachings of the apostles, by Pope Pius IX, on December 8, 1854, in the presence of more than 200 bishops.

Immersion — Though valid, plunging the subject in water for Baptism is no longer used by the Latin Church.

Immortality — The survival of the soul after death, reasonably proven from the spirituality of the soul and man's desire for perfect happiness.

Immunity of the Clergy — Exemption from military duty and civil office outside the clerical state, such as judge, juror or magistrate. This exemption is generally recognized by governments.

Impediment — Condition that makes marriages unlawful or invalid. There are two kinds of impediments: hindering and diriment.

Impotency — Physical incurable unfitness for matrimony which existed before marriage. Impotency is a diriment impediment; sterility is not an impediment.

Imprimatur — Lat. "it may be printed" — placed at the beginning of a publication to show it has complied with the Church law, and been examined by the censor.

Impurity — Unlawful indulgence in sex pleasures by those married or unmarried.

Incarnation — The union of the divine and human natures in Jesus Christ.

Incense — Incense was introduced into the Church services when the persecution by the heathen ceased, and the splendor of churches and ritual began. The use of incense carries with it many mystical significations. It symbolizes the zeal with which the faithful should be consumed; the good odor of Christian virtue; the ascent of prayer to God. It is used before the Introit, at the Gospel, Offertory and Elevation in High Mass; at the Magnificat in vespers; at funerals, etc.

Incest — Carnal intercourse with relatives; doubly sinful because of the irreverence to a relative.

Index of Prohibited Books — Books Catholics are not permitted to read without special permission.

Indifference — Carelessness in practicing the faith one believes.

Indissolubility of Marriage — A valid marriage ratified by cohabitation cannot be dissolved except by death. While divorce is not permissible, a separation may be obtained for grave reasons.

Indulgence — The remission of punishment still due to sin after sacramental absolution. An indulgence cannot be obtained for unforgiven sin. The guilt of sin is forgiven in the Sacrament of Penance. However, this still leaves a debt of temporal punishment, which is cleared by the granting of an indulgence. A plenary indulgence remits all the temporal punishment due to sin. A partial indulgence remits a portion of the temporal punishment due to sin. To gain a plenary indulgence it is necessary to detest all sin and have the purpose of avoiding even the least venial sin. Confession, Communion and prayers for the Pope's intention also are prescribed.

Indult — A temporary or personal favor granted for a period of time by an ecclesiastical authority such as a dispensation from fasting.

Infallibility — The Church is preserved from error in teaching faith or morals due to the assistance of the Holy Ghost, the spirit of truth. The Pope must speak "ex cathedra" before his teachings are to be accepted as infallible.

Infidel — One who is not among the faithful of Christ. Popularly, the term is applied to all who reject Christianity as a divine revelation. Those who have never heard of Christianity are not in popular language called infidels, but heathens.

Infused Virtues — Supernatural virtues like faith, hope and charity not acquired by repeated acts of our own. Natural virtues such as prudence and temperance are also considered infused when sanctifying grace is given in order to practice them more easily.

In Memoriam — Lat. "in memory of" — inscription generally found on tombstones.

In Partibus Infidelium — Lat. "in heathen parts" — referring to titular sees.

In petto — Italian "in the breast," or "secretly" — refers to the creation of a cardinal whose name the Pope withholds from publication.

Inquisition, Spanish — This must not be identified and confused with the ecclesiastical Inquisition. The Spanish Inquisition was a mixed tribunal with the civil element predominating. Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain established it in 1481. The principal purpose of this tribunal was to seek out the convert Mohammedans and the convert Jews to Christianity who were suspected of wishing to return to their old religion. The former were called Moriscos and the latter, Maranos.

Many of these Mohammedan and Jewish converts while openly professing Christianity, and some even having become priests and bishops, secretly had returned to their old beliefs, and thus made a mockery of the Christianity they professed. It must be clearly understood that the purpose of this Inquisition was not the persecution of the Jews as such, or of those Jews who had not been converted to Christianity. It was directed primarily against those known as the conversos. At a later date the scope of the Inquisition was broadened to include crimes of murder, immorality, smuggling, usury and other offenses.

The king appointed the Grand Inquisitor and the other officials, and also signed the decrees, and the penalties were inflicted in his name. Pope Sixtus IV had approved of this Spanish Inquisition because he was left under the impression that it was to be an ecclesiastical tribunal. When the true state of affairs was made known it was too late to do anything except to protest against the excesses of the Inquisition.

This institution must not be viewed from a twentieth-century standpoint, but rather from the point of view of the times in which it existed. Heresy was a state offense, a crime against both Church and State and punished as such. Even during the Protestant Reformation the same view was held. The Rev. John Laux in his "Church History" makes the following comment with regard to the Protestant position as to the punishment of heretics: "The Protestant Reformation did nothing to change the traditional views in regard to the persecution of heretics. In Protestant as well as in Catholic countries heretics were imprisoned, tortured, and put to death by fire or otherwise. It was not until 1677 that the death penalty against heretics was removed from the statute books in England. Philip of Spain considered heresy to be no less dangerous to the state than Elizabeth of England considered Catholicism to be; and Philip's prisons were no more unsavory and noisome than the English prisons of the time. Luther, Melancthon, Calvin and Theodore of Beza explicitly approved of capital punishment for obstinate heretics. Calvin even wrote a special work in defense of the principle that 'Heretics are to be coerced by the sword,' after he had burned Michael Servetus at the stake."

I. N. R. I.—The inscription placed atop the cross at Christ's crucifixion meaning "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews."

Insanity — Insane suicides are given Christian burial since they are not responsible for their acts. Baptism and Confirmation may be administered to the insane and Communion given in saner moments or at death when Extreme Unction may also be given. The Church opposes the sterilization but approves the segregation of the insane.

Inspiration — Pope Leo XIII in his encyclical, "Providentissimus Deus," speaking on the subject of inspiration has the following to say with regard to the Holy Ghost and the writers of the Scriptures inspired by Him: "For, by supernatural power, He so moved and impelled them to write — He was so present to them — that the things which He ordered, and those only, they first rightly understood, then willed faithfully to write down, and finally expressed in apt words and with infallible truth. Otherwise, it could not be said that He was the Author of the entire Scripture." (See section on Bible.)

Interdict — A penalty imposed upon a group of the faithful for serious violations of Church laws. During an interdict the faithful are debarred from receiving certain sacraments, from liturgical services and Christian burial. Holy Communion, however, is given, marriages may be celebrated and the sacraments given to the dying.

Internuncio — A papal legate to countries of lesser importance; equivalent to ministers of the second class.

Intolerance — We should have no patience with error but out of charity should be tolerant with the erring.

Irregularity — An impediment to the clerical state such as illegitimacy, bigamy, bodily defect, apostasy, heresy, homicide, attempted suicide.

Itinerary — Prayers, including the Benedictus, and four Collects recited when clerics set out upon a journey.

Joys of the Blessed Virgin Mary — Annunciation, Visitation, Nativity of Christ, Adoration of the Magi, Finding in the Temple, Resurrection and Assumption.

Judgment, Last — Final judgment by Christ after the general Resurrection, when every good deed and every sin of every human being will be known to all, without embarrassment however to those who die in the state of grace.

Judgment, Particular — Judgment immediately after death followed by entrance into heaven, hell or purgatory.

Justice — A virtue by which every man is given his due. God owes nothing to His creatures, but since He loves good and hates evil, He punishes evil and rewards good.

Justification — The remission of sin and the infusion of sanctifying grace at Baptism; or its recovery in the Sacrament of Penance when lost through mortal sin.

Keys, Power of the — The spiritual jurisdiction of the Church, centered in the hands of the Pope.

Ku Klux Klan — The order of the Ku Klux Klan existed from 1866 to 1869 without any semblance of its later lawlessness and bigotry. Some historians claim that in its early stages it was a social fraternity. However, the Klan soon after the Civil War, realizing the terror which it struck in the mind of the Negro began a crusade of violence to "protect the constitutional rights of the whites" by oppression of the freed Negro slaves. It claimed mercy and patriotism as its tenets and it gained a free hand during the days of Reconstruction in the South. President Grant was forced to suppress it.

As a secret fraternal organization, the Ku Klux Klan was reborn at Atlanta, Georgia, in 1915, as a political, religious body. This was pledged to uphold the Constitution by opposing Catholics, Jews, Negroes and the foreign born. Scandals and lawlessness caused its decline in 1926. It sprang up again in 1928 and has been recruiting members in the North as well as the South since that time. However, it is now definitely marked as un-American and must take its place beside Communism, Nazism and other subversive groups inimical to true Americanism.

Labarum — The banner of the cross, used by Constantine in his campaigns.

Laetare Sunday — Fourth Sunday in Lent, also called Rose Sunday; named from the first word of the Introit of the day, Laetare, meaning "Rejoice."

Laicism — Church administration by laymen in the fields of education, marriage, hospitals, charity, maintenance of churches, convents, and institutions.

Lamps — Used in the Christian churches from earliest times for practical and symbolic purposes.

Language of the Church — The Church requires some of her clergy to use Greek, Syriac, Coptic, Armenian, Slavonic, in Mass, according to their rite just as strictly as she requires others to employ Latin.

Last Things, Four — Death, judgment, heaven, hell.

Latria — The honor and worship due to God alone.

Law as Influenced by the Church — From the beginning of Christianity, churchmen have influenced law by framing constitutions and opposing evils, such as usury.

Lay Brothers — Religious occupied with the secular affairs of a monastery, such as taking care of the sacristy, buildings, farms, household, and visitors. Very often they are artists and craftsmen.

Legate, Papal — An envoy of the Pope sent as his representative to a sovereign or government or on some special mission. Papal Legates are termed: legates a latere, nuncios, internuncios or apostolic delegates. Legates a latere are the highest form of legation and are sent on matters of international importance. The representative of the Pope on some special occasion, such as a Eucharistic Congress, is simply designated as papal legate.

Legitimation — Illegitimacy is removed if the parents marry. The Pope may legitimize children and remove irregularity for entrance into the clerical state.

Lent — The forty days fast beginning on Ash Wednesday and ending on Holy Saturday in memory of the forty days fast of our Lord in the desert. Sundays in Lent are not days of fast or abstinence. The name "Lent" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lencten, meaning spring, referring to the season in which the fast occurs.

Limbo — The place where the souls of the just were detained until the ascent of Christ into heaven; a place of rest and natural happiness in which unbaptized infants and others who die in original, but not in actual sin, are detained.

Litany — A prayer for private devotions or public liturgical services in the form of responsive petition. There are five litanies approved for public devotions: Litanies of Loreto, the Holy Name, All Saints, the Sacred Heart, and St. Joseph. Others may be used privately.

Little Office of the Blessed Virgin — Consists of psalms, lessons, and hymns in honor of the Blessed Virgin, arranged in seven hours like the Breviary Office, but much shorter. It is not influenced by the course of the Church year, except that the Alleluia is omitted in Lent, and that a change is made in the Office from Advent to the Purification. Its origin is shrouded in mystery, but it is believed to have been written about the middle of the eighth century.

Liturgical Movement — A movement within the Church to restore the full glory of the liturgy. Inaugurated at the Council of Trent, it was given great impetus by the Motu Proprio of Pope Pius X, 1903, ordering universal use of the Gregorian Chant, and of recent years has been generally activated by clergy and laity.

Liturgy — The public official service of the Church. It is used broadly to indicate all the public rites, ceremonies and prayers of the church; also the arrangement of those services in set forms, as the Roman Liturgy, in which sense it has the same meaning as rite. Thus, liturgical services are those contained in any official book of a rite; for example, Vespers is a liturgical service. Specifically, liturgy signifies the chief liturgical service, the Sacrifice of the Mass.

Lourdes — A French town in the Pyrenees famous for the shrine built where the Immaculate Virgin appeared to St. Bernadette Soubirous.

Lunula or Lunette — A crescent-shaped instrument for holding the Sacred Host when inserted in the monstrance.

Magi — Wise men who visited the Christ Child at Bethlehem. Their traditional names are Melchior, Gaspar and Baltasar.

Magic — Marvelous manifestations through the real or pretended intervention of spirits. Magic which invokes evil spirits has always been regarded as sinful.

Magnificat — Canticle recited by the Blessed Virgin when she visited her cousin, Elizabeth.

Mariology — A branch of theology treating of the life and prerogatives of the Blessed Virgin and the part she played in our redemption and sanctification.

Marks of the Church — The Council of Trent declared the four marks of the church to be: One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic.

Marriage without a Priest — When a priest will not be available for a period of time such as a month, a Catholic couple may marry by expressing mutual consent before two witnesses. Such a marriage also may be transacted when there is danger of death.

Martyr — A martyr is a witness for Christ. In early times the title was generally given to those who were distinguished witnesses for Christ; then to those who suffered for Him, and eventually, it became restricted to those who died for Him. Martyrdom is the voluntary endurance of death for the faith or some other act of virtue relating to God. Nowadays for anyone to be deemed a martyr, he must have either actually died of his sufferings or endured pains which would have caused his death were it not for miraculous intervention.

Martyrology — A catalogue of martyrs and other saints according to the calendar.

Mass — The Mass is the unbloody renewal of the Sacrifice of Our Lord upon the Cross. In it the priest, as the representative of Christ, offers to God the bread and wine, which he changes into the Body and Blood of Our Lord at the Consecration, and then consummates the sacrifice by consuming the Host and drinking the chalice at the Communion.

The Church has prescribed certain prayers and ceremonies for this Sacrifice, and these are universally followed throughout the entire Church, varying only in Rite. The name is derived from Lat., missa, as used in the phrase, "Ite missa est," spoken by the priest before the Last Gospel; this is the dismissal of the faithful, the Sacrifice being concluded, and gradually the term came to be applied to the entire Eucharistic Sacrifice.

Low Mass is read or recited by the priest. High Mass is sung by the celebrant. In Solemn High Mass there are three celebrants: the priest, deacon and subdeacon. Pontifical Mass is said by the Pope or according to the rites of such a Mass. Mass of the Presanctified is said on Good Friday, with the Host consecrated on Holy Thursday. Nuptial Mass is said at a marriage ceremony, to ask a special blessing upon the married couple. Mass of the Dead is said at a funeral or in commemoration of the departed.

Master of Ceremonies — He who directs the proceedings of a rite or observance, such as assisting the celebrant of a Mass.

Master of Novices — He who trains novices of a religious order or congregation. He must be at least thirty-five years of age, have been a religious for ten years, be eminent for prudence, charity, piety, and the observance of the rules of the society.

Matrimony — The conjugal union of man and woman, contracted between two qualified persons, obliging them to live together throughout life. The word matrimony means motherhood; hers is the thought of conceiving, of bringing forth, and of training her offspring. Marriage is a natural contract but Christ has raised it to the dignity of a sacrament. It is a union which gives to each party power over the other, forging an indissoluble bond of partnership. Marriage is not a mere donation but a mutual agreement, and hence the voluntary consent of both contracting parties is essential. This consent must be mutual, voluntary, deliberate, and manifested by external signs; this consent must be given to actual marriage then and there, and not at some future time.

Maundy Thursday — Name given to Holy Thursday from the Antiphon "Mandatum" said at the ceremony of the washing of the feet.

May Laws — Laws of the Prussian diet, May, 1873, known as the Kulturkampf, which abolished the Catholic department of public worship, persecuted the clergy, expelled the religious, and took over control of education. The May Laws were modified in 1886, when several Religious Orders were allowed to return, and again in 1887 when greater concessions were made by the Prussian government; the last remnant of the May Laws disappeared in 1915, when the Jesuits were allowed to return.

Meditation — Methodical mental prayer, or the application of memory, understanding and will to some spiritual principle, event or mystery in order to arouse proper spiritual emotions and sanctify one's soul. Exchanges of sentiment and thought, or colloquies, with God or the saints are made especially at the end of the meditation, which closes with a formal prayer.

Mercy, Divine — Love and goodness of God, particularly in the time of need, as when a soul is clouded with sin.

Metropolitan — In each ecclesiastical province a certain episcopal see is constituted by the Roman Pontiff, the superior see, and the one who presides over this see is metropolitan of the province. He is also called an archbishop, though the two titles are not exactly synonymous.

Millennium — The belief based upon a false interpretation of the Apocalypse that Christ and His saints will rule upon earth for a thousand years before the end of the world.

Minor Orders — Orders in advancement to the priesthood: porter, reader, exorcist, acolyte.

Miracles — St. Thomas says that a miracle "is beyond the order (or laws) of the whole of created nature." This definition makes it unreasonable to deny the possibility of miracles, unless we also deny the existence of God. Nor does God in working miracles contradict Himself, for He need not be restricted by the laws of nature which He Himself made.

It is also clear from this definition that God alone can work miracles. In all cases a miracle is a sign of God's will, and cannot, except through our own perversity, lead us into error. True miracles, then, are practically distinguished from false ones by their moral character.

Miracles did not cease with the Apostolic Age. The Catholic Church, by her constant practice in the canonization of saints and through the teaching of her theologians, declares that the gift of miracles is an abiding one, manifested from time to time in her midst. This belief is logical and consistent because heathen nations have still to be converted and the fervor of the Christians must necessarily be renewed from time to time. The only reasonable course is to examine the evidence for modern miracles, when it presents itself, and to give or withhold belief accordingly. This is just what the Church does.

Missal — The book which contains the complete service for Mass throughout the year. The Roman missal was carefully revised and printed under Pius V.

Mission — A course of sermons and spiritual exercises, conducted in parishes by missionary priests for the purpose of renewing spiritual fervor and good resolutions.

Mitre — A head-dress worn by bishops, abbots, and in certain cases by other distinguished ecclesiastics. The bishop always uses the mitre if he carries the pastoral staff. Inferior prelates who are allowed a mitre must confine themselves only to the mitre, unless in case of an express concession by the Pope.

Mixed Marriages — Marriages between persons of different religions. Unless a dispensation has been obtained from the chancellor of the diocese, a marriage between a baptized and an unbaptized person is invalid; one between a Catholic and a person of another communion, e. g., a Protestant, is valid, but unlawful.

Monastery — A dwelling of religious, who live in seclusion and who recite the office in common.

Monstrance — The sacred vessel in which the Blessed Sacrament is exposed for adoration or Benediction.

Morality — Conformity to right conduct. Conditions necessary for the growth of morality are: proper education of the young at home and at school, healthy public opinion, sound legislation.

Mortal Sin — Called mortal because it brings death to the soul. Conditions necessary for mortal sin are: gravity of matter, sufficient reflection, full consent of the will.

Mortification — Hardships, austerities, and penances undergone for progress in virtue.

Mosaic — The Christian art of glass mosaic rose in the fourth century. The pontifical works for mosaic were established in 1727. Modern mosaics have been used in St. Paul's and Westminster Cathedral, England.

Motu Proprio — Lat. "own accord" — applied to an informal decree of the Pope.

Mysteries — Since there are countless mysteries in nature it is not surprising to find them in God. The three great mysteries of the Catholic Church are: the Trinity, Incarnation, and Eucharist.

Necromancy — Supposed communication with the dead. It is a form of black magic or sorcerous divination.

Neophyte — A term used in the early Church to designate newly baptized converts.

Novena — Nine days of public or private devotion in imitation of the apostles who gathered for prayer for nine days between Ascension Thursday and Pentecost.

Novice — One who having entered a religious order, undergoes a period of probation in preparation for the religious life.

Nuncio — The Pope's representative at a foreign government, handling affairs between the Holy See and that government.

Nuptial Mass and Blessing — A special Mass for marriages offered except during proscribed times (Lent and Advent). A nuptial blessing is given after the Pater Noster and before the last blessing at the end of Mass.

Oath — The calling upon God to witness the truth of a statement. There must be a reason for taking an oath as when required by lawful authority.

Obedience — Submission to one in authority; one of the chief counsels, made the subject of a vow.

Obligation — The necessity of doing what is good and avoiding what is evil. It is the essence of the natural, ecclesiastical and civil law.

Occasions of Sin—Circumstances which lead to sin. There is an obligation to avoid voluntary proximate occasions of sin.

Octave — A period of eight days given over to the celebration of a major feast, such as Easter.

Odium Theologicum — Lat. "theological hatred" — a hatred due to differences in religious beliefs.

Oils, Holy — There are three holy oils consecrated by bishops on Holy Thursday, and sent to parish priests. 1. The oil of catechumens used in Baptism, at the ordination of priests and at the blessing and coronation of kings and queens. 2. Chrism, used after Baptism, in Confirmation, at the consecration of a bishop, in the consecration of churches, altars, altar stones, chalices, patens and in the blessing of bells and baptismal water. 3. Oil of the sick, used in Extreme Unction. The Roman Ritual requires these oils to be kept in vessels of silver or alloyed metals, in a decent place and under lock and key. The Sacred Congregation of Rites strictly forbids the pastor to keep them in his house except in cases of necessity. The holy oils are all olive oil, except the chrism which is oil mixed with balsam. The oils of the past year must not be used, but common oil, in lesser quantity, may be added to the blessed oils if necessary.

Old Catholics — Swiss and German heretics who refused to acknowledge the authority of the Pope as defined in the Vatican Council of 1870.

Orders, Religious — Orders of monks did not arise so long as every monastery was an independent entity managing its own affairs without reference to any other authority but the general law of the Church. It was only when, commencing in the tenth century, separate communities such as those of Cluny, Cîteaux and the Chartreuse were formed within the great Benedictine brotherhood, that the term "order" came into use. Early in the thirteenth century the mendicant orders — Franciscan, Dominican and Carmelite Friars — were either founded or came into distinct prominence; in the second half of the century they were joined by the Augustinian hermits. These four orders, having no landed property, but subsisting on alms, began in all parts of Europe, but especially in cities, where luxury and civic pride were beginning to show themselves, to preach the humbling and fortifying doctrines of Christ.

Ordinary — One who has the jurisdiction of an office: The Pope, diocesan bishops, vicars general, prelates nullius, vicars apostolic, prefects apostolic, vicars capitular during the vacancy of a see, superiors general, abbots primate, and provincials.

Ordination — The creation of sacred ministers in the Church for divine worship and to rule the faithful. Minor and major orders precede the priesthood which is increased by the episcopacy.

Original Sin — The consequences of Adam's sin transmitted to the entire human race with the loss of immortality, control of the baser appetites, and the supernatural state, entailing death and concupiscence.

Orthodoxy — Conformity with the standards of truth, i. e., belief in and agreement with the true doctrine of the Catholic Church. Though the schismatic Eastern orthodox Church claims this title, they do so wrongly, as they are at variance with the true doctrine.

Paganism — A natural religion without true knowledge of God but rather a belief in false gods and a degraded morality. Two-thirds of the world is still pagan.

Pallium — A band of white wool worn on the shoulders. It has two strings of the same material, and four purple crosses worked on it. It is worn by the Pope and sent by him to patriarchs, primates, archbishops and sometimes, though rarely, to bishops as a token that they possess the "fullness of the episcopal office." The pallia are made from the wool of two lambs.

Palms — Blessed palms are a sacramental. They are distributed on Palm Sunday in commemoration of the triumphant entrance of Christ into Jerusalem.

Parable — The fictitious narrative composed to illustrate a truth of comparison of religious nature such as the parable of the cockle.

Paraclete — A Greek word meaning advocate or consoler, applied to the Holy Ghost.

Parental Duties — It is the duty of parents to educate their children for God and for salvation, to direct them toward good and bring them under the guidance of the Church, provide for their temporal welfare by nourishing them and developing their faculties.

Paschal Candle — A large candle symbolic of the Risen Christ, blessed and lighted on Holy Saturday and placed at the Gospel side of the altar until Ascension Day.

Paschal Precept — The Church law that the faithful must receive Holy Communion at least once a year. See Easter Duty.

Passion of Christ — Sufferings of Christ recorded in the four Gospels. Passion plays were developed in the fifteenth century, particularly in Germany, and there revived in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Pater Noster — The Our Father, or Lord's Prayer.

Patriarch — The highest office in the hierarchy. In the order of dignity they are as follows: major, Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch and Jerusalem; minor, Babylon, Cilicia, Venice, Lisbon, West Indies. The last four are merely titular. There are patriarchs of various rites in certain patriarchates as the Syrian, Maronite and Melchite Patriarchs of Antioch.

Patron Saint — A saint to whom special devotion is paid by certain peoples in certain places; one whose aid is sought in special needs; one whose name is received at Baptism, Confirmation or in religion.

Pax — The kiss of peace, given in the Mass.

Pectoral Cross — A small cross worn on the breast by bishops and abbots as a mark of their office.

Pelican — An emblem of Christ in the Blessed Sacrament, from the ancient idea that a pelican fed her young with blood from her own breast.

Penance — Penance is a sacrament instituted by Christ for the remission of sins committed after Baptism. The penitent confesses his sins to a priest, and if he is truly sorry, sincerely intends to sin no more, and accepts the penance the priest gives him, his sins are forgiven through the absolution of the priest.

Pentateuch — The first five books of the Old Testament, which are the work of Moses.

Perjury — The taking of a false oath which is always a grievous sin.

Persecutions — The ten great persecutions extended from about the year 54 to 313. The Christians were looked upon by the Roman officials as treasonable men who refused to honor the gods of the empire, who dealt in magic and, lastly, practiced an unlawful religion. If anything went adverse with the empire the cry was always: The Christians to the lions! The first persecution started under Nero. Domitian continued it, and Trajan followed in their footsteps. The persecutions continued up to Constantine's Edict of Toleration at Milan in 313.

Peter's Pence — A voluntary contribution raised among Catholics and sent to Rome for the maintenance of the Sovereign Pontiff. It was originally a tax of a penny on each house, and was collected on St. Peter's day, whence the name. It originated in England in the eighth century.

Pilgrimage — Pilgrimages to the holy places at Palestine have been customary since early times. Similar journeys to celebrated shrines are still made to worship, ask special favors, or discharge obligations.

Polyglot Bible — The Bible in a number of languages arranged generally in parallel columns in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, etc.

Poor Box — The alms-box has been found in churches from the earliest days of Christianity.

Pope — Name derived from the Greek word Papas, meaning Father. The Pope is elected by the College of Cardinals, a two-thirds vote being necessary. There have been 262 popes.

Portiuncula — The little Church near Assisi, Italy, repaired by St. Francis; the annual indulgence attached to this church and later extended to all Franciscan churches. It may be gained between noon of August 1 and midnight of August 2 or on the Sunday following.

Possession, Diabolical—The state of a person inhabited by the devil.

Poverty—One of the evangelical counsels, a voluntary giving up of the right of ownership and the using of goods in the manner of the poor.

Precious Blood—The Blood of Christ.

Predella—The platform immediately in front of the altar.

Prelate—A churchman preferred above others in papal honor or ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

Priest—A sacred minister with the power to celebrate Mass, administer the sacraments, preach and bless.

Promoter of the Faith—One whose duty is to insure the sanctity of those whose cause for canonization is considered. Popularly called "Devil's Advocate."

Prothonotary Apostolic—A member of the chief order of prelates in the Roman Curia.

Province—A territory comprising several dioceses and one archdiocese; a territory in which the members of a religious order are under the jurisdiction of a provincial superior.

Pulpit—Originally, preaching was done from the altar. But apparently even in St. Augustine's time the ambo, originally meant for singing from, was raised and narrowed into our present form of pulpit. It should be on the Gospel side, unless otherwise hindered, e.g., by the bishop's throne.

Purgatory—A place and state where departed souls, having died in the state of grace, suffer for a time in order to be cleansed from venial sin, or have still to pay the temporal punishment due to mortal sins, the guilt and the eternal punishment of which have been remitted. The idea that purgatory is a place of probation, or a time of trial, is absolutely wrong; the period during which the soul has to choose between heaven or hell ends with death.

Pyx—A vessel of metal, gold, or silver in which the Host is preserved or carried.

Quarantines—A strict fast of forty days with only water, bread and salt allowed once a day. The indulgence of quarantines remits as much temporal punishment due to sin as would equal forty days of such penance.

Quasi-domicile—Residence which is not permanent but nevertheless lasts for a considerable time.

Quinquagesima—The last Sunday before Lent, marking a period of fifty days before Easter.

Rashness—A vice opposed to prudence and counsel by which one acts without consideration of actual conditions, without foresight or advice.

Relics—The remains of holy persons, either parts of their bodies or possessions, entitled to veneration.

Relics of the Passion—There are various relics of the true cross to be found principally in European cities: Brussels, Ghent, Rome, Venice, Ragusa, Paris, Limbourg, and Mt. Athos. The inscription placed above the cross is preserved in the Basilica of the Holy Cross of Jerusalem at Rome. The crown of thorns is kept at Paris. One of the nails was supposedly thrown into the Adriatic to calm a storm; another was made into the famous iron crown of Lombardy; another is in the Church of Notre Dame, Paris. The sponge is in Rome at the Basilica of St. John Lateran. The point of the lance is in Paris, the rest is in Rome. The robe is in the Church of Treves. The tunic is in the Church of Argenteuil near Paris. A part of the winding sheet is in Turin. The linen with which Veronica wiped Christ's face is in Rome. Part of the Pillar of the Scourging is in Rome, part in Jerusalem.

Religion and Science—There is no contradiction between religion and science since one deals with material things and the other with supernatural. Conflict arises only when the scientist tries to turn theologian or the theologian, scientist.

Reliquary—A vessel for the preservation and exposition of a relic.

Reparation—The making amends to God for evil done by men, such as rendering homage to Him in reparation for the irreverence done to the Blessed Sacrament.

Reserved Case—A sin which cannot be absolved except by a bishop or the Pope.

Restitution—The returning of something unjustly taken from another or its equivalent. In serious cases the penitent cannot obtain pardon for his sin unless he makes restitution.

Resurrection—The rising from the dead, the resumption of life. Christ rose from the dead by His own power three days after His Crucifixion. This great miracle is commemorated by the Church in the glorious feast of Easter. On the last day all men will rise from the dead, and their souls will be reunited to their bodies for all eternity. The resurrection of the body is a dogma, our belief in which we attest in the Apostles' Creed.

Retreat—A few days withdrawal from worldly affairs for solitude, meditation, self-examination and amendment of life.

Ring—A circular band of metal worn as an emblem of fidelity. A wedding ring, worn by the wife on the fourth finger, is blessed at the marriage ceremony. Nuns also wear a ring symbolic of their betrothal to their heavenly bridegroom. The pontifical ring bestowed on a bishop at his consecration, or on an abbot, symbolizes their betrothal to the Church.

Ritual—A book used by priests with forms to be observed by them in the administration of the Sacraments, and in such functions as churching, burials, and in most of the blessings which they can give.

Rogation Days—April 25, and the three days before Ascension Day, when special prayers are offered to appease God's anger at man's transgressions, to ask His protection in calamities and for the blessing of the harvest.

Rosary—A set form of prayer recited on beads in which fifteen decades of Hail Marys are preceded by an Our Father and followed by a Glory Be to the Father. In saying each decade (ten beads) a mystery is contemplated. There are five glorious, five joyful and five sorrowful mysteries. The joyful mysteries are: Annunciation, Visitation, Nativity, Presentation of the Child Jesus in the Temple, and Finding of the Child Jesus in the Temple. The sorrowful mysteries are: Agony in the Garden, Scourging at the Pillar, Crowning with Thorns, Carrying of the Cross, and Crucifixion. The glorious mysteries are: Resurrection, Ascension, Descent of the Holy Ghost, Assumption, and Coronation of the Blessed Virgin in Heaven.

Rota—A tribunal of the Roman Curia where cases relating to marriage, ordination and religious professions are heard.

Rubrics—Directions printed in red in liturgical books for the proper execution of liturgical functions.

Sabbath—The Jewish day of rest. Under the Christian law the day of rest was changed to Sunday in honor of the Resurrection.

Sacramentals—Rites, actions, prayers and objects instituted and blessed by the Church, through which we obtain special grace or favor with God. They do not produce grace of themselves but by virtue of the blessing and prayers of the Church, and since they were not instituted by Christ but by the Church their number may be added to. Their proper use can drive away evil spirits, bring victory over temptation, remit venial sins, and obtain an increase of piety and temporal favors.

The sacramentals most generally in use are: holy water; holy oils; blessed candles, palms and ashes; blessed crucifixes, scapulars, medals, rosaries, prayer-books and statues; the blessings of these objects; blessings of houses and fields; the Confiteor recited at Mass, at Communion, in the Divine Office; grace before and after meals; public or private prayer in a church; papal and episcopal blessing; Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament; almsgiving.

Sacramentary — A book containing the rites for the Mass and the Sacraments generally.

Sacraments — Sacraments are visible signs of invisible grace, instituted by Christ for our justification.

The Sacraments are seven in number. In Baptism we are born again; in Confirmation we grow up to be perfect men in Christ; the Holy Eucharist is the daily bread by which the life of the soul is maintained; in Penance God heals the soul which has sinned against Him. When death is near Extreme Unction comes to remove the last remnant of infirmity and prepare the soul for final victory. Matrimony was instituted that the natural impulses, which have often proved a source of corruption and crime, might become a source of blessing, and that children might be brought up in the fear and love of God. Holy Orders was instituted that the Church might be ruled by those whom God has set over her, and be guided by the Word of Life and be blessed with the Sacraments.

The Sacraments are meant for all mankind; but in order that they may be received with profit by adults especially, certain dispositions are indispensable. To the Sacraments of the dead, i. e., Baptism and Penance, the recipient must come at least with faith, hope, sorrow for sin, and purpose of amendment. The Sacraments of the living, i. e., the other five, must be received by those who are already in the grace and love of God. Otherwise the Sacraments only add to the condemnation of those who receive them.

Sacred Heart — The corporal heart of Christ united to the fullness of His divinity and symbolic of His love, accorded supreme adoration in the Church. (See Heart of Jesus.)

Sacrilege — Irreverent treatment of sacred persons, places or things; a grave sin.

Sacristy — A room where vestments, church furnishings and sacred vessels are kept and where the clergy vest for sacred functions.

Saints — All inhabitants of heaven. In the strict sense, those who have received the official approval of the Church for public veneration, this approval being given because of the holy and virtuous lives which these persons lived on earth.

Sanctifying Grace — A supernatural gift infused into the soul at Baptism rendering it capable of acting in a way to merit eternal happiness. Sanctifying grace is lost by mortal sin; recovered by repentance.

Sanctuary — Space reserved for the high altar and the use of the clergy in a church; generally enclosed by a rail.

Sanctuary Lamp — One lamp must continually burn before the Blessed Sacrament. This lamp should be fed with olive oil or beeswax.

Sanhedrin — The Jewish supreme Council of Seventy at the time of Christ.

Scandal — Words or actions having at least the appearance of evil and leading others to sin.

Scapular — A sacramental consisting of two small squares of woolen cloth attached to a cord so that one is worn on the breast and the other on the back denoting that the wearer is spiritually associated with a religious order. There are eighteen kinds of scapulars approved by the Church as follows:

White — scapular of the hearts of Jesus and Mary, originated by the Daughters of the Sacred Heart; scapular of the Holy Face, originated by the Archconfraternity of the Holy Face; scapular of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, badge of the Sons of the Immaculate Heart of Mary; scapular of the Mother of Good Counsel, promoted by the Augustinian Fathers; scapular of Our Lady of Ransom, badge of a confraternity of the Order of Our Lady of Mercy; scapular of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, approved by Pope Leo XIII; scapular of St. Dominic, fostered by the Dominican Order; scapular of the Most Blessed Trinity, badge of the Confraternity of the Most Blessed Trinity.

Black — scapular of the Help of the Sick associated with the Society of St. Camillus; scapular of the Passion, badge of a confraternity associated with the Passionist Fathers; scapular of St. Benedict, badge of a confraternity affiliated with the Benedictine Order; scapular of the Seven Dolors, badge of a confraternity established by the Servites of Mary.

Red — scapular of the Passion, promoted by Priests of the Mission; scapular of the Precious Blood, badge of the Confraternity of the Precious Blood.

Blue — scapular of the Immaculate Conception introduced by the Theatine Nuns; scapular of St. Joseph, promoted by the Capuchin Fathers; scapular of St. Michael the Archangel, part blue, part black, badge of the Archconfraternity of St. Michael.

Brown — scapular of Mount Carmel, badge of the Confraternity of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel, originated by the Carmelites.

Scapular Medal — Introduced by missionaries in Africa to replace the cloth scapular which became soiled and dirty in a very short time; later extended to the whole world. The change from wearing the cloth scapular to the use of scapular medal may be made after one has been received into the cloth scapular but the medal must be blessed.

Schism — Term applied by the Fathers and theologians to a formal separation from the unity of the Church. St. Matthew and St. Mark call it, "a tear or rent"; St. John, "a division of opinion," and again, "a party spirit in the Christian Church."

School — The Catholic School is an institution having for its aim the development of the mind, and, above all, the perfection of the soul. The earliest Christian school (of which a distinct account has come down to us) was established by Pantaenus at Alexandria in 180 A. D. Later cathedrals and monasteries became education centers. Modern universities and secondary schools were founded in the twelfth century. The primary or elementary schools had their origin in the seventeenth century.

Scruple — An unreasonable fear and anxiety that one's actions are sinful.

Seal of Confession — A priest's obligation to keep sacred the secrets of the confessional even at the cost of his life.

Secret Societies — The Catholic Church condemns and forbids Catholics to enter societies formed against the Church or the State, those that require undue secrecy and absolute obedience and which employ a ceremonial equivalent to religious sects. A Catholic who joins the Freemasons is excommunicated from the Church. The Catholic who joins the Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, etc., commits grievous sin. Those who join these latter groups in good faith, may with permission retain nominal membership if scandal can be removed and there is no danger to faith. The general rule to be followed is that one cannot sacrifice the demands of faith for the social advantages accruing from membership in these societies. The same rule applies to secret societies of women such as the Eastern Star and the Ladies of Pythias.

Secular Clergy — Clergy not affiliated with religious orders, under the allegiance and direction of a bishop.

Septuagesima — The ninth Sunday before Easter and the third Sunday before Lent.

Septuagint — The chief Greek translation of the Old Testament.

Servile Work — Bodily as contrasted with mental labor.

Seven Last Words of Christ — After being nailed to the cross: "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do"; to the penitent thief: "Amen, Amen, I say to thee, this day thou shalt be with Me in Paradise"; to the Blessed Virgin and St. John: "Woman, behold thy son; son, behold thy mother"; in an agony of loneliness: "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?"; parched with thirst: "I thirst"; when every prophecy foretold of Him had been fulfilled: "It is consummated"; lastly: "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit."

Sexagesima — The eighth Sunday before Easter and the second Sunday before Lent.

Sign of the Cross — Sacred symbol used by Catholics to signify belief in the mystery of Redemption wrought by Christ on the Cross.

Simony — The sacrilegious vice of purchasing or selling ecclesiastical offices, benefices, and sacred objects.

Sins against the Holy Ghost — Despair of salvation, presumption of God's mercy, impugning the known truths of faith, envy at another's spiritual good, obstinacy in sin, final impenitence. Those guilty of such sins stubbornly resist the influence of grace and as long as they do so cannot be forgiven.

Sins That Cry to Heaven for Vengeance — Wilful murder; sins against nature; oppression of the poor, widows, and orphans; defrauding laborers of their wages.

Slander — Attributing to another a fault that one knows him to be innocent of; doubly sinful since it destroys a good name and is based on a lie.

Socialism — A system based on common ownership of the means of production.

Sodality — An association of lay persons, meeting under certain rules for pious purposes.

Sorcery — A species of magic by which evil is brought on men or beasts with the aid of the devil.

Sorrows of the Blessed Virgin Mary — Prophecy of Simeon, flight into Egypt, loss of Jesus at Jerusalem, meeting Jesus on the way to Calvary, standing at the foot of the Cross, descent of Jesus from the Cross, burial of Jesus.

Species, Sacred — The appearances of bread and wine which remain after the Consecration.

Spiritism — Condemned by the Church as dangerous to faith and morals. Attempted communication with spirits, whether good or bad by means of seances, table tapping, the ouija board, etc., is strictly forbidden.

Spiritual Bouquet — An offering to God of religious practices and devotions for someone living or dead.

Spiritualism — A philosophical doctrine that there is a spiritual order of things as well as a material order and that the soul is a spiritual substance.

Spiritual Works of Mercy, The — To counsel the doubtful; to instruct the ignorant; to admonish sinners; to comfort the afflicted; to forgive offences; to bear wrongs patiently; to pray for the living and the dead.

Sponsor — The godparent at Baptism or Confirmation who promises to safeguard the spiritual welfare of the person baptized or confirmed.

State of Grace — Freedom from mortal sin, whether actual or original.

Station (from the ancient military term, statio, that post where a guard kept constant watch) signifies the congregation of the faithful in a designated church where special Lenten services are held on a certain day. Thus according to ancient usage various churches in Rome have a Station Day; high Mass is celebrated, usually by the Cardinal Titular of the church, relics are exposed for veneration, and in the afternoon a procession takes place.

Stations of the Cross — A devotion commemorating the fourteen stages of Christ's passage from Pilate's House to Mount Calvary, first adopted by the Franciscans in 1350. The fourteen stations are: (1) Jesus is condemned to death; (2) Jesus takes up His Cross; (3) Jesus falls the first time; (4) Jesus meets His afflicted Mother; (5) Simon the Cyrene helps Jesus to carry His Cross; (6) Veronica wipes the Face of Jesus; (7) Jesus falls the second time; (8) Jesus comforts the women of Jerusalem; (9) Jesus falls the third time; (10) Jesus is stripped of His garments; (11) Jesus is nailed to the Cross; (12) Jesus dies on the Cross; (13) Jesus is taken down from the Cross; (14) Jesus is laid in the tomb.

Stigmata — The miraculous impress of the five wounds of our Saviour on the body of a person. St. Francis of Assisi received this divine favor in 1224, two years before his death. On September 17, the Feast of the Stigmata is yearly kept by the whole Church to commemorate this fact. Other saints in the history of the Church have been known to have received the stigmata.

Stole — A long narrow vestment worn around the neck indicative of the priestly power. Bishops, priests and deacons must wear it when exercising their orders, administering the sacraments, blessing persons and things, as well as at Mass.

Stole Fees — Offerings made to priests who administer the sacraments.

Stoup — A vessel used to contain holy water.

Stylites — Religious men of early centuries who lived atop pillars, there performing acts of heroic penance.

Superstition — Worship of false divinity, or worship unfit for the true God.

Surplice — A white linen garment worn over the cassock. It is a vestment proper to priests and clerics assisting in the sanctuary and in performing their sacred duties. Altar-boys wear it while serving Mass and at other Church ceremonies.

Suspension — A penalty by which a cleric is prohibited from exercising some or all sacred functions.

Tabernacle — The receptacle in which vessels containing the Blessed Sacrament are reserved above the altar. The tabernacle should be solidly built, gold plated within or lined with silk and be kept locked. The sacred vessels within should rest on a corporal. Flowers should not be placed on the altar before the tabernacle, and nothing should be put over it but the crucifix.

Te Deum — A hymn of praise and thanksgiving sung on solemn occasions. It is also recited daily in the Divine Office at the conclusion of Matins.

Temperance — One of the four cardinal virtues which imposes moderation and self control in the use of food, drink and sexual gratification.

Temporal Power — The right of the Pope to hold and govern territory, such as Vatican City, and to be recognized by the nations of the world.

Tenebrae — The Matins and Lauds of the following day which are usually sung on the afternoon or evening of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in Holy Week. The extinction of the candles during this ceremony represents the growing darkness of the time when Christ, the Light of the World, was taken. The last candle is hidden, not extinguished, to signify that death could not really obtain dominion over Christ, though it appeared to do so. The clapping made at the end of the office symbolizes the confusion consequent on Christ's death.

Tertiary — A member of a Third Order.

Theological Virtues — Those virtues which have God directly for their object: faith, or belief in God; hope; charity, or love of God.

Theology — The knowledge which we have, or can have, of God and divine things.

Third Orders — Religious associations affiliated with the Franciscans, Dominicans, Augustinians, Servites, Carmelites, Premonstratensians, Benedictines, Salesians and Marists, for the laity and those who while desiring to embrace the religious life do not desire to enter first or second orders. Members share in the prayers and privileges of the order and are buried in the habit of the order.

Three Hours — A devotion originated by the Jesuits to be practised on Good Friday from noon to three o'clock in remembrance of the three hours our Lord hung upon the cross.

Thurible — The vessel in which incense is burned during sacred ceremonies.

Tiara — A cylindrical head-dress pointed at the top and surrounded with three crowns, which the Pope wears as a symbol of sovereignty. It is made up from the princely crown joined with the bishop's mitre. It has been used as far back as the seventh century. At the coronation ceremonies it is placed on the head of the Pope with these words, "Receive the tiara adorned with three crowns and know that thou art Father of princes and kings, Ruler of the world, Vicar of our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Tithes — Offerings of the faithful for the support of their pastors, originally the tenth part of one's income.

Titular Sees — Catholic bishops without residential sees are given titular sees or ancient bishoprics now destroyed, of which there are some 900.

Tonsure — A crown made by shaving the upper part of the head, distinctive of clerics and religious.

Toties Quoties — Lat. "as often as" — applied to indulgences signifying they may be obtained as often as one wishes by fulfilling the obligations.

Tradition — The oral handing down of information, doctrines and practices. Tradition is part of the deposit of faith, handed down by the apostles. It supplies certain information which the Bible does not give, such as concerning the Baptism of infants.

Transubstantiation — The process by which the bread and wine of the Mass is changed into the substance of the Body and Blood of Christ in the act of Consecration.

Treasury of the Church — The merits of Christ and the saints from which the Church may draw to confer spiritual benefits such as the granting of indulgences.

Triduum — A three days' prayer or celebration.

Twilight Sleep — A sleep induced in obstetrical cases by certain drugs to lull the sense of pain and diminish the power of recollection, without completely taking away consciousness. From medical testimony, if drugs are administered a competent nurse should be in attendance, and a doctor within easy call. The use of this aid to difficult parturition is to be decided by a physician.

Urbi et Orbi — Lat. "for the city and for the world" — applied to the blessing given by the Pope after his election, also several times during the year.

Usury — A species of theft by which interest is unjustly exacted, or an unjust rate of interest is charged for a loan.

Vatican City — Property owned and ruled by the Holy See, with extra-territorial possessions, mostly churches and palaces, amounting to about 160 acres.

Veils — There are two common veils used in the liturgy of the Church. The one is a small veil used to cover the chalice before the Offertory, the other is the humeral veil used by the sub-deacon at High Mass and by the priest at Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Venerable — Title given to persons found by the Sacred Congregation of Rites to have led a life of heroic virtue.

Veneration — The reverence paid to saints, relics, etc. It is of a different kind and degree than that given to God which is properly called worship.

Venial Sin — An offense against God deserving only temporal punishment. Nevertheless, venial sin dims the intellect, weakens the will and leads to mortal sin.

Veronica's Veil — The cloth with which Veronica wiped the face of Jesus and on which the imprint of Christ's features remained, preserved at St. Peter's in Rome.

Vestments—Distinctive garments — now known as vestments — have ever been used by the Church in her divine worship; however, originally these garments did not differ in form from the ordinary garb. Those worn by the priest at Mass are the amice, alb, girdle, maniple, stole, chasuble. At High Mass the deacon wears a dalmatic and the subdeacon a tunic. At Benediction, the priest wears a surplice, stole and cape, and when giving the Benediction, the humeral veil.

Viaticum — The word Viaticum means provision for a journey, and it is now used exclusively to denote Holy Communion, given to those in danger of death.

Vicar Apostolic — Formerly this title was given to bishops, archbishops, and sometimes to ecclesiastics, not necessarily bishops, who were commissioned by the Roman Pontiff to exercise episcopal jurisdiction (except in certain special cases) in a diocese where the ordinary, for some reason, was unable to discharge his office fully. At present the term is generally used to denote titular bishops or priests appointed by the Holy See who are stationed in regions where episcopal sees have not yet been established.

Vigil — The day before a prominent feast set aside for preparation, watching, prayer and fasting.

Vigil Light—The oil light kept in the sanctuary to denote the presence of the Blessed Sacrament.

Virgin Birth of Christ—The doctrine that Christ, conceived by the Holy Ghost, was born of the Virgin Mother. The fact that St. Luke refers to Mary's first-born does not imply that she had more children, but rather to the law by which she was to offer her first-born to God in the Temple.

Virtue — Some stable or habitual element developing the human character. The ideals of human perfection vary. To a group of moral philosophies the western world owes its ideal of humanist virtue: prudence, justice, fortitude, temperance. Christian virtue begins with God, and the theological virtues are: faith, hope, charity.

Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary — The visit of the Blessed Virgin to her cousin Elizabeth before the birth of Christ. To her Mary expressed her great joy. This canticle is known as the Magnificat.

Vocation — The disposition of Divine Providence in diverse ways whereby persons are called to serve God in a particular state of life.

Votive Candles and Offerings — Candles burned before a statue or shrine in honor of our Lord or the saints and out of devotion to them. Offerings are presented in thanksgiving for favors received, either in virtue of previous promises or as free will offerings.

Vows — A vow is a deliberate promise made to God of a possible and greater good with the intention of binding oneself under pain of sin. The promise must be free; it must be made to God — to vow to a saint means to vow to God in honor of a saint. The matter of the vow cannot be illicit, altogether indifferent, imperfect or impossible. Vows are temporal or perpetual, dependent upon the time of their duration; conditional or absolute, according as they are recognized as simple or solemn by the Church.

Vulgate — The Latin version of the Bible founded on the translation of St. Jerome and authorized by the Church.

Wine — Pure fermented grape juice, unsoured, is used in the Mass and changed at the consecration into the blood of Christ.

Witchcraft — Dealing with the devil, either directly or through someone who has a compact with him.

Worldling — One who prefers the ambition and show of the world with its distractions and dissipations to the serious and better things of life.

Worship — Homage paid to God. This is the highest form of reverence, and is paid to God alone. Veneration, or reverence in lesser degree, is paid to saints and relics.

Zeal — Love in action manifested in propagating the faith, sanctifying souls and making God better known.

Zelator — An active member or officer of a confraternity.

Zuchetto — A skull cap worn by clerics over the tonsure.

PRINCIPAL HERESIES

Schismatics, according to the definition of Canon Law, are those baptized persons who "refuse to be subject to the Supreme Pontiff, or to have communication with the members of the Church subject to the Pope" (Canon 1325). Many heresies, e. g., Anglicanism, began as schisms. But separation from the Pope, the Vicar of Christ on earth and the custodian of Revelation, inevitably leads to errors concerning dogmatic truths.

Heretics are defined in Canon Law as "baptized persons who, while retaining the name of Christian, obstinately deny or doubt any of the truths proposed for belief by the divine and Catholic faith" (Canon 1325). The underlying idea of heresy is the selection of some truths and the rejection of others. Heretics arbitrarily assume the right to choose their beliefs, whereas only the infallible Church alone has the right to define dogmas and to propose to men the truths they are to believe.

Adoptionism (700-1177) — Leaders: Elipandus of Toledo; Felix of Urgel. Adoptionism taught that Christ in His divinity was the natural Son of God, but that in His humanity, He was only the Son of God by adoption, through grace. Pope Adrian I condemned these teachings in 785. They were again condemned in the decrees of the Council of Frankfort in 794. Abelard (1079-1142) revived Adoptionism and denied the substantial reality of the Man Christ. This Neo-Adoptionism was condemned by Pope Alexander III in 1177.

Albigensianism (1175-1400) is a revival of Manichaean dualism. The Albigenses asserted the co-existence of two mutually opposed principles: a good spirit who created the spiritual world; and an evil spirit who created the material world. Because the evil spirit created the body, Christ the Redeemer could not have taken a genuine human body. Suicide was recommended; marriage condemned; and the sacraments denied. The Fourth Lateran Council in 1215 condemned this heresy. The devotion of the rosary, popularized particularly by St. Dominic, aided in repelling this heresy.

Anabaptism (1521-1553) — Anabaptists proposed to reestablish "primitive" Christianity, using Scripture as the sole rule of faith. The State was to be reconstructed along the lines of early Christian community life. Infant baptism was rejected because non-scriptural.

Anglicanism (1534- ) — Leaders: Henry VIII (1491-1547); Cranmer (1489-1556). The Henrician Period of Anglicanism (1534-1547) set up an independent national church and transferred the supreme authority from the Pope to the Crown. The Elizabethan Period (1558-1603) carried the work of separation much further. With logical sequence, doctrinal and liturgical changes quickly followed the denial of papal supremacy. Scripture was declared the sole rule of faith. The Real Presence was denied, and the Mass was replaced by a communion service. The rite of ordination was changed, all mention of the sacrificial office of the priesthood being rigorously excluded. Invocation of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the saints was rejected as idolatry. The Anglican Church in the United States became known as the Protestant Episcopal Church, taking its name from the fact that it is governed by bishops. The tenets of Episcopalianism are the same as those of Anglicanism.

Arianism (320-380) — Leader: Arius (280?-336). This first great heresy that rocked the infant Church was an attempt to rationalize the Trinity. Concerned principally with the relations between the Father and the Son, Arius found it necessary to subject one to the other in order to formulate a rational explanation. He assigned Christ a unique place in creation — the only one made by the Father — yet he made Christ a mere creature. St. Athanasius was the great champion of orthodoxy against Arius. The heresy was condemned at the Council of Nicea in 325.

Baptists (1600- ) — Leaders: John Smythe, in England (d. 1612); Roger Williams, in America (1600-1683). Baptists reject infant baptism, and consider only baptism by immersion as valid. Baptism and the Eucharist, the only two sacraments they admit, they consider as mere symbols. Scripture is their sole rule of faith. They allow private interpretation of Scripture. All non-scriptural doctrines and duties are rejected as without authority.

Berengarius, Heresy of (999-1080) — The first heresy touching the Eucharist. Berengarius taught that the body and blood of Christ were not really present in the Holy Eucharist, but only figuratively. He was condemned at Rome in 1079.

Calvinism (1541-1648) — Leader: John Calvin (1509-1564). The dogma of absolute predestination constitutes the essence of Calvinism. God wills the salvation of some and the damnation of others by a direct act of His will. Original sin has so completely vitiated human nature that man is deprived of free will, and justification must come from an extrinsic principle. Calvinism also denied the Real Presence. Presbyterians today profess Calvinistic doctrines, their name being derived from the presbyteres who, according to Calvin, held equal rank with the episcopus or bishop. Calvinism was condemned at the Council of Trent (1545-1563).

Catharism (1100-1500) was the forerunner of Albigensianism in the revival of Manichaeism. The Cathari are divided into two groups: the absolute dualists, who believed in the existence of two eternal principles; and the mitigated dualists, who considered the evil principle a mere fallen spirit. The Cathari believed in the migration of souls, rejected matrimony and sexual intercourse, denied the authority of the State, and approved suicide. Catharism was condemned by the Third Lateran Council in 1179.

Christian Science (1879- ) — Leader: Mary Baker Eddy (1821-1910). Christian Science rejects doctrine as the foundation of religion. It claims to heal ailments through the scientific application of faith. After Mrs. Eddy declared herself cured of hysterical fits through mental cure she became interested in faith healing. In 1879 she founded the Third Church of Christ Scientist with 26 members and herself as pastor.

Congregationalism (1600- ) — Leader: Robert Brown. Congregationalism teaches the freedom of the individual soul and the independence of the local church. The name was adopted by the Pilgrim Fathers.

Episcopalianism. See Anglicanism.

Eutychianism. See Monophysitism.

Gnosticism (117-400) — A name given to early attempts to create a purely rational Christianity. Gnostics denied everything they could not understand. They attempted to find in Christianity a deeper meaning than the Gospels allow. Gnosticism pretended to be a high science replacing ordinary faith. Gnostics claimed they perfectly understood their belief and completely penetrated every mystery they held.

Greek Heresy and Schism (850- ) — Leaders: Photius (c. 816-869) and Cerularius. Photius, by taking unjust possession of the See of Constantinople set the stage for the Greek Schism. It was, however, Cerularius who was responsible for the break with Rome (1054). He it was who rejected the supremacy of the Pope and established the Greek Church. The Greek Church teaches that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father alone, in opposition to the Catholic teaching. This error was condemned by the Fourth Council of Constantinople in 870.

Hus, Heresy of (1400- ). See Wycliff.

Iconoclasm (726-787) — Leader: Leo the Isaurian (717-741). The Iconoclasts rejected all veneration of images of Christ, and the Blessed Mother; also the veneration of all relics. St. John Damascene wrote against them. The Iconoclasts became fanatical, going about destroying pictures, statues and relics wherever they found them. The heresy was condemned at the Second Council of Nicea in 787.

Jansenism (1636- ) — Leaders: Jansenius (1585-1638); Arnauld (1612-1694). Jansenism is a rigoristic doctrine garnered from "Augustinus," a posthumous work of Jansenius. Its basic error is disregard for the supernatural order. Man is not free; it is impossible to keep some of the commandments; good works of unbelievers are sinful; God will punish man for practising virtues not in his power to accomplish; Christ died not for mankind in general but for a privileged few. Arnauld proposed the insidious doctrine that for the worthy reception of Holy Communion severe penance for past sins and most pure love of God are required. It was only with the inauguration of the devotion to the Sacred Heart and the decrees of Pius X that the rigoristic tendencies of Jansenism were counteracted.

Judaizers (33-200) — Convert Jews who adhered to the observance of the Old Law. They held that pagans must first observe the Old Law before becoming Christians. They would make Christianity a mere branch on the parent tree of Judaism. The heresy split into several factions over the question of Christ's nature. Sts. Peter and Paul condemned this heresy.

Lutheranism (1517- ) — Leaders: Martin Luther (1483-1546) and Melancthon, Luther's "theologian." The twofold principle of invincible concupiscence, and justification by faith alone constitutes the fundamental error of Lutheranism. Luther formulated the principle of private interpretation of Scripture; cast aside the Sacrifice of the Mass; ridiculed the doctrine of indulgences; taught that confession, fasting and mortification were not necessary; denied the supremacy of the Pope; and repudiated celibacy of the clergy. He wrote, in fact, against almost every article of Christian belief. The Council of Trent (1545-1563) condemned Lutheranism.

Macedonianism (342-381) — Leader: Macedonius (d. 362). The Macedonians denied the divinity of the Holy Ghost. They erred in saying that the Holy Ghost is a creature; a ministering spirit who differs from the angels only in degree. The First Council of Constantinople in 381 condemned this doctrine.

Manichaenism (241-1600) — Leader: Mani (216-276). Manichaeism is essentially a dualistic theory teaching that in the beginning there existed two sharply opposed principles; one good, the other evil. The creation of the world was the result of the struggle for supremacy between these two principles. Christ came clothed in an ethereal body to teach men the distinction between the kingdom of light and that of darkness. To facilitate the victory of the kingdom of light, marriage, use of meat and wine, ordinary work and evil speech were forbidden the elect. Manichaenism was refuted by St. Augustine.

Methodism (1739- ) — Leader: John Wesley (1703-1791). Methodism, a movement to infuse a higher life into the Anglican Church, drifted away from the Established Church and split into many denominations. The distinctive doctrines of Methodism are the "witness of the Spirit" to the individual soul and the consequent assurance of salvation, or the certainty of present pardon. Methodists admit two sacraments, Baptism and the Eucharist. They hold that Baptism does not produce sanctifying grace in the soul but merely increases faith. They regard the Eucharist only as a memorial of the Passion and death of Christ.

Monophysitism (400-700) — Leaders: Eutyches and Dioscorus. The Monophysites (or Eutychians) denied the doctrine of two natures in Christ, stressing only His unity. They seem to have confused the notions of person and nature. In his "Epistola Dogmatica ad Flavianum," Pope Leo I set forth the Catholic teaching on the two natures in Christ. The heresy was condemned at the Council of Chalcedon in 451.

Monothelitism (625-681) — Leader: Sergius (d. 638). Monothelites taught that Christ had only one will and one energy, at the same time both human and divine. By destroying the human will and activity which is necessary for the complete human nature, the Monothelites implicitly denied the humanity of Christ. The Third Council of Constantinople in 681 condemned the heresy.

Montanism (156-400) — Leader: Montanus. The basic error of Montanism consists in the inauguration of the reign of the Holy Ghost succeeding the time of Christ's revelation which had passed. As prophet of the new revelation, Montanus denied the divinity of the Church, declared that only Montanists could forgive sins. Montanism would have had few followers had not Tertullian, a leading light of the early Church, joined its ranks.

Mormonism (1830- ) — Leader: Joseph Smith (1805-1844). He claimed to have received from an angel the records of the prophet Mormon which were later proven fictitious. Established at Salt Lake City, the new church came to resemble closely Mohammedanism and adopted polygamy which was forbidden by the United States courts in 1871.

Nestorianism (400- ) — Leader: Nestorius (d. 451). The Church teaches that there is but one Person in Christ. Nestorius implicitly denied this doctrine by denying the divine motherhood of Mary. He held that Mary is only the Mother of the Man Christ, not the Mother of God. The Council of Ephesus in 431 and that of Chalcedon in 451 condemned Nestorianism.

Pelagianism (405-529) — Leaders: Pelagius, Caelestius, and Julian. Beginning with the idea that God's help was unnecessary to man (actual grace), Pelagius came to the conclusion that sanctifying grace was not necessary either. To be logical, he then denied the fact of original sin. Pelagius overstressed the free will of man in the problem of grace. He forgot to distinguish between the natural and supernatural end of man, holding that Adam was born to enjoy supernatural life as a natural reward. St. Augustine refuted Pelagianism. It was finally condemned at the Council of Ephesus in 431.

Presbyterianism (1648- )—

Quakerism (1648- )—Leader: George Fox (1624-1691). Quakerism, founded on isolated texts of Scripture, is a sect at variance with every existing form of Christianity. Its central doctrine is that of the "inner light" communicated to the individual soul by Christ. It rejects the priesthood, exterior ceremony, and authority.

Rosicrucianism (1600- )—Leader: John Andrea (1586-1654). The Rosicrucians are a secret society conceived by Andrea and spread by means of the fictitious writings of an imaginary author, Christian Rosenkreuz. Rosicrucians teach a pantheistic theosophy; have their own ideas of God, nature, morality, and the soul.

Semipelagianism (420-529)—Leaders: Sts. Cassian, Victor of Marseilles, Gennadius, and Faustus. In refuting the Pelagians St. Augustine did in several instances overstress the divine element in grace. His theory of predestination was taken strictly by some monks of Marseilles. Fighting this state of affairs, St. Cassian and others again brought the factor of free will to the fore, and went just a bit too far. They were in perfectly good faith, and would have corrected their mistake had attention been brought to it. What they taught, however, viz., that the beginnings of faith could be merited by man, was wrong and was accordingly condemned.

Swedenborgianism (1737- )—Leader: Emmanuel Swedenborg. He professed to have received revelations, and rejected the Trinity, original sin, the resurrection and all sacraments except Baptism and the Eucharist. He taught that after death souls pass into an intermediate state preparatory to entering heaven.

Unitarianism (1570- )—A heterogeneous sect whose bond of unity consists more in its anti-dogmatic tendency than in its uniformity of belief. Its distinctive tenet is belief in a uni-personal God. Unitarians hold to private interpretation of Scripture. The local church is autonomous.

Universalism (1750- )—The distinctive tenet of this sect is the final salvation of all souls. Present-day Universalists reject the doctrine of the Trinity. The reception of the sacraments is not enjoined, but Baptism and the Lord's Supper are administered.

Waldensianism (1180- )—Leader: Waldes. The Waldenses were an heretical sect claiming to practise Christianity in its pristine purity. Among the doctrinal errors are the denial of purgatory, of indulgences, and of prayers for the dead. Waldensians denounced all lying as a grievous sin, refused to take oaths, and considered the shedding of human blood unlawful. The Third Lateran Council in 1179 condemned this heresy.

Wycliff, Heresy of (1350- )—Leader: John Wycliff (1324-1384). Wycliff claimed the Bible to be the sole truth of faith. He defended predestination, maintained that all power depends on one's state of grace; denied the freedom of the will and the doctrine of transubstantiation. He rejected the divine institution of the hierarchy and taught that the Pope is not the head of the Church; that the bishops have no pre-eminence over other priests. He held that all ecclesiastical powers are forfeited or are in abeyance when the subject is in mortal sin. He taught that confession is useless, for man cannot help but sin, and that God approves sin. He thought that ecclesiastics who sin should be punished with the death penalty. After the death of Wycliff, John Hus spread his doctrines throughout Bohemia. The Council of Constance in 1414 condemned these doctrines as heretical.

The Mass

THE CHURCH EDIFICE AND LITURGICAL APPURTENANCES

The church is a sacred building dedicated to divine worship and open to all the faithful who assemble there to offer up the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and there take part in other services. What distinguishes a Catholic church from all other sacred edifices is the fact that every Catholic church becomes, through the Mass, the dwelling place of God.

During the first three centuries of Christianity there were no special buildings consecrated to Eucharistic worship. Services were held in private homes (Acts ii, 46; Rom. xvi, 5; 1 Cor. xvi, 15; Col. iv, 15). The persecutions of those early days made it impossible to have public places of worship. But when the Church came up from the catacombs, when she was no longer persecuted, then began the building of churches. Through the centuries men have used the very best that architecture can offer in order to make their churches fit dwelling places for God.

The aisle of the church from the main door to the Communion railing is called the nave. If another aisle cuts across the nave, forming a cross, the two arms of this aisle are called transepts. The part inside the communion railing is called the sanctuary. The back portion of the sanctuary, which is often arched, is called the apse.

Stained glass windows, paintings and statues are the ordinary ornaments of the church. Their purpose is to depict the main events in the life of Christ and the Saints. When the Blessed Sacrament is kept in the church a sanctuary lamp burns before the tabernacle day and night. At the entrance there are fountains containing holy water with which the faithful bless themselves when entering and leaving the church. In the rear or along the sides are confessionals used in the administration of the Sacrament of Penance. Generally on the Gospel side of the church there is a pulpit from which the priest announces to the people the word of God. Inside the sanctuary are the sedilia, the seats used by the priest and ministers when they sit down for any part of the ceremonies. Attached to the wall of the sanctuary is a locked box called the ambry which contains the holy oils used in the various sacraments. In the sanctuary on the epistle side is a table or shelf called the credence table which is used to hold the cruets, basin and finger towel which are needed in the sacrifice of the Mass.

The altar is the most important part of the church. It is in fact the very reason why we have churches. The Mass is the center of Catholic worship and the altar is the table on which the Mass is offered up.

At the Last Supper the Mass was offered, very probably, on a plain wooden table covered with linens according to the Jewish rite of the Paschal supper. In the early Church the Sacrifice of the Mass was offered on ordinary wooden tables. During the Roman persecutions Mass was celebrated in the catacombs, on the tombs of martyrs. Because of this practice in the catacombs every altar-stone today must contain the relics of martyrs. Today our altar still retains the form of the table and the tomb. It is in reality a combination of the two: the table on which Christ offered the first Mass, and the coffin of the catacombs.

Because of the use of stone in the catacombs, and because stone is far more permanent than wood, it became customary to erect stone altars. Only stone altars may be consecrated today. Altars of other material are in use, but it is required that the altar-stone placed in the center of the table, containing the relics of martyrs, and on which the consecration takes place, be of stone. Stone is durable, and according to St. Paul (1 Cor. x, 4) symbolizes Christ.

In order to stress the importance of the altar and to increase reverence for it, it was covered by a canopy called the baldakin. Though not universally used, baldakins are found in many of our large churches. Gradually ornamental screens containing paintings, sculptures and niches for statues were placed back of the altar. These ornamented backs of altars are called reredos or retables.

The tabernacle is a box-like enclosure set in the center of the altar containing sacred vessels in which the Blessed Sacrament is reserved. It should be solidly built and gold-plated within or at least lined with white silk.

A crucifix must be placed in the middle of the altar where it can easily be seen by all. It should be an outstanding feature of the altar because its purpose is to remind the priest and the faithful of the Sacrifice of Calvary, of which the Mass is the unbloody renewal.

Steps were placed before the altar as soon as it became fixed in the church. The obvious and practical reason of a raised altar is that those who assist at Mass may see the priest. The raised altar also reminds us of the hill of Calvary. Every altar must have at least one step.

Ledges were not used in the back of the altar table in the early church. They were introduced later for the purpose of holding the crucifix, candles and flowers.

Candles are a reminder of the Church of the catacombs, when candle light was a necessity. The Church prescribes that the candles used at Mass be made of beeswax. The pure wax symbolizes the pure flesh of Christ received from His Virgin Mother, the wick signifies the Soul of Christ, and the flame represents His divinity.

The missal is the book containing the Mass prayers for the entire year.

Three altar cards are placed upon the altar. They contain certain prayers which the priest says during the Mass.

A bell is rung by the server to draw the attention of the faithful to the important parts of the Mass.

Altar Linens and Draperies

Three altar-cloths of white linen or hemp must be placed on every altar. The two lower ones must cover the whole table of the altar. The top one should extend to the platform. Three cloths are prescribed out of reverence for the Precious Blood, which, if it were accidentally spilled, would be absorbed by these cloths. Under the three altar-cloths is placed another linen cloth, waxed on the side next to the altar and called the cere-cloth. The altar-cloths symbolize the winding sheets in which the Body of Christ was laid in the tomb.

Veils—The tabernacle should be covered by a veil when the Blessed Sacrament is reserved there. It should strictly cover the entire tabernacle but is often merely a small veil hung before the door of the tabernacle. The tabernacle veil may be white or the color of the feast. A veil of white silk always covers the ciborium when it is in the tabernacle. The monstrance, when it stands upon the altar before or after Benediction, is also covered with a white silk cloth. The missal stand may be covered with a veil of the color of the feast. The chalice veil (see illustration) is a piece of silk fabric of the same color and quality as the vestments. It is ornamented with a cross and is used to cover the chalice on the way to and from the altar, and during the earlier and later parts of the Mass. The antependium is a sort of veil covering the front of the altar. It is usually of the same material as the vestments.

The burse (see illustration) is a sort of purse open at one end in which the corporal is placed. The top of the burse is covered with silk of the same material and color as the vestments. It is placed on top of the covered chalice.

The corporal (see illustration) which is carried to the altar in the burse is a square piece of fine linen or hemp. At the Offertory it is spread out on the altar over the altar-stone and should be large enough to contain the chalice, the Host and the ciborium at the celebration of Mass.

The pall consists of two pieces of linen or hemp, between which cardboard is inserted for the sake of stiffening it (see illustration). The upper side of the pall may be ornamented but the lower side must be plain. It must be large enough to cover the paten completely.

The purificator (see illustration) is a linen or hemp cloth from twelve to eighteen inches long and nine or ten inches wide. It is folded over twice and placed between the chalice and paten. It is used for cleansing the chalice before the wine is put into it at the Offertory, for cleaning the paten after the Our Father before the Host is placed on it, and for drying the priest's lips and the chalice after the priest's communion.

A finger towel is used by the priest when he washes his hands at the Offertory. Finger towels are of varying sizes and may be of any suitable material, preferably linen or hemp.

Sacred Vessels

The chalice (see illustration) is the cup which the priest uses at the Mass in which to consecrate and from which to receive the Precious Blood of Our Lord. Chalices of glass, ivory, wood and even clay have been used at different times. Today only metal may be used. They should be of gold or silver; if an inferior metal is used, then the inside of the cup must be heavily plated with gold. The Church insists upon this use of gold because the Precious Blood comes into direct contact with the inside of the cup. There is a very special blessing for the chalice by which it is dedicated to the service of God. Lay persons may not touch the chalice.

The paten (see illustration) is the plate upon which the priest puts the Host which he offers and consecrates in the Mass. It must be of the same metal as the chalice. Like the chalice it is consecrated with a special blessing and may not be handled by lay persons.

The ciborium (see illustration) is a sacred vessel used to contain the consecrated Hosts for the Communion of the faithful. Like the chalice it must be at least gold-plated.

The pyx is a small vessel of gold or silver used in carrying the Holy Eucharist to the sick. Its shape resembles that of the case of a watch. It is kept in a silk-lined leather case, called a burse, with a small purificator and corporal.

The monstrance or ostensorium is a kind of portable tabernacle made in such a way that the Blessed Sacrament may be distinctly seen by the faithful. It is used at Benediction and for Exposition.

The luna or lunnette is a receptacle which holds the Sacred Host in an upright position in the monstrance. It is removed from the monstrance after Benediction and placed in the tabernacle.

Vestments

In the early Church the liturgical vestments were the same as the ordinary civil dress. The Church continued to use the same style of clothing for sacred functions so that as the styles of civil attire changed there emerged a distinctive type of liturgical attire. There have been minor changes in some of the vestments but in general they have kept their distinctively Roman appearance.

Many symbolical meanings have been attached to the different vestments by various writers. The prayers the priest says as he puts on each vestment signify the meaning the Church attaches to them.

The amice (see illustration) serves the practical purpose of protecting the rich fabric of the chasuble from perspiration. When he puts it on the priest says: "Place, O Lord, on my head the helmet of salvation, that I may overcome the attacks of Satan."

The alb (see illustration) is a survival of the long inner tunic worn by men in the early centuries. The vesting prayer reads: "Purify me, O Lord, from all stain and cleanse my heart, that washed in the blood of the Lamb I may enjoy eternal delights."

The cincture (see illustration) holds the alb in place close to the body, allowing freedom of movement for the feet. As he puts it on the priest says: "Gird me, O Lord, with the girdle of purity, and extinguish in me all concupiscence that the virtue of continence and chastity may remain in me."

The maniple (see illustration) was originally an ornamental handkerchief held in the right hand by Roman officials. It is worn only in the Mass. It is the special badge of the order of subdeaconship and may not be worn by those in lower orders. The prayer: "Let me merit, O Lord, to bear the maniple of tears and sorrow so that one day I may come with joy into the reward of my labors."

The stole (see illustration) was probably worn by Roman court officials as a sign of their authority. At any rate it is the symbol of authority in the Church. Today only the Pope has the right to wear the stole everywhere as a sign of his universal authority. As a sign of the plenitude of the priestly power which he has, the bishop does not cross the stole in front. The deacon wears the stole diagonally from his left shoulder to his right side. It was once the distinguishing mark of the priesthood but is now worn only when performing a religious function. The vesting prayer says: "Return to me, O Lord, that stole of immortality which was lost to me by my first parents, and though unworthy I approach Thy great Mystery, nevertheless, grant me to merit joy eternal."

The chasuble (see illustration) was originally a large round mantle or cloak covering the whole body. In the Middle Ages the chasuble was considerably shortened and cut away at the sides to secure freedom of movement. The vesting prayer: "O Lord, Who has said, 'My yoke is sweet, My burden light,' grant that I may carry this yoke and burden in such a manner as to obtain Thy grace. Amen."

The dalmatic (see illustration) is the outward vestment worn by the deacon at High Mass. It was part of the clothing of the higher classes adapted for ecclesiastical use. When putting it on the deacon says: "Clothe me, O Lord, with the garment of salvation, and cover me with the vestment of joy and the dalmatic of justice."

The tunic is the outward garment worn by the subdeacon of the Mass. It differs only slightly, in ornamentation, from the dalmatic of the deacon. The prayer: "May the Lord clothe me with the tunic of delight and the garments of joy."

Color of the vestments varies with the feast that is being celebrated.

White, the color of light, is a symbol of joy, purity and innocence; it is used on feasts of the Holy Trinity, Our Lord, the Blessed Virgin, the angels, confessors, holy women not martyrs, and on Sundays after Easter.

Red, the language of fire and blood, is a symbol of love and of the sacrifice of the martyrs. It is also a reminder of Christ's Passion. It is used on Pentecost Sunday, the feasts of Our Lord's Passion, and the feasts of the Apostles and martyrs.

Green, the symbol of hope, is used on the Sundays after Epiphany and the Sundays after Pentecost.

Violet, the color of penance, mortification and sorrow, is used during Advent and Lent, on the three Sundays preceding the first Sunday of Lent, on vigils except those occurring during Paschal time, and on Rogation Days.

Rose, less penitential than violet, is used on the Third Sunday of Advent and the Fourth Sunday of Lent, because these Sundays are joyful in the midst of the penitential season.

Black, the symbol of mourning and death, is used in Masses for the Dead and on Good Friday.

Cloth of gold may take the place of white, red or green, but not of purple or black.

WHAT THE MASS IS

The Council of Trent summarizes and defines the Church's teaching in reference to the Sacrifice of the Mass as follows:

(1) There is in the Catholic Church a true Sacrifice, the Mass, instituted by Jesus Christ; the sacrifice of His Body and Blood under the appearances of bread and wine.

(2) This Sacrifice is identical with the Sacrifice of the Cross, inasmuch as Jesus Christ is Priest and Victim in both; the only difference lies in the manner of offering, which is bloody upon the Cross and bloodless on our altars.

(3) It is a propitiatory Sacrifice, atoning for our sins, and the sins of the living and of the dead in Christ, for whom it is offered.

(4) Its efficacy is derived from the Sacrifice of the Cross, whose superabundant merits it applies to us.

(5) Although offered to God, alone, it may be celebrated in honor and memory of the saints.

(6) The Mass was instituted at the Last Supper when Christ about to offer Himself on the altar of the Cross by His death (Heb. x, 10) for our redemption (Heb. ix, 12), wished to endow His Church with a visible Sacrifice, commemorative of His Bloody Sacrifice of the Cross. As High Priest, according to the order of Melchisedech (Ps. cix, 4), He offered to His Father His own Body and Blood under the appearances of bread and wine, and constituted His Apostles priests of the New Testament to renew this same offering until He came again (1 Cor. xi, 26) by the words, "Do this for a commemoration of me" (Lk. xxii, 19; 1 Cor. xi, 24).

Instituted by Jesus Christ, the Mass is the most perfect offering that man can make to God, his Creator and Redeemer. By the Mass we call to mind particularly the Passion and death of Christ. But around this central thought of Calvary is built up also the other events of Our Saviour's life. In the "Sunday Cycle" which begins with the first Sunday of Advent we follow the earthly life of Our Saviour through its every stage until we come finally to the last Sunday after Pentecost which describes the Last Judgment and the coming of Christ in power and majesty. The "Festal Cycle," i. e., the Masses in honor of the Saints, is interwoven with the story of Christ's earthly life in the liturgy of the Mass. But in the very center and heart of it all stands the hill of Calvary with its Cross of Sacrifice.

The Mass is the unbloody renewal of this Sacrifice of Calvary. Through the Mass men of every generation have been brought to the very scene of Redemption and every land has become in reality a Holy Land. The Mass, then, is the perpetuation of the great Sacrifice.

One of the essential characteristics of any sacrifice is immolation, or destruction of the thing sacrificed. In the Mass this immolation of the Victim takes place at the Communion.

Briefly, the Mass is the remembrance and re-enactment of the life of Christ; the perpetuation of the Sacrifice of Calvary; and the banquet by which Our Crucified Saviour comes to our souls to make us part of Himself.

Jesus Christ Himself instituted the Mass at the Last Supper the night before His death. "Jesus took bread, and blessed, and broke: and gave to His disciples, and said: Take ye and eat. This is My Body. And taking the chalice, He gave thanks, and gave to them, saying: Drink ye all of this. For this is My Blood of the new testament, which shall be shed for many unto the remission of sins" (Matt. xxvi, 26-28). In these words of institution we find the three essential elements of the Mass, viz., Offertory, Consecration, and Communion. Through the course of centuries the Church has added various prayers and ceremonies, but the essence of the Mass must ever be those sacred words of Him Who gave the Mass to us as a loving memorial of His death on Calvary.

PRAYERS AND CEREMONIES OF THE MASS

1. From the Beginning of Mass to the Epistle

Words of the Liturgy

Priest: In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Priest: I will go unto the altar of God.

Server: To God, Who giveth joy to my youth.

Psalm xlii (said by priest and server): Judge me, O God, and distinguish my cause from the nation that is not holy: deliver me from the unjust and the deceitful man.

For Thou, O God, art my strength: why hast Thou cast me off? and why do I go sorrowful whilst the enemy afflicteth me?

Send forth Thy light and Thy truth: they have conducted me and brought me unto Thy holy mount, and unto Thy tabernacles. And I will go unto the altar of God; to God, Who giveth joy to my youth.

I will praise Thee on the harp, O God, my God: why art thou sorrowful, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet me, Hope in God, for I will still give praise to Him; Who is the salvation of my countenance, and my God.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen.

I will go unto the altar of God. To God, Who giveth joy to my youth.

Our help is in the name of the Lord.

Who made heaven and earth.

Priest: I confess to almighty God, to blessed Mary ever virgin, to blessed Michael the Archangel, to blessed John the Baptist, to the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, to all the saints, and to you, brethren, that I have sinned exceedingly, in thought, word, and deed, through my fault, through my fault, through

Significance of the Ritual

The Sign of the Cross is a fitting introduction for the renewal of the Sacrifice of the Cross.

The very thought of the great untold benefits derived from every Mass fills us with the joy of youth as we begin Mass with the priest.

To understand Psalm xlii it must be considered in connection with Psalm xli because both Psalms form a unit and were written by the same author. The writer of these psalms is an exile from Jerusalem: his ardent desire is to revisit the Sanctuary; he looks forward to the day when he will be once more with the pilgrims worshipping at Jerusalem.

It should be the earnest wish of all Catholics to "go unto the altar of God" (verse 4) because the altar on which the Sacrifice of the Mass is offered far surpasses the Tabernacle of the Jews which was but a shadow and a figure. If the Jews found joy and hope in the symbolic sacrifices of the Old Law, how much more should Catholics rejoice in the Mass which is the fulfilment of those symbols.

The addition of the "Glory be to the Father" etc., which the Church adds to the Psalms when using them in the liturgy shows that she wishes to interpret these Psalms in a Christian sense.

The antiphon is repeated. Its very repetition serves as a reminder that joy is the keynote of the Christian preparing to assist at Mass.

Making the Sign of the Cross the priest calls upon God for assistance.

The priest's joy at the thought of the great Sacrifice which is about to begin is suddenly clouded by the remembrance that he is a sinful man. Bowed down with eyes cast to the ground he acknowledges his guilt to God and the whole court of heaven. He blames himself for his sins, confessing three my most grievous fault. Therefore I beseech the blessed Mary ever virgin, blessed Michael the Archangel, blessed John the Baptist, the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, all the saints, and you brethren, to pray to the Lord our God for me.

Server: May almighty God have mercy upon you, forgive you your sins, and bring you to life everlasting.

Priest: Amen.

Server: I confess to almighty God, etc. (as above). Where the priest said "brethren" the server says "father" because the priest confesses to the people, and they confess to him.

Priest: May almighty God have mercy upon you, forgive you your sins, and bring you to life everlasting.

Server: Amen.

Priest: Thou shalt turn again, O God, and quicken us.

Server: And Thy people shall rejoice in Thee.

Priest: Show us, O Lord, Thy mercy.

Server: And grant us Thy salvation.

Priest: O Lord, hear my prayer.

Server: And let my cry come unto Thee.

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: Let us pray: Take away from us our iniquities, we beseech Thee, O Lord; that we may be worthy to enter with pure minds into the Holy of Holies. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Priest: We beseech Thee, O Lord, by the merits of Thy saints whose relics are here, and of all the saints, that Thou wouldst vouchsafe to forgive me all my sins. Amen.

Introit. (The Introit differs for each Mass. It is composed as a rule of an antiphon, a verse of a Psalm, the Glory be to the Father, and repetition of the antiphon. Originally the entire Psalm was sung by the choir and people as the celetimes as he strikes his breast, that they were committed "through my fault" etc. But immediately he takes heart and begs the Blessed Mother, the angels and saints of heaven, and the people assisting at Mass to ask God to pardon him.

The server expresses the hope that God will deal mercifully with the priest.

So be it. In other words: May your prayers for me be heard.

The server in his turn says the Confiteor. All those assisting at Mass should join the altar-boy in his confession of guilt, saying it with the same sentiments with which the celebrant has just recited it.

The priest asks God to have mercy on the server just as the server asked God to pardon the sins of the priest.

So be it.

Confident in God's forgiveness and mercy the priest and server recite these ejaculations. The thought of God's mercy brings back the joy of heaven to their hearts. In the Mass God will answer the prayer, "Grant us Thy salvation," by sending down from heaven the Saviour Himself. The prayer, "The Lord be with you, and with thy spirit," finds its best possible fulfillment when, in the Mass, Christ comes down from heaven upon the altar.

As he ascends the steps of the altar the priest once more begs God to take away his sins so that he may offer the Sacrifice with a pure mind and heart.

Kissing the altar containing the relics of martyrs the priest makes a final plea for the forgiveness of his sins, calling upon all the saints in heaven to obtain God's pardon for him.

The prayers at the foot of the altar were preparatory. The Introit begins the Mass itself. Signing himself with the sign of the Cross, the priest recites this "overture of the Mass." In the Introit we find the theme of the Mass, the brant went from the sacristy to the altar. Today the choir chants the Introit when the priest begins the prayers at the foot of the altar.)

Kyrie (recited by priest and server alternately):

Lord have mercy on us.
Lord have mercy on us.
Lord have mercy on us.
Christ have mercy on us.
Christ have mercy on us.
Christ have mercy on us.
Lord have mercy on us.
Lord have mercy on us.
Lord have mercy on us.

Gloria: Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace to men of good-will. We praise Thee; we bless Thee; we adore Thee; we glorify Thee. We give Thee thanks for Thy great glory. O Lord God, heavenly King, God the Father almighty. O Lord Jesus Christ, the only-begotten Son. O Lord God, Lamb of God, Son of the Father, Who takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us. Who takest away the sins of the world, receive our prayer. Who sittest at the right hand of the Father, have mercy upon us. For Thou only art holy, Thou only art Lord. Thou only, O Jesus Christ, art most high, together with the Holy Ghost in the glory of God the Father.

Amen.

Priest: The Lord be with you.
Server: And with thy spirit.

key to the mystery of the feast being celebrated. Its purpose is to arouse in us fitting thoughts and sentiments; to place us, as it were, in the atmosphere of the feast we are commemorating.

Fervently we cry to God: "Have mercy on us." Three times we address our plea to God the Father, three times to God the Son, three times to God the Holy Ghost. With the simplicity of children we repeat the selfsame phrase, insisting that God have mercy upon us. God, surely, cannot turn a deaf ear to such earnest pleading. In fact, the prayer's very simplicity — its childishness almost — must delight the heart of Him Who allows us to address Him as "Our Father."

The Gloria is the answer to the Kyrie. In the Kyrie we asked God the Father to have mercy on us; we now "praise, bless, worship and glorify" Him; we address Him as "God the Father Almighty," thus reminding Him that it is within His power to hear our prayer. In the Christe eleison we begged God the Son also to have mercy on us; and now, as adopted children of the Redeemer Who came down upon earth to save us we address Him with those titles so dear to His heart: "Only begotten Son," "Lamb of God." He too can grant our request for He sits "at the right hand of the Father." Finally in the last Kyrie we implored the Holy Ghost to have mercy on us; now we address Him as God, equal to the Father and the Son. Realizing the grandeur and power of the Most Blessed Trinity we feel confident that our plea for mercy will be heard.

After kissing the altar, which is the symbol of Christ, the priest turns to the congregation with hands extended and says, "The Lord be with you." He transmits to the people the graces he has received from the altar. This same greeting occurs eight times during the Mass and each time it is a reminder to those assisting at Mass that they are to take an active part in what follows.

Collect. (The Collect or Oration as it is often called, is different for each Mass. It is a prayer of petition. It begins with the words, "Let us pray," followed by a form of address to God, the reason for our petition, and the petition itself; it closes with a formula something like the following: "Through our Lord Jesus Christ Who lives and reigns with the Holy Ghost, world without end. Amen.")

By the words, "Let us pray," the celebrant indicates that this prayer is not his alone but the prayer of all those present. The priest is the representative of the people and when he prays he beseeches God to hearken to the common petition of the congregation. The prayer ends with an invocation to Christ. Confidently we invoke His aid Who said: "Whatsoever you shall ask the Father in My Name, that will I do" (Jn. xiv, 13).

Summary. This first part of the Mass is called by some "the service of prayer." By the confession of sins (Confiteor) we have told God how sorry we are for having offended Him, how unworthy we feel to assist at the sublime Sacrifice; but with the thought of God's kindness and goodness before us we cry to heaven for mercy (Kyrie); almost instinctively we burst into the praises of the Most Blessed Trinity (Gloria) and the thought of the power and majesty of the Triune God fills us with the assurance that our plea for mercy will be heard; and finally we lay before God our special petitions (Collect).

Thus by our prayers we have gradually ascended toward God—it is our preparation and introduction to the Mystery of Calvary. God, Who is never outdone in generosity, now responds to our prayers through the words of Sacred Scripture. We are entering the second part of the drama of the Mass.

II. From the Epistle to the Creed

Words of the Liturgy

Epistle. (The Epistles of Sundays are always taken from the letters of the Apostles. In many of the ferial Masses of Lent, Ember Days, and many of the old Masses of the Saints the Lesson is taken from some Book of the Old Testament.)

Server: Thanks be to God.

Gradual. (The Gradual is made up generally of two verses from one of the psalms. It is found in all Masses except those during the Easter season.)

Alleluia. (Two Alleluias, a verse, and another Alleluia follow the Gradual in Masses between Trinity Sunday and Septuagesima Sunday. The so-called greater Alleluia is the only chant between the Epistle and Gospel in the Masses from Easter Saturday until Trinity Sunday.)

Tract. (The Tract replaces the Alleluia on days of penance and in Requiem Masses. It is made up of several verses from one of the psalms.)

Significance of the Ritual

The Epistle is chosen with a view to the development of the feast being celebrated. It is taken from the inspired books. Through the Epistle God speaks to those assisting at Mass, and man shows his gratitude by answering with the server: "Thanks be to God."

The Gradual affords a pause for reflection on the Lesson that has been read. It may be considered as the echo of the reading from Sacred Scripture.

The Alleluia is the prelude to the Gospel. It is the joyful anticipation of the great privilege that is ours: namely, that the sublime, the life-giving words of Christ Himself are about to be read to us.

The Tract presents thoughts conducive to quiet meditation and intensive reflection, the theme being always sorrowful in accordance with the penitential seasons in which it is used in the Mass.

Sequence. (The Sequence developed by adding words to the notes of the "a" of the Alleluia. These words were later put into metrical form. Sequences occur in Masses of Easter, Pentecost, Corpus Christi and Seven Dolors, and Requiem Masses.)

Priest: Cleanse my heart and my lips, O almighty God, Who didst cleanse the lips of the prophet Isaias with a burning coal: vouchsafe through Thy gracious mercy so to cleanse me that I may worthily proclaim Thy holy Gospel Through Christ Our Lord. Amen.

Gospel. (The Gospel is a reading selected from one of the Evangelists. The particular part which is read has been chosen by the Church to fit the particular feast or occasion which is being celebrated.)

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: The continuation of the holy Gospel according to St. N. (here he mentions the name of the Evangelist from whose account the Gospel of the Mass is taken and then reads the Gospel)...

Server: Praise be to Jesus Christ.

Priest (having finished the Gospel, kisses the book and says): By the words of the Gospel may our sins be blotted out.

The purpose of the Sequence is to form a sort of meditation on the Alleluia verse. This purpose is admirably carried out in the Sequences for Easter and Pentecost Sundays.

Raising his eyes to the crucifix the priest indicates that he wishes the Crucified Saviour to commission him to announce the sublime words of the Gospel; bowing profoundly he asks God to cleanse him, because only the pure may presume to speak the holy words of the Gospel.

The holy Gospel is worthy of the highest respect. This reverence is manifested by the congregation in arising to hear the sacred word. By the greeting, "The Lord be with you," the priest reminds the people that they are to take an active part in the Gospel. The priest makes the Sign of the Cross on the Gospel. Then to indicate that they wish to apply the blessing of God's words to themselves, both the priest and people make a small sign of the Cross on the forehead, lips and breast. "Praise be to Jesus Christ" is the server's expression of gratitude, which all experience at the privilege of being allowed to hear the very words of God Himself. Finally the priest's prayer that "our sins be blotted out" shows what value we attach to the Gospel.

Summary. This second part of the Mass from the Epistle to the Creed is made up entirely of passages from Holy Scripture. It is the word of God spoken to us in answer to our prayers of preparation that preceded. Both parts taken together form the Mass of the Catechumens or the Ante-Mass. So far the real Sacrifice has not begun, but everything is preparatory. We have come to God's holy altar, away from the noise of the world, to lay our cares and worries, our hopes and petitions before the Lord. Then God spoke to us through the words of the inspired writers. We listened to His teaching; and now, before we enter upon the first essential part of the Mass, i. e., the Offertory, we assure God that our faith in Him is strong. We do this by reciting the Creed:

Creed: I believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible. And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only-begotten Son of God, born of the Father before

In the words of this profession of faith we join the host of adorers who have paid homage to the Almighty through the ages. The very same words have been used by Catholics since the fourth century.

all ages; God of God, light of light, true God of true God; begotten not made; consubstantial with the Father; by Whom all things were made. Who for us men, and for our salvation, came down from heaven (the celebrant genuflects and adores the Word made flesh); and was Incarnate by the Holy Ghost, of the Virgin Mary; and was made man. He was crucified also for us, suffered under Pontius Pilate, and was buried. And the third day He arose again according to the Scriptures; and ascended into heaven. He sitteth at the right hand of the Father; and He shall come again with glory to judge the living and the dead; and His kingdom shall have no end. And in the Holy Ghost, the Lord and giver of life, who proceedeth from the Father and the Son, who together with the Father and the Son is adored and glorified; who spoke by the Prophets. And one, holy, catholic and apostolic Church. I confess one baptism for the remission of sins. And I await the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come. Amen.

III. From the Offertory to the Canon

Words of the Liturgy

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: Let us pray.

Offertory. (The Offertory prayer is proper to each Mass, and like the other proper parts it changes with each Mass. Formerly it was a long prayer chanted during the procession of the people as they brought their gifts to the altar. Today it is a short form of this processional chant.)

Receive, O holy Father, almighty and eternal God, this spotless host, which I, Thy unworthy servant, offer unto Thee, my living and true God, for mine own countless sins, offenses and negligences, and for all here present; as also for all faithful Christians living and dead, that it may avail both me and them

They serve to unite us intimately to Catholics of all times and all places professing our belief in the essential doctrines that Our Blessed Saviour came to earth to teach us.

We begin by professing our belief in God the Father. We dwell at length on the truths that center around Christ, for in Him the eyes of men have seen as much of the Divinity of God as it is permitted mortals to behold. Then comes our profession of faith in the Holy Ghost. Our faith in the three Divine Persons we confirm by our belief in the Catholic Church, for the Father commissioned the Son to establish that Church, and the Son sent the Holy Ghost to guide and guard it. Belief in the Church demands faith in baptism by which men enter it; demands also belief in the resurrection and in the life to come which is the reward or punishment of man's life while a member of it.

The Creed is thus seen to be a concise statement of the chief dogmas of our holy faith.

Significance of the Ritual

Once again the priest reminds the people of their active part in the Sacrifice. The words, "Let us pray," are an exhortation to those present to join in all the prayers of the Offertory.

By bringing gifts to the altar at this part of the Mass the early Christians showed their eagerness to take part in the Sacrifice. Though that early custom no longer obtains, we can and we should offer to God at this point the gift He most desires — the gift of our very selves.

Raising the host the priest offers it in the name of all those present to God; he offers it "for mine own countless sins . . . and for all here present"; then, as it were, he looks beyond the present and visualizes this same host after it has been consecrated and he prays that He Who is to come down from heaven unto salvation for life everlasting.

Amen.

O God, who in a marvellous manner didst create and ennoble human nature, and still more marvellously has renewed it, grant that, by the mystical union of this water and wine, we may be made partakers of His divinity who vouchsafed to become partaker of our humanity, Jesus Christ Thy Son, our Lord: Who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

We offer unto Thee, O Lord, the chalice of salvation, beseeching Thy clemency; that it may rise up in the sight of Thy divine majesty as a sweet savour, for our own salvation and for that of the whole world. Amen.

In a humble spirit and a contrite heart may we be received by Thee, O Lord, and may our sacrifice so be offered up in Thy sight this day that it may be pleasing to Thee, O Lord God.

Come, Thou who makest holy, almighty and eternal God, and bless this sacrifice prepared for Thy holy name.

Psalm xv, 6-12: I will wash my hands among the innocent: and will compass Thy altar, O Lord:

That I may hear the voice of Thy praise, and tell of all Thy wondrous works.

I have loved, O Lord, the beauty of Thy house, and the place where Thy glory dwelleth.

Take not away my soul, O God, with the wicked, nor my life with bloody men:

In whose hands are iniquities: their right hand is filled with gifts.

But as for me, I have walked in my innocence: redeem me, and have mercy on me.

My foot hath stood in the direct way: in the churches I will bless Thee, O Lord.

Glorify be to the Father, etc.

at the moment of Consecration may grant salvation to those who now offer it with him to the Eternal Father.

The priest, after he has poured the wine into the chalice, says this prayer while blessing the water. As can be seen from the prayer, the Church attaches a deep symbolical meaning to the mingling of the wine and water. The wine represents Christ (hence the wine is not blessed), the water represents man. As the water is merged in the wine, so do we desire to be assumed into the nature and the very being of Our Lord.

Once more the priest looks beyond the present moment: as he raises the chalice to offer it to God he is thinking not of the wine it contains but of the Blood that is to be. The salvation of the world is what he asks from heaven.

The very posture of the priest who bows profoundly as he says this prayer conveys the idea of humility and contrition which gives the keynote of the prayer. Humble and contrite we ask God to accept not only the bread and wine which we have offered, but to receive us also.

The priest raises his hands as though he would compel the Holy Ghost to come down from heaven to bless the offering.

This psalm is said by the priest while he washes his hands. Besides the very practical purpose of washing of the hands, there is also a symbolic purpose and meaning attached to the ceremony. Cleanliness and innocence go hand in hand, and the priest who is about to offer the most sublime of sacrifices needs to be cleansed from even the slightest speck of imperfection.

The psalm itself is a mixture of praise and petition: praise of God in the glory and beauty of His house, petition for mercy from the realization that man is ever too sinful to offer fitting sacrifice to his Maker.

The request to be numbered among the innocent has a very defi-

Receive, O Holy Trinity, this offering which we make to Thee in remembrance of the Passion, Resurrection and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in honor of blessed Mary ever Virgin, of blessed John the Baptist, of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, of these and of all the saints: that it may avail to their honor and our salvation: and may they vouchsafe to intercede for us in heaven, whose memory we keep on earth. Through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.

Priest: Brethren, pray that my sacrifice and yours may be acceptable to God the Father almighty.

Server: May the Lord receive the sacrifice at thy hands, to the praise and glory of His name, to our own benefit, and to that of all His holy Church. Amen.

Secret. (This is another prayer which varies with each Mass. The best explanation of the term "secret" seems to be that this prayer was the Offertory prayer of the "secret" or "select" congregation which remained after the catechumens had been dismissed.)

Priest: ... world without end.

Server: Amen.

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: Lift up your hearts.

Server: We have lifted them up unto the Lord.

Priest: Let us give thanks to the Lord our God.

Server: It is meet and right.

Preface. It is truly meet and just, right and availing unto salvation, that we should at all times and in all places give thanks unto Thee, O holy Lord, Father almighty and everlasting God, through Christ our Lord. Through whom the angels praise Thy majesty, the dominations worship it, the powers stand in awe. The heavens, and the heavenly hosts and the blessed seraphim join together in celebrating nite objective in view, viz., to be able to offer God the most perfect sacrifice possible to sinful man.

Man's preparation for the sacrifice of the Mass needs the approbation of heaven if it is to be a worthy sacrifice. Bowing down the priest addresses his prayer to the Most Blessed Trinity (a very rare thing in the Liturgy), and calls upon the saints of heaven to help make the sacrifice a fitting one. With the saints interceding for us we feel more certain that our offering will be pleasing to the Most High.

All are called upon to petition heaven to receive the sacrifice which the priest is about to offer in the name of all.

The glory of God, our own salvation, and the salvation of the whole Church—these form the basis of our claim upon the Lord for the acceptance of our sacrifice.

The thoughts contained in these secret prayers are always linked up with the sacrificial act which is soon to take place. Our offerings, unimportant in themselves, become tremendous in the light of what they are soon to become—Christ Himself.

These are the last words of the Secret which the priest says aloud. The responsories that follow form the introduction to the Preface. They were originally acclamations used by the people when meeting each other (see Book of Ruth ii, 4). Their function here is to remind us once again that all who assist at the Sacrifice of the Mass should take an active part in it.

This is the Common Preface used throughout the year on feasts and ferias which have no Proper Preface. There are fifteen Prefaces in the Roman Missal of today.

The main thought of the Preface is praise and adoration of God. This praise of God is the spontaneous cry of our souls as we draw ever closer to the central point in the great drama of the Mass.

their joy. With whom we pray Thee join our voices also, while we say with lowly praise:

Sanctus. Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts. Heaven and earth are full of Thy glory. Hosanna in the highest.

Benedictus. Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest.

Summary. The Offertory is the first of the three principal parts of the Mass. It is the preparation for the Sacrifice. Together with the priest we offer to God our gifts of bread and wine; by the mingling of water and wine we indicate that we wish to become one with Christ so that we may be offered with Him at the moment of Consecration; we beg God's blessing upon our offerings so that they may become a pleasing sacrifice; we wash our hands in spirit with the priest because only the pure can presume to offer sacrifice to the Lord; we call upon the angels and saints and upon God Himself to supply what is wanting to make our offering a worthy sacrifice; and finally we sing a hymn of praise and adoration as we join that everlasting chant of the angelic choirs: "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts. Heaven and earth are full of Thy glory. Hosanna in the highest. Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest."

IV. From the Beginning of the Canon to the Our Father

Words of the Liturgy

We therefore humbly pray and beseech Thee, O most merciful Father, through Jesus Christ Thy Son, our Lord, that Thou wouldst vouchsafe to receive and bless these gifts, these offerings, and these holy and unblemished sacrifices, which in the first place, we offer up to Thee for Thy holy Catholic Church, that it may please Thee to grant her peace, to protect, unite and govern her throughout the world, together with Thy servant Pius XII our Pope, (name of) our Bishop, and all true believers and professors of the Catholic and Apostolic faith.

Be mindful, O Lord, of Thy servants and handmaids NN. (here are mentioned the names of the living) and of all here present, whose faith and devotion are known to Thee, for whom we offer, or who offer up to Thee, this sacrifice of praise for themselves and all those dear to them, for the redemption of their souls, the hope of their safety and salvation: who now pay their vows to Thee, the eternal, living and true God.

In communion with, and venerating the memory in the first place

We repeat the words of the angelic hosts who worship at the throne of God singing continually their Holy, Holy, Holy.

He who came to Bethlehem is now about to come down upon our altar.

Significance of the Ritual

The priest bows low, kisses the altar, and silently prays to God, asking Him to receive our offerings through Jesus Christ. He makes three signs of the Cross over the oblation to show that Christ obtained for us the blessing of the Trinity by His death on Calvary. The offering is made in the name of the Pope and the Bishop, and of "all true believers and professors of the Catholic and Apostolic Faith." The entire Church thus participates in every Mass that is offered up to God.

Here, in the Memento for the living, the priest mentions those living persons in particular for whom he wishes to pray. He likewise prays for all those present at the Mass. He recommends their friends to God also. Notice that throughout the Canon the priest prays in the plural to indicate that the sacrifice being offered is the sacrifice of all.

The two prayers above were concerned with the Church militant.

of the glorious ever Virgin Mary, Mother of our God and Lord Jesus Christ; and also of Thy blessed Apostles and Martyrs Peter and Paul, Andrew, James, John, Thomas, James, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Simon and Thaddeus, Linus, Cletus, Clement, Sixtus, Cornelius, Cyprian, Laurence, Chrysogonus, John and Paul, Cosmas, and Damian, and of all Thy saints; by whose merits and prayers grant that we may be defended in all things by the help of Thy protection. Through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.

This oblation, therefore, of our service and that of Thy whole family, we beseech Thee, O Lord, graciously to accept, and to order our days in Thy peace and bid us to be delivered from eternal damnation and numbered among the flock of Thy elect. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Which oblation do Thou, O God, vouchsafe in all things to bless, approve, ratify, make worthy and acceptable: that it may become for us the Body and Blood of Thy most beloved Son our Lord Jesus Christ.

Who the day before He suffered took bread into His holy and venerable hands, and with His eyes lifted up to heaven, unto Thee, God, His almighty Father, giving thanks to Thee He blessed, broke, and gave it to His disciples saying: Take and eat ye all of this, for this is my Body.

In like manner, after He had supped, taking also this excellent chalice into His holy and venerable hands, and giving thanks to Thee, He blessed and gave it to His disciples, saying: Take and drink ye all of this, for this is the Chalice of my Blood, of the new testament: the mystery of faith: which shall be shed for you and for many unto the remission of sins.

As often as ye shall do these things, ye shall do them in remembrance of Me.

Wherefore, O Lord, we Thy servants, and likewise Thy holy people, calling to mind the blessed Passion of the same Christ Thy Son our

In this prayer the supplications of earth are joined with those of the Church triumphant in heaven. Our Blessed Lady, the Apostles, a number of Popes, and a few of the martyrs specially venerated in Rome are mentioned by name. They are the representatives of the whole celestial court upon whom we call. Here we see quite clearly the intimate connection between the faithful on earth and the saints in heaven.

Spreading his hands over the chalice and host, a sign of vicarious atonement, the priest now enters upon the most solemn part of the Mass. He begs God to accept our sacrifice. Once accepted, that sacrifice will bring us peace and salvation and "number us among the flock of the elect."

The priest repeats the plea for the acceptance of the sacrifice and adds a new petition: "That it may become for us the Body and Blood of Thy most beloved Son."

The Consecration is enclosed in the simple Gospel narrative. Man fades into the background and Christ, the great Celebrant of the Sacrifice, repeats those solemn words which change bread and wine into His Body and Blood. The stupendous miracle of miracles takes place before our very eyes.

The very simplicity of the Consecration is a stumbling block to many. But the Church adheres strictly to this simple form because she wishes to perform this most solemn and sacred of human acts in exactly the same manner as our Divine Saviour performed it on that night before He died.

This loving command of Our Lord is obeyed every time Holy Mass is celebrated.

The living memorial which the Mass is, recalls not only Christ's Passion but His Resurrection and Ascension as well. The shadows of Lord, His Resurrection from hell and also His glorious ascension into heaven, offer unto Thy most excellent Majesty, of Thy gifts and presents, a pure Victim, a holy Victim, a spotless Victim, the holy Bread of eternal life, and the Chalice of everlasting salvation.

Upon which vouchsafe to look with a propitious and serene countenance and to accept them as Thou wert pleased to accept the gifts of Thy just servant Abel, and the sacrifice of our Patriarch Abraham, and that which Thy priest Melchisedech offered to Thee, a holy sacrifice, a spotless Victim.

We most humbly beseech Thee, almighty God, command these things to be carried up by the hands of Thy holy angel to Thine altar on high, in the sight of Thy divine majesty, that as many of us who, by participation at this altar, shall receive the most sacred Body and Blood of Thy Son may be filled with every heavenly blessing and grace. Through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.

Be mindful also, O Lord, of Thy servants and handmaids (here are mentioned the names of the dead) who are gone before us with the sign of faith and repose in the sleep of peace. To these, O Lord, and to all that rest in Christ, grant, we beseech Thee, a place of refreshment, light and peace. Through the same Christ our Lord. Amen.

And to us sinners also, Thy servants, hoping in the multitude of Thy mercies, vouchsafe to grant some part and fellowship with Thy holy apostles and martyrs: with John, Stephen, Matthias, Barnabas, Ignatius, Alexander, Marcellinus, Peter, Felicitas, Perpetua, Agatha, Lucy, Agnes, Cecilia, Anastasia, and with all Thy saints, into whose company admit us, we beseech Thee, not considering our merits but pardoning our offenses. Through Christ our Lord.

Through whom, O Lord, Thou dost always create, sanctify, quick-

Calvary are dispersed by the glory of Easter morn and Ascension Thursday. More than a memorial is the Mass, it is a true sacrifice—the holiest sacrifice ever known to man. Further, it is the “Bread of eternal life,” the Bread which sustains us here on earth and which will bring us ultimately to heaven.

The sacrifices of Abel, Abraham, and Melchisedech (Gen. iv, 4; xxii, 10; xiv, 18) were types of the sacrifice of the Mass. We ask God that as He was pleased to accept the sacrifices of these holy men so also to receive our sacrifice—our sacrifice which is a “holy sacrifice, a spotless Victim.”

But Abel, Abraham, and Melchisedech were holy men, whereas we are sinners. Lest our faults stand in the way the priest begs God to send down an angel from heaven. Carried to heaven by the pure hands of a spirit our sacrifice must surely find favor with the Most High.

Before the Consecration we prayed for the Church militant and we called to mind the Church triumphant. Now we turn our thoughts to the Church suffering. We remember our own loved ones and also the entire army of souls that have gone “before us with the sign of faith.”

Finally, we pray for ourselves. In Christian modesty we have remembered the Church, the living, the saints, and the dead. To this gathering we now join ourselves. Once again we become conscious of the communion of saints because our union with Christ in the Sacrifice has rekindled our hope of a share in their happiness. In the list of saints before the Consecration Our Lady was mentioned first. Here we give the first place to St. John the Baptist, the great saint of the Old Testament.

In this prayer we summarize all that has gone before. We repeat en, bless, and bestow upon us all these Thy gifts.

Through Him, and with Him, and in Him, be unto Thee, O God the Father almighty, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, all honor and glory, world without end.

Server: Amen.

Summary. We have seen the very heart of the Mass. Christ has come down upon the altar. Around the central act of the Consecration the Church has entwined a wreath of prayers. We pray for the entire Church and all her members, and especially for the Pope, the Bishop of the diocese, and all the promoters of our holy faith; then for the Church in miniature which is assembled before the altar; we gaze heavenward and call to mind the Church triumphant; then after the Consecration we are mindful of the Church suffering; then finally we pray for ourselves. All creation has gathered together at the altar of God in fulfilment of those prophetic words of Our Blessed Saviour: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all things to myself" (Jn. xii, 32).

V. From the Our Father to the End of the Mass

Words of the Liturgy

Our Father. Let us pray: Taught by Thy saving precepts and guided by the divine institution, we make bold to say: Our Father, Who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation. But deliver us from evil. Amen.

Deliver us, we beseech Thee, O Lord, from all evils, past, present and to come, and by the intercession of the blessed and glorious ever Virgin Mary, Mother of God, together with Thy blessed Apostles Peter and Paul, and Andrew, and all the saints, mercifully grant peace in our days: that through the bounteous help of Thy mercy we may be always free from sin and secure from all disturbance. Through the same Jesus Christ Thy Son our Lord who liveth and reigneth with Thee in the unity of the Holy Ghost, one God, world without end. Amen.

our belief in Christ as the Mediator of all gifts, both natural and supernatural.

The Canon comes to a close with the most solemn Doxology in all the Liturgy. It is eminently fitting to pay our respects to the three Divine Persons at so solemn a moment.

By this response, the server in the name of the people, ratifies all the prayers of the Canon that have gone before.

Significance of the Ritual

The Our Father is the most perfect prayer known to man. Christ Himself gave it to us. The first three petitions are directed to God's honor and glory, the last four deal with the needs of man. The Our Father is primarily the prayer of the multitude and not that of the individual (Our Father; give us; etc.). In the Mass the petitions of the Our Father are realized: God's kingdom is firmly established, and sin is vanquished.

This prayer is a continuation of the last petition of the Our Father: "deliver us from evil." The thought of our wickedness overwhelms us and we insist that God come to our assistance. But we go farther than that merely negative request for deliverance from evil — we ask for peace. Peace is the keynote of Christianity. Confidently we ask for this gift of peace knowing that Christ will say to us as He said to His disciples long ago: "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth do I give unto you" (Jn. xiv, 27).

Priest: The peace of the Lord be always with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Breaking of Bread. May this mingling and consecration of the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ be to us who receive it effectual to life everlasting. Amen.

Agnus Dei. Lamb of God who takest away the sins of the world, have mercy on us (said three times).

Prayer before Communion. O Lord Jesus Christ, who saidst to Thy Apostles, Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you; look not upon my sins, but upon the faith of Thy Church; and vouchsafe to grant her peace and unity according to Thy will: O God who livest and reignest world without end. Amen.

O Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the living God, who according to the will of the Father, through the co-operation of the Holy Ghost, hast by Thy death given life to the world: deliver me by this Thy most holy Body and Blood from all my transgressions and from all evils; make me always adhere to Thy commandments and never suffer me to be separated from Thee; who with the same God the Father and the Holy Ghost livest and reignest God, for ever and ever.

Let not the partaking of Thy Body, O Lord Jesus Christ, which I, though unworthy, presume to receive, turn to my judgment and condemnation: but through Thy goodness may it be unto me a safeguard and a healing remedy both of soul and body; who livest and reignest with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Ghost, God, world without end. Amen.

I will take the bread of heaven, and call upon the name of the Lord. Lord, I am not worthy that Thou shouldst enter under my roof; say but the word and my soul shall be healed (repeated three times).

May the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve my soul to life everlasting. Amen.

The priest as Christ's representative wishes us that peace for which we have asked.

The priest breaks off a small piece of the Host, and drops it into the Precious Blood, praying for salvation particularly for those who are about to receive God in Holy Communion.

Mercy and peace are the gifts we beg of God. Insistently we repeat the petition three times.

We are all sinful men; the priest himself realizes his own unworthiness; yet, relying on Christ's promise, we ask once again for peace—that peace which only God can give. Look not at our sins and failings, O Lord, but consider the faith of Thy holy Church.

Here the priest prays that he may be preserved from an unworthy Communion, asking, at the same time, for the blessed effects of that Body and Blood which he is soon to receive. Freedom from sin, obedience to the commandments, and perseverance to the end—these are the requests of God's minister. He prays confidently, knowing that God can do all things.

This third prayer in preparation for Holy Communion is primarily a prayer of humility. The priest here prays for the real effects of the Holy Eucharist, viz., protection against the dangers of soul and body, and the healing of the wounds of fallen nature.

Here the priest uses that excellent prayer of the centurion, a prayer alive with humility, faith in God, and trust in His Omnipotence. Christ heard the prayer of the centurion; He will hear our prayer also if we say it as sincerely as did the centurion.

A plea for eternal life is the priest's last request as he receives the sacred Body of Christ.

What shall I render to the Lord for all the things that He hath rendered to me? I will take the chalice of salvation, and I will call upon the name of the Lord.

Praising, I will call upon the Lord, and I shall be saved from my enemies.

May the Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve my soul to life everlasting. Amen.

Server: I confess to almighty God, to blessed Mary ever Virgin, etc. (as at the beginning of Mass).

Priest: May almighty God have mercy upon you, forgive you your sins, and bring you to life everlasting. Amen.

May the almighty and merciful Lord grant you pardon, absolution, and remission of your sins. Amen.

Behold the Lamb of God, behold Him who taketh away the sins of the world.

Lord I am not worthy that Thou shouldst enter under my roof; say but the word and my soul shall be healed (said three times).

May the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ preserve thy soul to life everlasting. Amen.

Grant, O Lord, that what we have taken with our mouth, we may receive with a pure mind: and that from a temporal gift it may become for us an eternal remedy.

May Thy Body, O Lord, which I have received, and Thy Blood which I have drunk, cleave to my inmost parts, and grant that no stain of sin may remain in me, whom these pure and holy sacraments have refreshed. Who livest and reignest world without end. Amen.

Communion. (This prayer changes with each Mass. Originally it was composed of an entire psalm, but now it is made up of only a few verses taken from a psalm.)

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Postcommunion. (This is the last of the variable prayers of the Mass. In the Postcommunion the priest makes new petitions, and he makes them with great confidence because he has become one with Christ

How can man thank God adequately for the wonderful gift of the Eucharist? "I will take the chalice of salvation," says the priest, realizing that the only proper way to thank God is through the gifts that He Himself has given us.

Eternal life is the insistent plea of the priest as he reverently receives the Precious Blood.

In these prayers that precede the Communion of the faithful we find the same elements which are contained in the priest's preparatory prayers: sorrow for sin, humility, confidence and trust. We find likewise the plea for eternal life. Here in the Eucharist man receives a foretaste of the life in heaven. Christ came to save men from sin; He came not for the men of His own day only but for men of all time; in the Eucharist the men of every century of time, of every nation under the sun find the answer to the riddle of life. Through the Eucharist all men can become partakers of Him who said of Himself: "I am the life."

Our hearts are set on receiving life everlasting and we do not grow weary of asking this great gift from Christ who now resides in our souls.

In order to be worthy of everlasting life we must spend our present life in accordance with God's wishes. Hence the priest prays God to live in him and keep him free from every stain of sin.

For a proper appreciation of the Communion Prayer it must be studied with the rest of the psalm from which it is taken.

Once again the congregation is reminded of its active role in the Mass.

With the thought of the great graces that have come with the reception of Holy Communion the priest petitions God for further blessings, both natural and supernatural.

through the reception of His Body and Blood.)

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: Go, you are dismissed.

Server: Thanks be to God.

May the homage of my bounden duty be pleasing to Thee, O holy Trinity; and grant that the sacrifice which I, though unworthy, have offered in the sight of Thy majesty may be acceptable to Thee, and through Thy mercy be a propitiation for me and for all those for whom I have offered it. Through Christ our Lord. Amen.

May almighty God bless you, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Priest: The Lord be with you.

Server: And with thy spirit.

Priest: The beginning of the holy Gospel according to St. John.

Server: Glory be to Thee, O Lord.

Priest: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was made nothing that was made. In Him was life, and the life was the light of men: and the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness did not comprehend it.

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. This man came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men through Him might believe. He was not the light, but was to bear witness of the light.

That was the true light, which enlighteneth every man that cometh into this world. He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them He gave power to become the sons Another admonition to the faithful to unite their prayers with those of the celebrant.

The formal dismissal "Ite missa est" seemed so characteristic of the entire ceremony that the sacrificial rite came to be known as the "Mass."

The Sacrifice is completed. Again the priest remembers his sinfulness and unworthiness as he sends a fervent prayer to the Most Blessed Trinity whom he asks to accept the sacrifice from his own unworthy hands, a propitiation for himself and for all those for whom he has offered it.

The priest kisses the altar, raises his eyes and hands as if to receive the blessing from above, and then gives the blessing to the faithful.

The final plea of the priest begging those present to join him in prayer.

This Gospel from the pen of St. John is filled with deep meaning. Briefly: St. John first tells us of Christ as God, as Creator, and as Redeemer; he then narrates the coming of the precursor, St. John the Baptist, being careful to emphasize the fact that John was not the Messiah but only His herald; then follows the story of Christ's coming into the world — He is the light of the world "and the world knew Him not"; even His chosen people failed to receive Him, but they who do receive Him will be made "sons of God"; finally the climax "and the Word was made Flesh," that incomprehensible mystery of God's goodness to sinful man.

The Mass is truly the verification of St. John's words. In the most sublime manner possible we have seen that the "Word was made Flesh, and dwelt among us; and we saw His glory, the glory as it were of the only-begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." Sinful man could never have dared to ask so much from God had not God Himself freely granted us so great a grace.

of God: to them that believe in His name: who are born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. (Genuflection.)

And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us: and we saw His glory, the glory as it were of the only-begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.

Server: Thanks be to God.

Summary. This last part of the Mass is the completion of the Sacrifice. We offered our gifts to God, Christ Himself changed our gifts of bread and wine into His Body and Blood, and now the Sacrifice is completed by our reception of Holy Communion. We began our preparation for Communion with the Our Father; we begged God to keep us from evil, to grant us His peace; humbled by the thought of our sins we grew confident at the thought of God's goodness and approached His Holy Table to become one with Him; we asked Him to take full possession of our souls and bodies, to help us through every moment of our lives; we received the blessing of the Most Holy Trinity from God's minister; and so we go confidently to our daily tasks because God is with us. "If God be for us, who is against us?" (Romans viii, 31).

ON THE USE OF THE MISSAL

(Adapted from a pamphlet entitled "To Find the Place in a Missal," with permission of the author, Rev. Paul Bussard.)

Mass of the Catechumens

- |                                     |            |
|-------------------------------------|------------|
| 5. Collect                          | 6. Epistle |
| 4. Gloria                           | 7. Gradual |
| 3. Kyrie                            | 8. Gospel  |
| 2. Introit                          | 9. Sermon  |
| 1. Prayer at the foot of the altar. | 10. Creed  |

The parts of the Mass in ordinary type are called "Ordinary prayers," and they are the same for every Mass throughout the year; those in italics are also "Ordinary prayers," but they are sometimes omitted. The parts in heavy type are called "Proper prayers," and they vary with each Mass that is said.

All that is necessary is to fit the Proper prayers into their place in the Ordinary prayers. Take the Mass for the first Sunday of Advent (usually in the beginning of the Missal) and the Ordinary of the Mass (usually in the center). First come the prayers at the foot of the altar (Ordinary); then the Introit (turn to the Proper); then the Kyrie (back to the Ordinary); then the Gloria (Ordinary); then the Collect (turn back to the Proper); then the Epistle, Gradual, and Gospel (all in the Proper); finally the Creed (back to the Ordinary).

Mass of the Faithful

- |                               |                       |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------|

| 4. Preface                    | 13. Postcommunion     |
| 3. Secret                     | 14. Blessing          |
| 2. Offering of bread and wine | 15. Last Gospel       |
| 1. Offertory Chant            |                       |

Again the Ordinary prayers are in ordinary type; the Proper prayers in heavy type. The Prefaces are together in one place and in some Missals the prayers after the Preface (Canon) follow the Preface in the Missal; in others they follow the Ordinary prayers of the Mass of the Catechumens.

There are only four Proper prayers in this last part of the Mass. The Communion and Postcommunion are said after the book has been moved back to the Epistle side of the altar. The Offertory Chant is said immediately after the Creed. The Secret is said after the priest turns to the congregation and says, "Orate fratres."

The Proper of the Saints

Saints' days come on a certain fixed date of the month. St. Valentine's day is on February 14, the Assumption on August 15, St. Therese on Oct. 3, and so on. Accordingly there is another part of the Missal called the Proper of the Saints. It contains the Proper parts of the Mass for the feasts of saints just as the Sunday Proper does for Sunday Masses.

The Common of the Saints

If all the Proper parts of a Saint's Mass are not found in the Mass of that day, reference is made to the Common of the Saints (the Masses that Saints have in common, e. g., Martyrs, Confessors, etc.).

The Ordo

Every priest has a little book called an Ordo. It contains specific directions about the Mass which is to be said on a particular day. This Ordo is now translated for the laity. It can be had in pamphlet form, and is printed each week in many of the diocesan papers.

RUBRICS FOR THE LAITY

How the Faithful Should Conduct Themselves during Church Services

Low Mass

According to the rubrics of the missal, all who assist at low Mass should kneel during the whole Mass except at the Gospel, when they stand. Custom, however, has modified this as follows:

When the celebrant enters the sanctuary to begin Mass, the congregation either kneels at once or stands up, according to the custom in that particular church. When the priest descends from the altar after opening the missal, however, all shall kneel.

They remain kneeling until the priest, having finished the prayer at the center of the altar, goes over to read the Gospel. All stand until the Gospel is finished.

If the priest makes any announcements, or preaches to the congregation, they should be seated. When he begins the Gospel in English, they should stand and listen reverently to the word of God.

Should the Credo be recited, the people remain standing, and genuflect with the priest during it. When he turns to them after the Credo is finished, and says "Dominus vobiscum," they may sit down.

At the Sanctus, when the altar boy rings the bell three times, all shall kneel. Thus they remain until after the priest's Communion, and also during the Communion of the faithful, should there be any receiving at that Mass.

After Communion, when the priest has closed the tabernacle door, the congregation may sit down while the celebrant purifies and covers the chalice.

They should kneel again, however, as soon as the priest goes to the missal.

After the blessing, all rise and stand during the reading of the last Gospel, genuflecting with the priest during it.

When the priest descends from the altar and kneels, they shall kneel with him and say the prayers in a loud, clear voice.

No one should leave his place in the church until the priest has re-entered the sacristy.

High Mass: Missa Cantata

(The following rubrics are preceptive for the laity in the Diocese of Fargo, N. D., and may be considered as directive in other dioceses. They are the only rubrics preceptive for the laity in any diocese in the United States.)

In general those present at a sung Mass follow, as far as possible, the ceremonies observed by the clergy who may be present in choir at the Mass. Accordingly:

They stand when the procession to the altar makes its appearance from the sacristy, and remain standing until the Mass is begun, even though the Asperges takes place. Each person bows and makes the Sign of the Cross when sprinkled at the Asperges.

All kneel for the prayers of preparation (up to the "Oremus") and stand when the celebrant ascends the altar steps.

All remain standing for the Introit, Kyrie, and the Gloria, while they are recited by the celebrant. When the celebrant has sat down for the singing of the Gloria, all sit. They rise when the celebrant rises towards the end of this chant.

All stand for the singing of the prayers (except at a Requiem Mass) and sit for the chanting of the Epistle and what follows.

When "Dominus vobiscum" is sung before the chanting of the Gospel all stand. They remain standing during the recitation of the Creed, genuflecting with the celebrant at the words "et incarnatus," etc. All sit when the celebrant has sat down for the singing of the Creed. While the words "et incarnatus," etc., are sung all bow. (Only those who are standing at the time when these words are begun then kneel.) They rise when the celebrant rises towards the end of the Creed, remain standing while he sings "Dominus vobiscum" and "Oremus," and then sit.

When the celebrant begins to sing "Per omnia saecula saeculorum" before the Preface, all rise and remain standing until the Sanctus has been recited (or sung, if the people sing it). Then all kneel. All bow down during the Consecration but look up for a moment at the Sacred Host (saying "My Lord and My God") and at the chalice, when they are elevated. After the Elevation all stand until the celebrant has drunk the Precious Blood. (They bow while the celebrant consumes the Sacred Host and drinks the contents of the chalice.) Then all sit.

Note: If Holy Communion is given, those who are about to communicate kneel for the Confiteor and other prayers that precede Communion, and kneel when they return to their places after having received the Eucharist. All others remain standing for the prayers, but kneel for the distribution of Communion and remain kneeling until the Blessed Sacrament has been returned to the tabernacle.

All stand for the singing of "Dominus vobiscum" before the Postcommunion prayers, and remain standing during these prayers (except at a Requiem Mass, when they kneel).

All kneel for the Blessing and make the Sign of the Cross.

All stand for the last Gospel (genuflecting if the celebrant genuflects during its recitation) and remain standing until the procession has returned to the sacristy.

Solemn High Mass

The rubrics are the same as for a high Mass. Note, however, that the congregation does not stand while the celebrant reads the Gospel, but only when the deacon commences it, with "Dominus vobiscum." And when the altar boy incenses the people at the Offertory they should all stand.

Masses for the Dead

At low Masses for the dead, the same rubrics are to be observed as at other low Masses.

At high Masses, either with or without the presence of the corpse in the church, the faithful kneel from the beginning of the Mass until the Epistle, during which they should sit down.

They stand during the singing of the Gospel.

They sit down during the Offertory, until the priest begins the Preface, when they stand, and remain standing until the Sanctus.

Then they kneel until after the priest's Communion. They may sit after Communion, whilst the priest purifies and covers the chalice.

Should the priest or clergy sit down at any time during the Mass, as is done sometimes during the singing of the "Dies Irae" after the Epistle, the faithful should also sit.

If the Libera (the absolution of the body) is performed after the Mass, the people should rise as the priest approaches the catafalque and stand during the ceremony.

Vespers

All should kneel when the celebrant kneels at the foot of the altar and says the first prayer. They rise when he rises, and remain standing until he sits down after the intoning of the first psalm by the chanters. At the Gloria Patri, at the end of each psalm, all should bow the head.

During the singing of the chapter, when the five psalms are finished, all should stand up. If the celebrant kneels during the singing of a hymn the people should kneel.

During the singing of the "Magnificat," whilst the altar is incensed by the celebrant, the people stand.

When the celebrant kneels at the foot of the altar, before the exposition of the Blessed Sacrament, all kneel and remain kneeling until Benediction is finished and the tabernacle door is closed, when they rise and remain standing until the priest has left the sanctuary.

Rubrics for all Occasions

In church all should center their attention on the altar and think only of God Who dwells there for them. They should avoid all manner of noise, or any distraction to others. They should be clean in their person and dress, and avoid the slightest appearance of indiscretion.

If they do not feel inclined to mental prayer, they should read their prayer-books or say the rosary.

Going to and from the confessional, or the Communion rail, the eyes should be cast down, the hands held in a respectful manner, and the whole person should reflect the utmost recollection and modesty.

SICK CALLS

When the priest is called to administer the Sacraments in our homes to the sick, the following preparations should be made:

1. The room should be clean and suitably ornamented.
2. A small table should be conveniently placed, covered with a white cloth.
3. A crucifix placed in the center of the table.
4. Two blessed candles placed in candlesticks on the table. These should be lighted when the priest is expected.
5. A vessel containing holy water should be provided, and a sprinkler if possible.
6. A glass of fresh water placed on the table, a teaspoon and a plate with small crumbs of bread for cleansing the oil from the hands of the priest.
7. A white cloth or towel placed ready to be used by the sick person while receiving Holy Communion.
8. Some cotton wool provided to wipe away the anointing.

When the priest is known to be carrying the Blessed Sacrament, it is a very laudable custom for one of the family to meet him at the street door with a lighted candle and escort him to the sick room. All those present in the room should kneel when the priest enters with the Blessed Sacrament.

During the administration of Communion and Extreme Unction the members of the family should assemble in the sick room and pray for the patient.

rites

Liturgy and rite are not the same thing. Liturgy is the broader term. It denotes the public act of worship; rite is the manner in which the act of worship is performed. Specifically the liturgy is the Church's public and lawful act of worship performed and conducted by the officials whom the Church has designated for the post — her priests. The whole collection of services used in public worship in a certain church or group of churches comprises a rite. But while the indiscriminate use of the two terms is thus not exact, common usage as expressed by many authorities on the liturgical question permits the practice.

The early history of rites is obscure. At the Last Supper the Apostles saw Christ institute the Holy Sacrifice. Later in their apostolic journeys it was natural to embellish the essentials of the Mass and the sacraments which they had learned from Christ with additions of their own choosing. The additions were the outgrowth of reverence, custom and necessity. According to their own temperament and the needs of their people in various parts of the world the Apostles and their successors devised appropriate ceremonies to accompany the Holy Sacrifice and the administration of the sacraments. During the period of persecution rites were numerous and diverse. After the peace of Constantine when the Church became better organized, local practices were combined and the rites became more uniform throughout ecclesiastical provinces. The patriarchs imposed some uniformity of rite within the regions of their jurisdiction, and in this way the old Patriarchates of Rome, Alexandria and Antioch are responsible for the foundations of all the rites used in the Church today. Although all Europe practically belonged to the Roman Patriarchate, still Gaul and Northwest Europe had special rites till the seventh and eighth centuries.

The Rites of the Western Church

Roman Rite — For all practical purposes this is the one universal rite used in the Western Church. With an isolated exception here and there, Latin is the only language used.

Gallican Rite — This rite, as a separate thing, has disappeared, but it has not departed without having left traces of its influence on the Roman Rite. Its name is derived from the country where it was principally used, that is, Gaul. There are, however, two extant remnants of this rite:

Ambrosian Rite, also called Milanese, which is in use in the Archdiocese of Milan.

Mozarabic Rite, which is used in the Cathedral of Toledo.

The Rites of the Eastern Church (See also Uniate Eastern Churches)

There are five principal rites which are used in their entirety or in modified form by the various Churches of the East. They are the Byzantine, Alexandrian, Antiochean, Armenian and Chaldean.

Byzantine Rite — This was originally proper to the Church of Constantinople. It is based on the Rite of St. James of Jerusalem and that of the churches of Antioch, and reached Constantinople through Caesarea. The rite was reformed by St. Basil and later by St. John Chrysostom. It is now used by the whole Orthodox Eastern Church, by many Uniates and is the most widely spread rite after the Roman.

The Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom is the ordinary one. The Liturgy of St. Basil is used for the Sundays of Lent (except Palm Sunday), Maundy Thursday, Holy Saturday, the Vigils of Christmas, Epiphany and the feast of St. Basil.

Alexandrian Rite — There are no extant records of this rite, called also the Liturgy of St. Mark; but existing manuscripts of the old rite, after it was somewhat modified by the Copts and Melkites, reveal the general outlines of the ancient liturgy.

The Coptic Church uses an adaptation of the Byzantine Rite of St. Basil for ordinary days and Sundays; that of St. Mark and that of St. Cyril are used on their respective feast days; and the Liturgy of St. Gregory Nazianzen is used on the great feast days.

The Ethiopian Church uses an expanded version of St. Mark's Liturgy. The liturgy is substantially that of the Coptic Church.

Antiochean Rite — This rite is the source of more derived rites than any of the other parent rites. Its origin may be traced to the Eighth Book of the Apostolic Constitutions and to the Liturgy of St. James of Jerusalem, the "brother of the Lord." This latter ultimately spread to the whole patriarchate, displacing the older form of the Apostolic Constitutions.

Armenian Rite — This liturgy is essentially the Greek Liturgy of St. Basil, and is considered to be an old form of the Byzantine Rite. It is used exclusively by all Armenians.

Chaldean Rite — By some writers this is classed under the Antiochean Rite. Though there is historical evidence for such a derivation, in the list according to the Sacred Congregation for the Oriental Church it is separate and considered a distinct rite. There are two broad divisions: the Chaldean properly so called, used by the Chaldee Uniates, and the Malabarese, employed by the Malabar Uniates.

Liturgical Practices Common to All Eastern Rites

Eucharistic Liturgy — Among the Orientals, leavened bread is used by all, with the exception of the Maronites and the Armenians who use unleavened bread, and the Ethiopians who may use either one or the other. All have Communion under both species except the Maronites. Communion under one species is usual among the Chaldeans and it is permitted among the Ethiopians. On the Vigils of Christmas and Easter the liturgy is celebrated in the evening by the Syrians (Western) and the Chaldeans. This latter body also celebrates it in the evening on the Vigil of Holy Thursday.

Sacramental Liturgy — Baptism by immersion is the common practice in the East, except among the Maronites and the Malabarese. And among all rites, except the Malabarese, it is immediately followed by Confirmation administered by a priest. The Malabar Christians separate it from Confirmation, the administration of the latter being entrusted to a bishop.

Penance is administered in the East with the deprecativ form, i. e., "May God absolve you," etc. The Armenians are an exception here for they use the indicative form common to the Roman Rite, i. e., "I absolve you," etc.

Holy Eucharist is explained above.

Extreme Unction in the East requires seven priests, but ordinarily for all practical purposes one suffices.

Holy Orders throughout the East has only two minor orders, lector and subdeacon, in addition to deaconship and the priesthood. The Armenians are to be excepted, for they have the same four minor orders and the three major orders as in the Western rites.

Matrimony usually consists of two parts in the East: first a "blessing" of the bride and groom; and then a "crowning." The expression of the matrimonial consent is implicit in the Eastern Churches. The Armenian Church is the only one in which the consent is expressly declared.

THE UNIATE EASTERN CHURCHES

The division of the Catholic Church into two parts, the Western or Latin Church and the Eastern Church, is the result of political accidents: the division of the Roman Empire by Diocletian (284-305), again by the sons of Theodosius I (Arcadius in the East, 395-408; Honorius in the West, 395-423); and finally, the breach was strengthened by the establishment of the Holy Roman Empire by Charles the Great (Charlemagne) in 800. The Western Church is that subject to the Bishop of Rome as Patriarch of the West; the Eastern Church is that within the boundaries of the Eastern Empire whose capital was Constantinople (Byzantium).

When we speak of the Eastern Church we must not imagine that it is one integral body as is the Church subject to the Patriarch of the West. Not since before the Council of Nicea (325) has there been a unified Eastern Church. At that Council three patriarchs were recognized, those of Rome, Alexandria and Antioch; by 451 two more were added: Jerusalem and Constantinople. Thus four patriarchates constitute the Eastern Church, as opposed to the one Western patriarchate.

Any Catholic who is not subject to the Bishop of Rome as his patriarch but who does recognize him as the Supreme Pontiff of the Catholic Church is a Uniate. A Uniate Eastern Church is any Eastern Church in communion with Rome. It is a matter of little concern where the Uniate lives; he may be in North America or Syria; he still belongs to the Uniate Church of his patriarch. It is not possible to assign definite geographical limits to a Uniate Church and say that in such a place is found this Church exclusively. Since the Uniate may move about, the Uniate Church is found wherever Uniate Catholics dwell.

There are some fundamental distinctions which when they are clarified help to dispel much of the confusion concerning the Eastern Churches. They have to do with the terms, religion, patriarchate, rite, language and place.

The Catholic religion, founded by Jesus Christ, comprises those truths, precepts and means of salvation by which those who profess it are united with God and, in virtue of this union, with one another. It is therefore one religion, not a plurality of religions. Hence one is a Catholic or not depending upon his adherence to or rejection of the tenets of the Catholic Church.

The five Bishops of Rome, Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem and Constantinople are all patriarchs by equal right. The patriarchate or geographical territory over whose inhabitants each rules comprises many dioceses whose bishops are subject to the respective patriarch (see Patriarchs).

A rite may be defined as the manner of performing all services for the public worship of God and the sanctification of men (see Rites).

Language naturally is concerned with rite but is its least important note. In theory any rite may be celebrated in any language without ceasing to be the same rite, e.g., the Mass could be said in English and still remain the Mass said according to the Roman Rite.

Lastly, place is of little moment in the Eastern Churches. At one time this was otherwise. When there were clear-cut geographical divisions of patriarchates, a Uniate was born within the limits of a particular patriarchate. Now a man belongs to his rite wherever he may dwell and his children inherit this quality from him wheresoever they may travel.

When these distinctions are clear it can be seen that it is not necessary to hear Mass in the Latin language or to receive the sacraments according to the Roman Ritual in order to be a member of the Catholic Church. Unity of religion is not the same thing as uniformity of rite. The profession of the Catholic Faith is not the same as the manner in which it is professed.

Though a discussion of the schismatic Eastern Churches is beyond the scope of this article, yet some consideration of them must be made when the Uniate Churches are classified. The greater part of the Uniate Churches are reunited portions of the schismatic Churches. The Maronite Church, never having been in schism, is an exception to this rule. The Eastern Catholics who are in union with the Bishop of Rome as head of the Church are: Uniate Copts, Ethiopian Uniates, Syrian Uniates, Chaldee Uniates, Uniate Armenians, Malabar Uniates, Byzantine Uniates, and the Maronite Church.

Uniate Copts are under the Patriarch of Alexandria who lives at Cairo. They use old Coptic in their liturgy which is Alexandrian in origin. Arabic, the present-day vernacular, is becoming more prominent for liturgical functions.

Ethiopian Uniates were converted from the Ethiopian National Church which went into schism with the Copts. Their rite is substantially Coptic (Alexandrian), with Geez, the classical language. Since the conquest of Ethiopia by Italy full freedom is assured Catholic missionaries.

Syrian Uniates were converted from the Jacobites in 1781. Their patriarch lives at Beirut. A derivation of the Antiochean Rite is used in a Syrian dialect.

Chaldee Uniates were converted from Nestorianism. They use an adaptation of the Antiochean Rite with the Syriac language. Their immediate superior lives at Mosul as minor Patriarch of Babylon.

Uniate Armenians were converted from the Armenian National Church. The head of this group is the Uniate Armenian minor Patriarch of Cilicia. They are found principally in the Levant, Italy and Austria. Their liturgy is a derivation from the Byzantine Rite but the Armenian tongue is used.

Malabar Uniates were converted from the Malabar Christians in India in 1599. They lack a patriarch, having instead three vicars apostolic. Their liturgy is fundamentally Antiochean but has been so altered that it may be called a separate rite. Syriac is the principal language with an occasional use of Arabic.

Byzantine Uniates are the Catholic counterpart of the extensive Orthodox Church (see Orthodoxy). These Uniates have no common authority other than that of the Supreme Pontiff. They represent groups which have never been in schism and others which have been reunited to Rome in different countries and at various times. Their common bond, besides union with the Supreme Pontiff and all it implies, is the use of the Byzantine Rite (that used by the Greek Orthodox, i.e., the schismatic, Church in Constantinople) at least in its fundamental notes, even though this rite is used in various languages. Within this group there are several divisions: (1) Melkites in Syria and Egypt using Arabic liturgically and subject to the Patriarch of Antioch; (2) Greek Uniates in Greece and Turkey using Greek liturgically; (3) Ruthenians in Austria and Hungary, using old Slavonic; (4) Bulgarian Uniates also using Old Slavonic; (5) Rumanian Uniates using their own language liturgically; (6) Italo-Greeks in Italy, Sicily and Paris using Greek liturgically but with many Latin modifications in their rite; (7) Russian Uniates using Paleoslavonic in their liturgy. Since the Revolution in 1917 this Church has been practically extinct in Russia but the Church has been spread throughout Europe and the United States. Rome is keeping this Church alive by instituting colleges for Russian priests (even from other nations and rites) in various countries of the Latin Rite.

The Maronite Church is a group with no counterpart; there is no such thing as a schismatic Maronite. They are found in Lebanon, Egypt, Cyprus and the United States. Their liturgy is basically Antiochean with modifications including the use of the Syriac tongue.

This completes the list of the Eastern Churches. In addition to these Uniate Eastern Churches, there are seven schismatical Eastern Churches: the great Orthodox Church, one formed by the Nestorian heresy and five arising from Monophysitism (Copts, Ethiopians, Jacobites, Malabar Christians and Armenians).

The attitude of Roman Catholics towards the Uniates varies considerably with the extent of their knowledge. Many do not know that there can be and are Catholics who do not pray before statues of the Blessed Mother of Christ and St. Joseph, who have never been to Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, who do not genuflect in passing before the Blessed Sacrament. Those who have heard only superficially about the Eastern Churches are inclined to consider them a cross between Catholicism and Protestantism, and this attitude unfortunately has been fostered quite strenuously by Anglicanism. Uniates are Catholics and have as much right to be so treated as Latins. Regarding faith and morals they must be numbered with the Romans. Schism and heresy to the Uniate are as abhorrent as to the Roman Catholic.

At the beginning of the fourth century Christendom presented a picture of unity in regard to faith, morals and obedience to the Bishop of Rome as the visible head of the Church. Uniformity of rite was not then and is not now the ideal of the Holy See. No Catholic can be more Catholic than the Holy See, and Benedict XIV in speaking of the schismatics and Uniates in the East has aptly expressed the attitude of the Church: "Eastern Christians should be Catholics; they have no need to become Latins."

Indeed the Uniate Eastern Churches are the living proof of the Church's universality. Eastern schisms have been largely the outcome of political quarrels. The Uniates in remaining loyal to the Holy See and preserving the bond of faith have cast aside their political, social and economic aspirations and come not as Greeks and Slavs and Russians and Armenians and Syrians but as Catholics to rally around the Holy Father uniting their efforts with his to "restore all things in Christ."

PROMISES OF OUR LORD TO ST. MARGARET MARY IN FAVOR OF THOSE DEVOTED TO THE SACRED HEART

1. I will give them all the graces necessary for their state of life.
2. I will establish peace in their families.
3. I will console them in all their difficulties.
4. I will be their assured refuge in life and more especially at death.
5. I will pour out abundant benedictions on all their undertakings.
6. Sinners will find in My Heart a source and infinite ocean of mercy.
7. Tepid souls shall become fervent.
8. Fervent souls shall advance rapidly to great perfection.
9. I will bless the houses in which the image of My Sacred Heart shall be exposed and honored.
10. I will give to priests the power of moving the most hardened hearts.
11. Persons who propagate this devotion shall have their names inscribed in My Heart and they shall never be effaced from it.
12. I promise thee in the excess of the mercy of My Heart that Its all-powerful love will grant to all those who receive Communion on the First Friday of every month for 9 consecutive months the grace of final perseverance and that they shall not die under My displeasure nor without receiving the Sacraments and My Heart shall be their secure refuge at that last hour.

ECCLESIASTICAL CHANT

Definition

Ecclesiastical chant is the music proper to the liturgy of the Catholic Church. Its melodies are unisonous, diatonic, simple or florid, moving with free rhythm in one or more of the eight modes. They are an interpretation of and a commentary on the sacred text. They are prayer sung.

Names

Plain and Gregorian chant are the more common names given to this same type of music. It is called plain chant because of its free rhythm, which definitely distinguishes it from all measured music. The designation Gregorian is a tribute to the organizing genius of Pope St. Gregory the Great.

Elements

Chant is made up of two elements—the text and the melody. Of these, the text is the more important, for without it there would be no liturgical chant. The texts are taken from Sacred Scripture either directly or indirectly.

The present repertoire of liturgical melodies which is the fruit of great musical genius was created under the inspiration of the sacred text. These melodies are, in every sense, the property and achievement of the Catholic Church. The musical structure was influenced mainly by three civilizations, the Jewish, Greek and Roman. What does ecclesiastical chant owe to each of these three?

Jewish Influence—Ecclesiastical chant is less indebted to the Temple than to the synagogue. The sole type of singing which comes from the Temple is responsorial psalmody. To the synagogue we owe such musical forms as the jubilus (the custom of singing a number of notes to the final "a" of Alleluia) and the recitative formulas (such as the Gospel and Oration tones).

Greek Influence—The Greeks used three tonalities: the diatonic, chromatic and enharmonic. The Church chose the diatonic—its firmness and dignity being best suited for the House of God. Hand in hand with diatonic tonality, came the modal system of the same art. The eight modes now in use are basically the ancient Greek diatonic modes. However, they were adopted with some changes. As an aid in the transmission of melodies, the Greeks contributed a system of alphabetic notation. Some maintain that plain chant contains a few pagan Greek melodies. One example cited is that of the "Hosanna Filio David" of Palm Sunday. A comparison of these plain chant and Greek pagan melodies reveals only similarity, never identity.

Roman Influence—Mention has already been made that had there been no sacred text there would be no ecclesiastical chant. Greek was the liturgical language of Rome until about the middle of the third century. The change from Greek to Latin was a gradual process. From the end of the third century to that of the sixth a popular Latin speech arose. The popular mind did not retain the Greek and classical Latin conception of quantity and meter. The language of the people became a rhythmical prose. The two distinguishing features of this rhythmic speech were the tonic accent and the cursus. Liturgical chant, still in its infancy at this time, could not remain unaffected. Dom Mocquereau asserts that plain chant was patterned after the prose of the period.

History

Consecration—The use of chant in the Catholic liturgy was inaugurated by Christ Himself. The setting was the Last Supper, the first Mass. St. Matthew expressly says: "And a hymn being said, they went out unto mount Olivet" (Matt., xxvi, 30). This hymn consisted of psalms. Following the custom of the Jews, Christ chanted the verses and the Apostles added "Alleluia" either after each verse or after several verses. Here we have the consecration of chant. Hence it has been rightly stated that the first Mass had its first liturgical chant and that Christ is the first Chanter in the New Dispensation.

Apostolic Era — Following the example of Christ, the Church has always used plain-song in her liturgy. The very first converts were Jews. For a time they continued "daily with one accord in the Temple" (Acts, ii, 46). This accounts for the influence of the Jewish Temple already mentioned. The influence of the synagogue is accounted for by the fact that the other Christians outside of Jerusalem attended services held there. Wherefore it is but natural that these first Christians should have retained some of the melodies long associated with the sacred text. Later on, St. Paul exhorted his converts to continue their former practice. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you abundantly: in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing in grace in your hearts to God" (Col., iii, 16). "But be ye filled with the Holy Spirit, speaking to yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing and making melody in your hearts to the Lord" (Eph., v, 18-19).

Period of Growth — The period of persecution and the restriction of the liturgy of the early Church to private homes and to the catacombs gave little opportunity for the development of chant. With the victory over paganism (313), liturgy and chant were free to develop within the large basilicas. A new style of singing, that of antiphonal psalmody, which originated in Syria, was introduced into Rome by Pope St. Damasus I (366-84) and into Milan by St. Ambrose. Although the use of hymns dates back to apostolic times, hymns, in the modern sense, were introduced into the West by St. Hilary of Poitiers (d. 366). The liturgical hymn was popularized by St. Ambrose as a result of the Arian persecution in Milan during the years 385 and 386. The external development of the liturgy gave rise to three additional chants, the Introit, Offertory and Communion. The Introit was sung while the Pope and his retinue proceeded from the sacristy to the altar. As the faithful approached the altar to offer their gifts, they sang the Offertory prayer. The Communion was sung as the faithful returned to the altar to receive the Body and Blood of Christ. The Introit is mentioned as early as 432; the Offertory and Communion are both mentioned by St. Augustine (d. 430).

Period of Perfection — The blending of the various characteristics which the Church took over from the three aforementioned civilizations reached its climax with the dawn of the seventh century. The unifying genius was Pope St. Gregory the Great (590-604). Two great contributions toward the organization of Church music were his Antiphonary of the Mass and the foundation of two new "Scholae Cantorum" at Rome. The Antiphonary, containing about 645 melodies for the choir, was a compilation of the chants then in use. It appears that the Antiphonary assigned to each chant its place in the liturgical year.

Although originally intended for Rome alone, the influence of the "Scholae" was far-reaching. Disciples were sent into other lands. There similar schools were organized. Thus there came about the dissemination of the Gregorian Antiphonary and a better rendition of the chants based on the Gregorian tradition. Such schools were set up in England after the arrival of St. Augustine and his associates in 596. Two other famous schools were begun under Charlemagne, namely that of Metz and of St. Gall.

Post-Gregorian Composition (609-1250) — A further development of the liturgy called for additional chants. The need was supplied in one of three ways. In some instances new melodies were composed. The more common practice was either to choose a text with its accompanying melody from the Gregorian collection and assign it a new role, or to take the melody from the same collection and adapt it, with necessary changes, to a different text. For the consecration of the Pantheon to the Blessed Virgin and the Holy Martyrs (609) new chants were composed for the proper parts of the Mass for the dedication of a church. An example of the second method is the well-known Introit, "Gaudeamus." Although formerly used for the feast of St. Agatha alone, it now occurs in several Masses, e. g., that of All Saints, the Assumption, etc. Two examples of adaptation are the Mass for the feast of the Most Holy Trinity composed by Alcuin and the Mass for the feast of the Most Blessed Sacrament composed in 1246.

During the tenth century, two new types of compositions made their appearance. They are the sequence and the tropes.

Decadence—This period extended from about the middle of the thirteenth century to the middle of the nineteenth. Several factors contributed to the decline of chant. At this time we have the development of polyphony and the rise of measured music. The tendency, although not a general one, was to treat chant and measured music in the same manner. Moreover, copyists unhappily abbreviated the chant melodies. The Medecian Gradual (1614-15) was a reproduction of such mutilated melodies. It appeared again in 1848 as the Mechlin Gradual and again in 1873 with official approbation, not, however, without certain changes and additions.

Restoration — The underlying scientific principle of this epoch, which is still going on, is a return to the traditional melodies by a close examination of the ancient manuscripts. The first imperfect attempt based on this principle was the Reims-Cambrai Gradual (1851). Although failing to reproduce the manuscripts purely, it surpassed its predecessors.

The most scholarly and scientific studies based on this same principle have been achieved, for the most part, by the Benedictines of Solesmes. Dom Gueranger (d. 1875), Dom Pothier (d. 1923) and Dom Mocquereau (d. 1930) are outstanding.

Mention must be made of Popes Pius X, to whom the movement chiefly owes its success, and Pius XI. Through the "Motu Proprio" of Pope Pius X (Nov. 22, 1903), the reform was given authoritative approval and chant is again regaining its former high dignity in the liturgy. The Apostolic constitution, "Divini Cultus," of Pope Pius XI (Dec. 20, 1928) is a more detailed statement of the procedure to be followed for the accomplishment of the reform inaugurated by Pope Pius X.

Summary of "Motu Proprio"

The whole spirit and purpose of the "Motu Proprio" is not music in itself, but music in its relation to liturgy. It is a "reproof and condemnation of all that is out of harmony" with the decorum and sanctity of the House of God. It is "a juridical code of sacred music" to which the "force of law" is given. Its "scrupulous observance" is imposed upon all.

The sole purpose of sacred music is to clothe the text with suitable melody. A suitable melody possesses holiness both in itself and in its presentation, "goodness of form" to insure its purpose, and "universality" in the sense that native music is subordinate to the "characteristics" of sacred music.

Gregorian chant pre-eminently possesses these qualities. It is the "supreme model" upon which other sacred music is judged. Congregational singing is to be fostered. Classic polyphony, especially that of the Roman School, also possesses these same qualities and is to be restored. Modern music, while admissible, must be divested of everything profane, particularly of the theatrical style.

Latin must be used in all the "solemn liturgical functions" and in the "variable or common parts of the Mass or Office." The word order of the texts must not be confused and the prescribed texts must be sung.

Solos, which are "melodic projections," are moderately permitted. Women in choirs are expressly forbidden.

Organ accompaniment, subject to the rules of sacred music, is permitted to sustain the singing. Expressly forbidden are the piano and noisy instruments, such as bells, drums and cymbals. Other instruments require the special permission of the Ordinary. Orchestration must be dignified and unobtrusive.

Sacred music is the "humble handmaid" of the liturgy.

A Commission is to be established in each diocese to provide suitable music and to oversee its correct execution. Music schools are to be formed, especially in ecclesiastical seminaries.

THE LITURGICAL MOVEMENT

Purpose

"A need of our times," said the late Pope Pius XI, "is social, or communal prayer, to be voiced under the guidance of the pastors in enacting the functions of the liturgy. This alternating of prayers will be of the greatest assistance in banishing the numberless evils which disturb the minds of the faithful in our age, and especially in overcoming the snares and dangers which threaten to undermine the sincerity of the faith."

The basic object of the liturgical movement is the fulfillment of this need: to put the liturgy into the life of modern man, to make the liturgy the motivating cause of his actions, both as an individual and as a social being, to teach man how he can participate most fully in the corporate worship of the Church.

The essence of corporate or liturgical worship is the offering of the prayers of a body of people through the hands of a mediator. Since Christ is the Mediator between God and man, it follows that the Mass, His Sacrifice, is the center of all liturgical worship. In the Mass every man has an active role to play. That role is one of co-offering to God the Sacrifice with Christ's representative, the priest. Only when he has thus offered the Mass can man hope to partake fully of the benefits which Christ intended he should derive from it.

This communal prayer or activity on the part of priest and people in the liturgy does not merely mean the external performance of the liturgical functions. Rather it signifies the interior devotion of mind and heart and the inner acknowledgement of God's complete dominion. As it has been expressed by Cardinal Pizzardo, former Papal President of Catholic Action: "'Active participation,' in short, means a sincere, inward acknowledgment of God (the interior sacrifice) expressed by participation in the words, rites, chant, etc. of the external sacrifice. Properly understood, therefore, the liturgy is both the internal homage of the soul and its outward bodily expression by means of words, chants, ceremonies, etc. in the forms ordained by the Church for her solemn public worship."

The Mass is the heart of the liturgical movement. The whole of dogmatic theology centers around the Mass as the Sacrifice of the New Law and the Blessed Sacrament as the bond cementing the minds and hearts of Christ's people. Around the Mass and the Blessed Sacrament are centered the sacraments, the sacramentals and the Divine Office. Once the Mass has become the center of life, those other phases of the liturgy will follow almost automatically. The Liturgical Year becomes the re-living by the members of the Mystical Body of Christ of the visible earthly life of Christ. The sacraments and sacramentals are appreciated as the channels through which grace flows freely to men. Finally, the Divine Office becomes earth's counterpart of heaven's ceaseless "Holy, Holy, Holy." Men become fully aware of their mystical union with one another through Him who is their Head.

The liturgical movement is nothing new. It is rather a conscious effort to revitalize Catholicism. It is an attempt to bring home to men a more vivid realization of their status as members of the Mystical Body of Christ. The corporate worship of God through Christ harks back to those words of Christ's first vicar on earth: "Be you yourselves as living stones, built thereon into a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ.... You are a chosen race, a royal priesthood" (I Peter, 2, 5-9).

Some of the means employed to make men "liturgy-conscious" are the popularization of Gregorian Chant, the use of the missal and the dialogue Mass and the furthering of true liturgical art. But these are merely secondary considerations. The main thing is the inner appreciation and application of the meaning of the Mystical Body of Christ, the carrying out of this doctrine in daily life.

History

The works of Dom Prosper Guéranger, Abbot of Solesmes, begun in 1840, are considered generally as the beginning of the modern movement back to a better appreciation of the liturgy. Franz Staudenmaier of Germany was also one of the pioneers in the field. Official approval of the movement was given in 1903 by the "Motu Proprio" of Pope Pius X. Since that time organized efforts have replaced the individual labors of men interested in the liturgy.

The Benedictine monks of Belgium were the first to begin organized efforts in this direction, several years after the publication of the "Motu Proprio." Their first national council was held in 1920.

Holland followed closely after Belgium, principally under the direction of the secular clergy. Holland's liturgical work is of an essentially practical nature. It has a well-organized central confederation headed by two members from each of the diocesan councils.

Germany's liturgical revival dates back to 1915. The heart of liturgical activity in Germany is the Abbey of Maria-Laach, well known for its scholarly work. Dr. Franz Xavier Muench, the first secretary general of the Association of Catholic University Graduates, died on October 19, 1940. Through his efforts the liturgical movement grew in German universities. Through him Karl Adam, Guardini, Jacques Maritain and Christopher Dawson were introduced to the German Catholic students. His death in political exile in Florence, Italy, "is symbolic of one of the greatest efforts of German Catholicism and of its final apparent failure."

Austria's liturgical movement is ably represented by Dr. Pius Parsch, canon regular of Klosterneuburg. His liturgical publications, "Study the Mass" and "The Liturgy of the Mass," are daily becoming more popular.

Italy's cardinal-archbishops and bishops have continually fostered the liturgical movement by pastoral letters, while Abbot Caronti and Cardinal-Archbishop Schuster have done much to further the movement. "The liturgical movement has helped to reawaken the dulled religious sense, and to recall to the individual his intimate union with the Mystical Body of Christ. The movement was undoubtedly aided by the anti-individualistic tendencies so energetically fostered in the political sphere by Italian Fascism. It has endeavored above all to deepen the religious life, to nourish it out of the founts of liturgical prayer, and to consolidate it by means of an intense participation in the sacramental life."

England's liturgical movement may not be as centralized as that of many other countries. But representatives like Donald Attwater and Fr. C. C. Martindale, S. J., are fostering the liturgical spirit continually by their writings. The English Benedictines began in 1940 the publication of a new liturgical review, "The Church and the People."

The Co-operative Movement in Nova Scotia has also its liturgical angle. The use of the missal in the form of the Leaflet Missal and the evening services during the week, consisting of Vespers sung by the congregation, rosary, sermon on some aspect of Catholic worship and Benediction, are having a well-deserved effect in vitalizing the Church's efforts to reconstruct the social order in that province.

The United States has had a well-organized liturgical movement since 1925. The "Orate Fratres," published by the monks of St. John's Abbey, Collegeville, Minn., is the official organ of the movement in this country. The First National Liturgical Day in the United States was held at Collegeville on July 25, 1929. Since then the Liturgical Day has become an annual event in more and more dioceses.

Under the patronage of the Most Rev. Samuel A. Stritch, Archbishop of Chicago, the First National Liturgical Week was sponsored by the Benedictine Liturgical Conference, October 21-25, 1940. The central theme was: "The Living Parish: the Active and Intelligent Participation of the Laity in the Liturgy."

At the invitation of the Most Rev. John Murray, Archbishop of St. Paul, the Second Liturgical Week was held in that city, Oct. 6-10, 1941. The theme of the Chicago Week was continued with one subtopic: "The Living Parish: One in Worship, Charity and Action."

The Third National Liturgical Week, Oct. 12-16, 1942, was held at St. Meinrad's Abbey, St. Meinrad, Ind., under the patronage of the Most Rev. Joseph E. Ritter, Bishop of Indianapolis. The general theme of the conferences was: "The Praise of God: Its significance and primary importance in Catholic life."

The proceedings of these Liturgical Weeks have been published in separate volumes by the Benedictine Liturgical Conference, 528 High Street, Newark, N. J., and copies may be purchased there.

In America, the liturgical movement is steadily growing, as evidenced by the Liturgical Weeks and Days being held in many parts of the country, besides the annual National Conferences. In Germany and Belgium, the movement has suffered a temporary setback due to present conditions. Persons acquainted with conditions in Germany are of the opinion that the liturgical movement providentially prepared Catholics for the troubled days that lay ahead for the Church in Germany.

Approval

The liturgical movement has had the approbation of all the Popes since the time of Pius X. A short quotation from each Pope will show their concern for the movement.

Pope Pius X—"The primary and indispensable source of the true Christian spirit is the active participation in the most holy mysteries and in the solemn and public prayer of the Church."

Pope Benedict XV—"For spreading amongst the faithful an exact acquaintance with the liturgy, to inspire in their hearts a holy delight in the prayers, rites and chant, by means of which in union with their common Mother, they pay their worship to God, to attract them to take an active part in the sacred mysteries and in the ecclesiastical festivals—all this cannot but serve admirably to bring the faithful into closer union with the priest, to lead them back to the Church, to nourish their piety, to give renewed vigor to their faith, to better their lives."

Pope Pius XI—"People make a great deal of the liturgy in our day but not always as they ought and as we would wish. Frequently too much importance is attached to its external aspect, to material things, whereas it is the spirit that is important: to pray with the spirit of the praying Church."

Pope Pius XII—Acknowledging receipt of copies of the proceedings of the First National Liturgical Week (1940), Cardinal Maglione wrote to its general chairman: "[The Holy Father] would also have me assure you, dear Monsignor, of His gratitude for the constant interest which you and your devoted helpers have manifested in this newest endeavor to bring American Catholics to a fuller understanding of the Liturgy of the Church and to a more intelligent participation in it. That the movement is meeting with success is clearly manifested in the reports and discussions of this first Liturgical Week"

THE LEAGUE OF THE DIVINE OFFICE

During the Middle Age the Divine Office was recited not only by the clergy but by the laity as well. The participation of the laity in the official prayer of the Church was a universal practice: knights, members of guilds and confraternities said office in choir. The liturgy of the laity decayed when they no longer went to choir to say their prayer. The reunion of the clergy and the laity in the performance of the liturgy is the foremost purpose of the whole liturgical movement and the revival of the layman's recitation of the Divine Office has been the cause for the foundation of the League of the Divine Office.

The Benedictine Fathers of St. John's Abbey, Collegeville, Minn., established this organization in 1936. The instruction of the laity in the use of the breviary has become a full-time task in educating the laity in the actual nature of the Divine Office and their right to participate in it.

Before the League of the Divine Office was started the Approved Workmen of Brooklyn, New York, already had a society called the Breviary Association of the Laity. When the Benedictine Fathers established the League of the Divine Office, the Approved Workmen withdrew the title of their society and joined the League of the Divine Office in order that there might be harmony in the liturgical movement.

The League of the Divine Office was established primarily to encourage the laity to pray with the Church. It is not intended that the Divine Office should supplant private devotions. Rather, the devotions of individuals should be a supplement to the official prayer and not the total content of the lay Catholic's prayer-life. The Divine Office is, as recorded by many laymen who recite it, a source from whence a new concept of private prayer is drawn. Personal devotions become more objective, more correct in dogmatic content and deeper in their appreciation of the majesty of God and the beauty of the Faith.

The League is composed of men and women who voluntarily agree to recite some part of the Divine Office every day. It does not bind in conscience to recite the Office daily but leaves it up to the individual members and groups.

Membership in the League is divided into chapter members and associate members. Usually the chapter members form groups of seven, and each member is assigned one of the seven hours of the Office, to be recited during the week. Each week the hours are changed so that after seven weeks each chapter member will have recited each of the hours in succession. The associate member is required to recite one of the day hours every day. He does not make any agreement with any of the other members but is free to choose whatever hours he pleases. The Divine Office is divided into seven hours or parts. These are Matins with Lauds (forming one Hour), Prime, Tierce, Sext, None, Vespers and Compline.

The Liturgical Press of St. John's Abbey, which has brought forth many interesting books and pamphlets on the liturgical movement, has published an English translation of the Hours of the Divine Office in a single volume, entitled a "Short Breviary." The Press also publishes the "Orate Fratres" magazine which is doing much to help spread the liturgical movement throughout the country.

For full information concerning the League inquiries may be sent to the League of the Divine Office, Liturgical Press, Collegeville, Minn.

LITURGICAL ART

The creation of religious art must be traced back to the origins of religion. Art and religion have always been companions. The advent of the Christian religion saw the rise of an allied art. Throughout the history of the Church, art may be found testifying to the rise and recession of the Church's spiritual activity.

Art in the Christian sense has two fields, or better, one field with two divisions. The first division is religious art as such. This art attempts to portray the beauty of supernatural things revealed to us by Faith. It is concerned with Catholicism in its social and cultural elements. Thus religious art reveals religion living among men and vivifying all their actions. The second division of Christian art may be called ecclesiastical or liturgical. This is Christian art in the service of the sanctuary.

Art in general may be defined as the expression of the ideal through the medium of physical realities. Then it is limited in its means of expression to material elements as stone, glass, metals, color and paper. Obviously art is more than a caricature. It attempts not a mere representation of material objects but the presentation of spiritual realities through the physical medium.

Liturgical art follows the general principles of all art; yet it finds itself circumscribed by exceptional limitations. It is bound by the decrees of the Sacred Congregation of Rites; it must confine itself to the paraphernalia of the church, much of which is destined for a practical use (hence, the artistically beautiful must be expressed in a form which is practically useful); the individuality of the liturgical artist must be subservient to the collective personality of the worshipers, although here the artist may legitimately undertake the office of educator and direct the collectivity into the realm of experience out of which he has developed his work of art.

Liturgical art expresses the dogmatic and moral elements of the liturgy. Hence art to be liturgical must present the mysteries of faith as revealed and elucidated by the Scriptures and tradition. It must show the beauty which is God, the mercy which is Christ and the love which is the Holy Spirit. It may depict by painting or by stained glass the miracles of Christ or the guaranties of salvation. His Mother and the whole array of triumphant heaven are legitimate subjects.

All liturgical art must find its centre in the altar which is Christ. The focal point cannot be ego-centric or individual; indeed it cannot even be the Christian community as such. The community of Christians in its relations with God performs its services as a unit; there are men, women and children in the Church but they come as one to the Father through Christ with whom they are one. Hence the church in which they gather is properly adorned only when it is adorned for Christ. This is the meaning of the Christo-centric art of the liturgy. The church to which men flock as to an art gallery is not liturgical. The liturgical church brings men to their knees. The art reveals the place as the dwelling of the Most High, shows the Catholic his religion. Here are Christ and the Sacramental life which uplift spirits, wash away sorrow from weary hearts, direct the eyes of the body and of the soul upwards to the altar which is Christ and higher even, to the throne of grace. The art of the Church should attract not as a caricature but as an impelling force which through the natural expression of the beautiful supernatural, lifts souls up and drives them on to God.

Liturgical art as we understand it here is not to be considered as the expression of a particular tradition. It may be cast according to the principles of the Romanesque or Gothic or any other type of art. But if any type of art seeks admittance into the church it must remove its secular garb and put on the seamless robe of the Christian liturgy. This has not always been done and there are many examples of the "art gallery" church in Europe and America.

The widespread presence of this type of church has led to a serious problem. Generations of Catholics have come to regard it as the tradition which must be maintained. Hence the liturgical art movement progresses but slowly. It has to remove prejudices innocently acquired before it can inculcate the superiority of true liturgical art. Nor does this tendency to cling to tradition limit itself to localities. There are national traditions in Church art. It is a tribute to the Catholicity of the Church that she has not attempted to force the abandonment of national traits. The rubrical requirements can be observed without affecting the broad principles of a national artistic expression; in America there are examples of the liturgically "correct" altar and sanctuary which retain definitely foreign elements.

In the United States the liturgical art movement is comparatively young. As an integral part of the universal liturgical movement which is itself a phase of the resurgent spiritual activity of Catholic Action, the liturgical art movement is a less spectacular but equally important subject.

For all practical purposes the movement has received its momentum and direction from the Liturgical Arts Society. This organization was founded in 1930 "to supply the Catholic clergy expert advice and guidance not merely on the esthetic and liturgical factors of their church buildings and altar vessels and vestments, but also, even more important, on the purely business aspects of these affairs." It is a society which views the liturgy as fundamental in Catholic life and seeks to provide the best possible information on the correct expression of the liturgy through art. Its members are lay and cleric alike — architects, sculptors, silversmiths, painters, wood-carvers, pastors, bishops and archbishops — all these men of the Church are devoted to the effort to realize the potentialities of liturgical art as a means to renew all things in Christ. The society publishes a quarterly, "Liturgical Arts." The magazine is "an organized medium of education in artistic-liturgical matters."

EUCCHARISTIC CONGRESSES

Eucharistic Congresses are gatherings of the clergy and laity for the purpose of glorifying the Holy Eucharist by public adoration and general Communions and for the discussion of means to increase devotion to Our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament throughout the world. They may be national or international. The first congress owed its inspiration to Bishop de Segur of Lille, France. Since then the international Eucharistic Congresses have been as follows:

Lille, France .....	1881	Metz, Lorraine .....	1907
Avignon, France .....	1882	London, England .....	1908
Liege, Belgium .....	1883	Cologne, Germany .....	1909
Freiburg, Switzerland .....	1885	Montreal, Canada .....	1910
Toulouse, France .....	1886	Madrid, Spain .....	1911
Paris, France .....	1888	Vienna, Austria .....	1912
Antwerp, Belgium .....	1890	Malta .....	1913
Jerusalem, Palestine .....	1893	Lourdes, France .....	1914
Reims, France .....	1894	Rome, Italy .....	1922
Paray-le-Monial, France .....	1897	Amsterdam, Holland .....	1924
Brussels, Belgium .....	1898	Chicago, United States .....	1926
Lourdes, France .....	1899	Sydney, Australia .....	1928
Angers, France .....	1901	Carthage, Tunis .....	1930
Namur, Belgium .....	1902	Dublin, Ireland .....	1932
Angouleme, France .....	1904	Buenos Aires, Argentina ....	1934
Rome, Italy .....	1905	Manila, Philippine Islands....	1937
Tournai, Belgium .....	1906	Budapest, Hungary .....	1938

International Eucharistic Congresses are now held approximately every two years. The 35th International Congress which was to have been held at Nice, France, in 1940, was indefinitely postponed because of the war.

National Eucharistic Congresses are held in many nations every few years. In the United States, Eucharistic Congresses have been held in Washington, D. C. (1895), St. Louis (1901), New York (1904), Pittsburgh (1907), Cincinnati (1911), Omaha (1930), Cleveland (1935), New Orleans (1938), St. Paul and Minneapolis (1941).

The Ninth National Eucharistic Congress of the United States was held in the Twin Cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, June 23-26, 1941. An estimated quarter of a million Catholics participated in the great tribute to "Our Eucharistic King glorified by Sacrifice." That was the theme of the conclave in which 113 archbishops and bishops of the United States took part and at which many members of the neighboring hierarchy were present. The host to the Congress was the Most Rev. John Gregory Murray, Archbishop of St. Paul.

His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, was present in the person of his Legate a latere, His Eminence Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia. In a direct message broadcast by radio from the Vatican to the Congress the Holy Father stressed the importance of sacrifice as the sole way to escape the "current of black paganism sweeping our people today." On the completion of his address the Pontiff conferred the Apostolic Blessing upon the pilgrims and upon the faithful of America. Cardinal Dougherty gave three memorable addresses to the congress in the capacity of Papal Legate. His Eminence extolled Archbishop Murray and the Catholics and citizens of the Twin Cities for their hospitality, and reechoed the Pope's plea for individual sacrifices.

The classical text of St. Paul in his Epistle to the Colossians (1:24) "I now rejoice in my sufferings and fill up those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ in my flesh for His Body which is the Church," and the encyclical of Pope Pius XI, "Miserentissimus Redemptor," were the bases of discussion in twenty-five sectional meetings. The meetings were divided according to occupations in life. At each of these a paper was presented by a member of the hierarchy devoted to a particular application of the life of sacrifice to the specific group. The remainder of the time was devoted to a discussion under the leadership of the hierarchy, in which a practical application of sacrifice was attained by each group.

Seventy-five prelates participated in the sectional meetings which were organized for the following groups: clergy, seminarians, catechists, parents, women, Holy Name men, professional men, employers, employees, charity workers, nurses, enlisted men, public servants, college teachers, secondary school teachers, grade school teachers, journalists, rural workers, senior and junior youth groups.

At the Congress four Pontifical High Masses were offered along with hundreds of low Masses, in the Maronite and Byzantine-Slavic rites as well as in the Roman. Eight holy hours were conducted. On June 24, a midnight Mass for men was celebrated by Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate, at which 100 priests distributed Holy Communion to 75,000 men. About the same number of children received Holy Communion at the Mass of the following morning. A day later 100,000 adults of both sexes received the Blessed Sacrament.

The Congress came to a fitting conclusion as 80,000 faithful accompanied the Blessed Sacrament in procession to the site of the final Benediction. In a glass-enclosed altar Cardinal Dougherty gave the Benediction, as a torrential downpour of rain failed to dampen the ardor of the thousands who knelt in the mud adoring their "Eucharistic Lord glorified by Sacrifice."

SOME FAMOUS CATHEDRALS AND THEIR ARCHITECTURE

A cathedral is the chief church of a diocese, in which the bishop has his throne. It is the bishop's church wherein he presides, teaches and conducts worship for the whole Christian community. The juridical character of a cathedral does not depend upon the form, dimensions or magnificence of the edifice but upon its assignment by competent authority as the residence of the bishop in his hierarchical capacity. In medieval times the cathedrals occupied the place of first importance in national life, and men were engaged in their construction from one generation to another. They were the history books of the period and a medium of popular education, taking the place in the social state of such modern institutions as free schools, libraries, museums and picture galleries. Medieval architecture, as embodied in the cathedrals, is the chronicler of secular history in which kings, nobles, knights and people were represented as playing their parts in their days and generation.

Types of Architecture

Cathedral architecture may be divided into five types:

1. Early Christian (Basilican) — from the time of Constantine (300) to the death of Gregory the Great (604); but in Rome and many Italian cities this style continued up until 900 A. D. It was a continuation of Roman traditions. The churches were modelled on Roman basilicas with closely spaced columns carrying the entablature or widely spaced columns carrying semicircular arches. Three or five aisles covered by a timber roof is typical. The architectural character was rendered impressive and dignified by the long perspective of oft-repeated columns which carry the eye along to the sanctuary; this treatment together with the low height of interiors makes these churches appear longer than they really are. An "arch of triumph" gave entrance to the sanctuary with the high altar in the center standing free under its baldachino upheld by marble columns. The sanctuary was rounded off by an apse crowned with a semi-dome.

2. Byzantine — from the fourth century to the present day. Byzantine architecture was a fusion of the dome construction — always a traditional feature in the East — with the classical columnar style. The prevailing motif is the dome of which various types were placed over square or polygonal compartments by means of pendentives (triangular curved overhanging surfaces to support a circular dome over a square or polygonal compartment). Byzantine churches have a central space covered by a dome on pendentives. Short arms on each side form a Greek cross, and the filling in of the angles brings the plan nearly to a square. Opposite the entrance was the apse for the altar in the sanctuary which was screened off by the Iconostasis with its three doors. Because of the grouping of subsidiary domes round a central dome the Byzantine church gives a vertical impression; the eye is gradually drawn upwards towards the central culminating dome. The Early Christian church because of the vista of columns, entablatures and simple timber roof gives a horizontal impression, for the eye is led along these horizontal lines to the apsidal sanctuary which is the important feature.

3. Romanesque — from the fall of the Roman Empire (475) and the election of Charlemagne as King of the Franks (799) to the end of the twelfth century. The term Romanesque includes the phases of European architecture as the style was developed in each country. Romanesque had its birth in the use of ruins of ancient buildings, these ruins necessarily determining the character, both of construction and decoration, of the new style in proportion to the extent to which old features were employed. Apart from its Roman origin from which it took its name, the Romanesque style owed something to Byzantine art which was carried westwards along the great trade routes. The later Romanesque of the tenth to the twelfth century was remarkable for the tentative use of a new construction principle, the application of the principle of equilibrium to construction, in strong contrast to that of inert stability as used by the Romans. The general character is sober and dignified, while picturesque depends on the grouping of towers and the projection of transepts and choir.

Early Romanesque was a continuation of the Early Christian style in unvaulted basilican churches, developing the cruciform plan with choirs and transepts. Late Romanesque became differentiated into the local varieties having in common the round arch and vault, the narrowing and heightening of the nave, the substitution of piers for columns, the decorative use of arcades, colonnettes, carved ornamentation. The fully developed Romanesque church was characterized by the cruciform shape, formed by transepts, on either side of the choir, and the apse, the unit of design being the square of the crossing. This square was repeated three times in the nave and once in the choir and in each transept. The narthex of the Early Christian basilica was transformed into three great western doors cut in the western wall, and the open colonnade was moved from the front to the side of the church where it became the monastic cloister.

The development of medieval architecture in England from the departure of the Romans to the sixteenth century shows a more complete sequence of styles than in other countries. It is usually divided as follows: Anglo-Saxon (5th to 11th centuries), Norman (12th century), Early English (13th century), Decorated (14th century), Perpendicular (15th century), Tudor (1500-50). The Norman corresponds to the Romanesque and is often called the English Romanesque, a bold and massive style of architecture, distinguished by semicircular arches, ponderous cylindrical piers, and flat buttresses. It is similar to the architecture of Normandy whence it was first introduced into England by Edward the Confessor and subsequently established by William the Conqueror.

4. Gothic — thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth centuries in Europe. The term, Gothic, was first employed by Sir Christopher Wren in the seventeenth century as a term of reproach for this style of architecture which had departed from the classic lines which he was instrumental in re-establishing in England. The Gothic of the thirteenth century was slowly evolved from the Romanesque and is mainly distinguished by the introduction and general use of the pointed arch whose original home was probably Assyria. This feature in conjunction with buttresses and lofty pinnacles gives to this style the aspiring tendency regarded as symbolic of the religious aspirations of the period.

Romanesque architects had already begun to substitute elasticity and equilibrium for the inert stability practised by the Romans, and Gothic architects still further extended the application of these static laws by employing small stones laid in shallow courses with thick mortar joints, so as to secure the greatest amount of elasticity compatible with stability. The stability of the Gothic depends upon the proper adjustment of thrust and counter-thrust. Vault pressures are downwards by the weight of the stone and outwards by the pressure of the arch voussoirs (truncated wedge-shaped blocks forming the arch). The ribs of the arch collected both pressures by their meeting at the angles of vault compartments, and the resulting oblique pressure was counteracted and transmitted to the ground by buttresses and flying buttresses weighted by pinnacles.

As a result of the development of the Gothic system of buttresses, walls became unnecessary as supports but continued to enclose the building and protect it against the elements. Windows became larger; in the north of Europe they stretched from buttress to buttress. It followed that the walls were left uniformly flat internally so that the colored windows might be seen by all; accordingly structural features, such as buttresses and pinnacles, were placed externally.

The plan of a Gothic church is generally in the form of a Latin cross whose short arms form the north and south transepts. The main body of the church stretches westward, and the choir and sanctuary eastward, from the crossing of the nave and transepts, which is often marked externally, especially in England, by a tower, sometimes tapering into a spire. These main divisions east and west, and the transepts north and south, are often further divided into a central nave with side aisles, separated by columns or piers. These columns or piers support the nave arcades and the walls which rise above the aisle roofs. Above is the triforium or blind story, the space beneath the sloping roof over the aisle vault and enclosed on the nave side by a series of arches. Above the triforium is a range of windows to light the nave, called the clerestory. By means of cross vaults these clerestory windows generally rise to the level of the ridge of the nave vault which is covered by a high-pitched wooden roof.

English cathedrals are conspicuous for great length in comparison to their width; continental cathedrals are short, lofty, with less sharply defined outlines. German Gothic churches are characterized by the absence of triforium and clerestory, a result of building nave and aisles of approximately the same height. Italian Gothic churches are remarkable for flat roofs, circular windows in the west front, absence of pinnacles and of flying buttresses, small windows without tracery, projecting porches. This style has a somber effect. Spanish Gothic reveals Moorish influence in such features as the horseshoe arch, pierced stone tracery and rich surface ornamentation without regard to its constructive character.

5. Renaissance — This movement in architecture, which began in Italy in the early fifteenth century, created a break in the continuous evolution of European architecture which, springing from Roman and proceeding through Early Christian and Romanesque, had during the Middle Ages developed into Gothic in each country on national lines. The Italians preferred the flat roof, the blank walls and horizontal lines of the familiar basilica and failed to cultivate the taste for the clustered piers and pointed arches of the Gothic manner. Feeling instinctively that space was wanted, the Italian builders widened their naves and depressed the vertical lines of their designs, searching for the serenity which belongs to Greek lintel architecture, or the round arch of Rome, rather than to the upspringing, unresting arch of the Gothic style. This new style developed in Italy was the Renaissance, the architecture of humanism. It was based upon the art of Greece and Rome. Its creator was Brunelleschi, a scholar versed in classical tradition, a student of Dante and familiar with the science of his age, a master of perspective and geometry. He grasped the underlying principles of the Graeco-Roman style so well that his designs have an organic vitality of their own. Hence the style that he developed is more than a re-copying of classical detail.

As distinguished from the Gothic, Renaissance architecture is characterized by symmetry of plan produced by similarity of parts on either side of central axial lines, square bays in interiors covered with barrel or cross vaults and with a central dome, a small number of large divisions to obtain grandeur, and the sparing use of towers. The dome is a predominant feature externally. Windows follow classic lines and remain small, unbroken by mullions. Roofs were built of semicircular vaulting, flat and hidden behind balustrades in Italy, high in England, Germany and France, lined internally with plaster ceilings. The use of horizontal cornices and balustrades and the absence of rising towers, spires and numerous pinnacles give simplicity of outline to skylines.

Famous Cathedrals of Europe

The most famous cathedrals of Europe are located as follows: Belgium — Antwerp; England — Canterbury, Durham, Exeter, Lincoln, Norwich, Oxford, Peterborough, Salisbury; France — Amiens, Angouleme, Autun, Beauvais, Bourges, Chartres, Laon, Notre Dame de Paris, Reims, Strassbourg, Tournai; Germany — Aix-la-Chapelle, Cologne, Treves, Worms; Italy — Florence, Milan, Monreale, Palermo, Pisa, St. John Lateran in Rome, St. Mark in Venice, Siena, Syracuse; Scotland — Glasgow; Spain — Burgos, Granada, Santiago de Compostella, Seville, Toledo, Valladolid; Turkey — Sancta Sophia in Istanbul (Constantinople). A brief description of them is given below, alphabetically arranged according to the towns in which they are located.

Aix-la-Chapelle Cathedral (Aachen), 796-804, German Romanesque. Built under the direction of Master Odo of Metz by the Emperor Charlemagne for his royal tomb, the prototype of other similar churches in Germany, and the place of coronation of the Holy Roman Emperors. The entrance, flanked by staircase turrets, leads into a polygon of sixteen sides, 105 ft. in diameter. Every two angles of this polygon converge on to one pier and thus form an internal octagon whose eight piers support a dome 47½ ft. in diameter. A Gothic choir was added in 1353-1413, the surrounding chapels are of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, and the western steeple has recently been added. Over the spot supposed to be Charlemagne's grave hangs an enormous corona of lamps, the gift of the Emperor Frederick I Barbarossa; in the choir of the octagon stands Charlemagne's throne, made of great slabs of white marble, where, after their coronation, the German Emperors received the homage of their nobles. Among the treasures of the choir are the famous Gospel-pulpit, enriched with gold plates, the gift of the Emperor Henry II, the throne canopy of the fifteenth century, and the Gothic high altar of 1876. The Hungarian chapel contains the minster treasury which includes a large number of relics, vessels and vestments, the most important being the "Four Great Relics," namely, the cloak of the Blessed Virgin, the swaddling clothes of the Infant Jesus, the loin-cloth worn by Our Lord on the Cross, and the cloth on which lay the head of John the Baptist after his beheading. They are exposed every seven years and venerated by thousands of pilgrims.

Amiens Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1220-88, French Gothic. A typical French cathedral, 450 ft. long and 150 ft. wide, begun by Robert de Luzarches. The nave is considered a type of the ideal Gothic. The great glory of this building is the "Bible of Amiens," a wonder of carved woodwork in the choir stalls, which breaks away from studied lines and soars above like the branches of living trees. Other cathedrals are glorious without in sculptured stone, but Amiens is also lovely within in carved wood. The central western doors are separated by one of the noblest of sculptured figures in the world, the "Beau Dieu d'Amiens." Here is enshrined one of the most sacred relics in Christendom, the head of John the Baptist. The cathedral originally rose around a tiny chapel built above the grave of St. Firmin.

Angouleme Cathedral, St. Peter's, 1105-28, South French Romanesque. The plan is a Latin cross, the long aisleless nave being 150 ft. wide. The transepts have lateral chapels, and the choir is in the apse with four chapels. The nave is covered with three stone domes on pendentives and a double dome over the crossing raised on a drum. Both transepts originally had towers, but the southern one was destroyed in 1568. Two western towers flank the entrance. The facade is Romano-Byzantine.

Antwerp Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1352-1411, Belgian Gothic. The most impressive church in Belgium, remarkable for nave and triple aisles, narrow transepts, and a lofty clerestory containing huge windows of stained glass. The vaults are supported by a forest of 125 columns. The single immense tower on the west front, 400 ft. high, is graceful in the florid taste of the period and almost dwarfs the body of the cathedral itself. Napoleon Bonaparte compared this tower to Mechlin lace held aloft in mid-air. The curious bulbous turret over the crossing of nave and transepts is a feature due to the Spanish occupation. Among the famous art treasures of the cathedral are the "Descent from the Cross" and the "Assumption" by Rubens. The building was much damaged by the Calvinists in 1566 and by the French in 1794-98.

Autun Cathedral, 1090-1132, South French Romanesque. The nave is covered with a pointed barrel vault on transverse arches which spring so low down that they seem to squeeze out the clerestory windows. There are three apses at the east end. This cathedral was formerly the chapel of the Dukes of Burgundy and their palace was the actual episcopal residence.

Beauvais Cathedral, 1225-1568, French Gothic. Never completed west of the choir and transepts, and the site of the proposed nave is partly occupied by the Romanesque church known as the "Basse Oeuvre." There was an open-work spire, 500 ft. high, over the crossing, which collapsed in 1573, partly because there was no nave to buttress it on the west. Designed by Eudes of Montreuil, architect to St. Louis, the building is of extreme height, 175 ft. 6 in. to the vault, the loftiest in Europe, and about three and one-half times its span—the most daring achievement in Gothic architecture and one of the wonders of medieval France. The structure is held together internally only by a network of iron tie-rods, which suggests that the ambitious builders had attempted more than they could achieve. The carved wooden doors are masterpieces of Gothic and Renaissance workmanship. It was at this cathedral during the Middle Ages that the Feast of Asses was held on January 14th of each year to commemorate the flight of the Virgin into Egypt.

Bourges Cathedral, 1190-1275, French Gothic. Remarkable for absence of transepts and for shortness in proportion to width. Its plan bears a general resemblance to Notre Dame de Paris. The nave is 125 ft. high, the aisles in different heights are unique; their decoration suggests wondrous profusion of effort and exalting spiritual fervor. An elaborately sculptured "Last Judgment" is on the tympanum, the stained-glass windows are the finest in France. The unity of design at Bourges is unique even among the the cathedrals of Northern France.

Burgos Cathedral, Santa Maria la Mayor, 1221, Spanish Gothic. Commenced by Bishop Mauritius; one of the most poetic of all Spanish cathedrals. The plan is irregular. The two western towers with open-work spires are similar to those of Cologne. A richly treated central lantern is a marked feature of the exterior. The three-storied facade is finished with a balustrade of letters carved in stone and forming the inscription, "Pulchra es et decora," in the center of which is a statue of the Blessed Virgin. The interior has elaborate triforium tracery, massive piers to support the lantern and fine circular windows in the transepts. The side chapels are of extraordinary size, the octagonal "Capilla del Condestable," remarkable for the beauty and magnificence of its late Gothic detail, being 50 ft. in diameter. The chapel of St. Anne has an altar-piece which is a miracle of richness.

Canterbury Cathedral, 1140. The nave and central tower are late Perpendicular. The choir was erected by William of Sens on the model of Sens Cathedral after the destruction of Anselm's Norman choir. The width of the choir is contracted to preserve two earlier Norman chapels. Has double transepts with a tower over the crossing of the western transept. In 1378 Longfranc's nave was pulled down and the present nave begun by Prior Chillendon. The cathedral was completed about 1495 by the erection of the great central tower, 235 ft. high. In 1538 Cranmer allowed the pillaging of the shrine of St. Thomas, and in 1541 he ordered the tombs of all the canonized archbishops to be destroyed. When the death of Cardinal Pole in 1558 brought to a close the line of Catholic archbishops of the See of Canterbury, the cathedral passed out of Catholic hands.

Chartres Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1194-1260, French Gothic. Begun in 1020 by Bishop Fulbert, but three fires interfered with the progress of the work. The finished cathedral was consecrated in 1260 and St. Louis is supposed to have attended the ceremony. The extensive and interesting crypt, enclosing a well and a vault, is a remnant of an earlier church and is still used for pilgrimages to the shrine of the "Vierge Noir." Legend has it that the early Christians of the place found here an altar surmounted by a statue representing a woman seated with her child upon her knees, both the altar and the statue, "Virgini Pariturae," having been erected by the Druids. The plan has a short nave, strongly marked aisled transepts. The spire over the chevet built above the crypt is one of the most beautiful in Europe. The cathedral is remarkable for the magnificent thirteenth-century stained glass in its 130 windows, containing 3,889 figures, and for the profusion of sculptured figures in the west front doorways and in the triple porches of the north and south transepts. Though these figures are somewhat archaic and stiff, they are more ambitious than any previous French statuary. The porches and windows represent in magnificent symbolism the Glorification of Mary. The flying buttresses are in three arches one above the other. The cathedral has since its foundation been a very popular place of pilgrimage with a three-fold object: the statue of Notre Dame sous Terre modelled after the old statue burned in 1793; the Vierge Noir de Notre Dame du Pilier in the upper church; and the veil of the Blessed Virgin, given to Charlemagne by Constantine and Irene, sovereigns of Byzantium, and transferred in 876 from Aix-la-Chapelle (Aachen) to Chartres.

Cologne Cathedral, 1248-1322, German Gothic. The largest Gothic church in Northern Europe and the greatest monument of Gothic architecture in Germany, covering about 91,000 sq. ft., and having a width out of all proportion to its length, 468 ft. long by 275 ft. wide. Its cornerstone was laid by Archbishop Conrad of Hostaden, the sanctuary was dedicated in 1322, and the nave made ready for religious services in 1388. During the French Revolution the cathedral was used as a hay barn. The nave is 150 ft. high, while the double aisles are equal in width to the nave. The twin towers are 500 ft. high. The eastern half of the church is a reproduction of Amiens in plan and dimensions. The building was finished according to the original design only in 1824-80. The most famous of the works of art are the "Dombild," a painting by Stephen Lochner (1450) and the triptych over the high altar, the 96 choir seats of the sanctuary, and the shrine in which are kept the relics of the Three Kings. This last is considered the most remarkable medieval example of the goldsmith's art extant.

Compostella Cathedral, Santiago, 1078, Spanish Gothic. One of the most remarkable medieval buildings in Spain, begun by Bishop Diego Pelaez, continued by Archbishop Diego Gelmírez, and completed by Archbishop Pedro Munoz, built upon the site of two former churches which had in turn been erected above a marble grotto containing the tomb of St. James the Greater, discovered in the ninth century. The nave has a barrel vault and the single aisles cross-vaults. The Portico de la Gloria (1188) extends across the whole width of the church and is one of the greatest glories of Christian art, with its range of statues of the apostles and major prophets, its semi-circular arch with statues of the twenty-four elders, and tympanum with sculptured representations of the Last Judgment. The tombs of St. James and of two of his disciples, Athanasius and Theodorus, are in a subterranean chapel. These holy relics were rediscovered late in the nineteenth century by Cardinal Paya whose declaration of the identity and authenticity of the relics was confirmed by Pope Leo XIII in 1884. The tomb of St. James was the most renowned place of pilgrimage in Europe from the time it was discovered until the Reformation. The cathedral was plundered by the French in 1809. Among the numerous treasures is a gold crucifix of exquisite workmanship, containing a fragment of the true cross.

Durham Cathedral, 1096-1133, Norman. A building of great dignity with few rivals. Begun by the Norman bishop, William de S. Carilef, completed by his successor, Ranulf Flambard, who transferred the shrine of St. Cuthbert in 1104 to the new cathedral. The Galilee Chapel, a unique specimen of transitional work, was added by Bishop Hugh de Pudsey and the "Chapel of the Nine Altars" by Bishop Poor in 1230.

Exeter Cathedral, 1280-1350, Decorated. Begun by Bishop Quivil and completed by Bishop Grandisson. The finest specimen of this style and exceptionally rich in varied tracery and carved wood and stone work. The twin towers over the north and south transepts are unique, recalling the plans of St. Stephen's in Vienna and Toledo Cathedral. The choir contains much early stained glass and a magnificent episcopal throne and is separated from the nave by a choir-screen of singular beauty. Turberville, the last Catholic bishop of Exeter, died in prison in 1570.

Florence Cathedral, S. Maria del Fiore, 1296-1462, Italian Gothic. Designed by Arnolfo di Cambio, built around the old church of St. Reparata, consecrated by Eugene IV in 1436. Giotto was appointed master of the works in 1334, followed by Pisano, Talenti, and Brunelleschi who added the dome in 1420-37. The plan is a peculiar type of Latin cross, remarkable for the large central nave, 270 ft. long, and wide spacing of nave arcades. This vast nave forms an impressive though somber approach to the majestic octagon, 138 ft. 6 in. in diameter, off which are three immense apses with fifteen radiating chapels. The exterior is notable for its colored marble panelling, absence of buttresses and pinnacles, the horizontal lines of the design and the pointed dome.

Glasgow Cathedral, St. Mungo's, 1181-1508, Gothic. Begun by Bishop Gocelyn and completed by Archbishop Blackader. The best preserved Gothic edifice in Scotland and very uniform in appearance, although of different dates. It has an internal length of 283 ft. with nave and aisles, choir and aisles, eastern aisle with chapel beyond, and chapter house and sacristy. The vaulted crypt (1233-58) encloses the shrine of St. Mungo. At the present time, the building as a national monument is administered by a department of the Government, and the chancel is used for the Presbyterian worship of the State Church.

of Ferdinand and Isabella over the Moors. Designed and built by Diego de Siloe. The interior is a translation of Seville Cathedral into Renaissance style, and the great piers of the nave are faced with the Classic Orders (columns designed in the Graeco-Roman manner) while the radiating piers supporting the dome of the circular "Capilla Mayor" show an ingenious and novel treatment. The late Gothic "Capilla Real" contains the famous Renaissance tombs of Ferdinand and Isabella and other kings and queens of Spain. The unfinished western facade is unusually imposing in design, with a north tower and tall massive piers to the cavernous arches which point the nave and aisles.

Istanbul: Sancta Sophia (Hagia Sophia, Divine Wisdom), 532-537. Built by order of Justinian by Anthemius of Tralles and Isidorus of Miletus on the site of two successive basilican churches of the same name, erected by Constantine (360) and Theodotius II (415). It is the masterpiece of Byzantine architecture, as the Parthenon is of Greek, and the Pantheon of Roman. Central space is 107 ft. sq. with four massive stone piers, 25 ft. by 60 ft., pierced by arches for aisles and gallery, supporting four semicircular arches upon which rests the dome, 107 ft. in diameter and 180 ft. above the ground. East and west of the central area are great hemicycles crowned with semi-domes, and off these are exedrae (apse-like) recesses, in turn covered with semi-domes. The whole area thus enclosed forms the great oval nave, 225 ft. by 107 ft. North and south of the nave are two-storied aisles over 50 ft. wide, the upper story being the Gynaeceum or women's gallery. The interior gives the impression of one vast domed space but the detailed effect with the great hemicycles and smaller exedrae is one of extreme intricacy. Sancta Sophia was converted into a mosque by the Mohammedans after the capture of Constantinople, at which time the lofty minarets were added. This is the most important mosque in Istanbul (Constantinople).

Laon Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1160-1205, French Gothic. There are two triforium galleries, thus dividing the nave into four stories instead of the usual three. The sanctuary is rectangular in English style instead of apsidal, the result of the influence of an English bishop who held the see in the twelfth century. The great west facade is an architectural masterpiece with three boldly projecting porches emphasized by gables and turrets and a central rose window. The present cathedral replaces a former Romanesque one consecrated in 1114 and visited by Innocent II in 1132. In the twelfth century Herman, Abbot of St. Martin's of Tournai, wrote a volume on the miracles of Notre Dame de Laon.

Lincoln Cathedral, 1185-1200, Early English. Built by St. Hugh, Bishop of Lincoln, on the foundations of an earlier Norman cathedral erected by the first Norman bishop, Remigius of Fecamp, and destroyed in the earthquake of 1185. The nave of the new Gothic structure was finished by Robert Grosseteste. It had double transepts, western towers and the highest central tower in England (271 ft.). The west front is unusual in having a screen wall behind which rise two western towers whose lower parts are invisible. In 1255 St. Hugh's choir was pulled down to make way for the splendid Angel Choir which was designed to hold his shrine and is one of the masterpieces of Gothic architecture. At the Reformation this shrine of St. Hugh was destroyed (1540). The cathedral lost its last Catholic bishop when Thomas Watson, the last survivor on English soil of the ancient Catholic hierarchy, died a prisoner for the Faith at Wisbech Castle in 1534.

Milan Cathedral, 1385-1485, Italian Gothic. With the exception of Seville, the largest medieval cathedral. It is somewhat German in character, as many of the fifty architects employed upon it were from north of the Alps. Begun by Gian Galeazzo Visconti, the first Duke of Milan; built on the site of the ancient basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore. The interior is vast, lofty and imposing, with a fine perspective view, rendered the more impressive by the dimness and mystery which result from the lack of light. In plan it consists of a nave, lofty double aisles, and transepts. Because of the excessive height of the aisles there is no triforium and the clerestory is small. The exterior is a gleaming mass of white marble with lofty traceried windows, panelled buttresses, flying buttresses, and pinnacles crowned with statues, all wrought into a soaring design of lace-like intricacy. The flat-pitched roofs are constructed of massive marble slabs laid on the vaulting, and over the crossing is a domical vault, 215 ft. above the ground, designed by Brunelleschi (1440), finishing in a lantern to which in 1750 an open-work choir was added, rising 350 ft. above the ground. The later façade, partly built in 1550-1600, was completed by Napoleon at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Under the cupola is the tomb of St. Charles. The treasury contains among other valuable objects, two statues of St. Charles and St. Ambrose, made of silver and set with precious stones, the gift of the city. The high altar is a gift of Pius IV.

Monreale Cathedral, Santa Maria Nuova, 1174, South Italian Romanesque. The most splendid of all the monuments erected under Norman rule in Sicily, built by William II. The plan is a combination of an Early Christian basilican church in its western part and a Saracenic mosque in its eastern part, with a choir raised above the nave and with eastern apses. The severity of design and colored decoration produce a solemn interior effect. The high altar is covered with worked sheets of silver (seventeenth century) and in a chapel to its right are the tombs of William I the Wicked and of William II. The cloisters, all that remain of the Benedictine monastery, are the finest of the style.

Norwich Cathedral, The Blessed Trinity, 1096-1145, Norman. Begun by Herbert de Losinga, Bishop of Thetford, and completed by his successor, Bishop Eborard de Montgomery. Long narrow nave, aisleless transepts and choir with apsidal chapels. The eastern apsidal chapel was replaced in the thirteenth century by an oblong Lady Chapel, destroyed by the Protestant Dean Gardiner in the sixteenth century. Its last Catholic bishop was John Hopton who died in 1558.

Oxford Cathedral, 1158-80. Formerly the Church of St. Frideswide, erected by the canons regular who succeeded the nuns of St. Frideswide. Norman nave and choir; early English chapter house and Lady Chapel. The nave pillars support lofty Norman arches beneath which is a triforium gallery (a gallery between the sloping roof over the aisle and the aisle vaulting) — an unusual arrangement in order to give height. The central tower is Norman with Early English upper part and short spire.

Palermo Cathedral, 1170-85, Italian Gothic. Commenced by King William the Good of Sicily, built on the site of an earlier ancient basilica which had been changed into a mosque during the Saracen domination. The open porch built in 1480 with slender columns supporting pointed arches of the Saracenic type is reminiscent of the Alhambra. The plan is basilican. At the west end the cathedral is connected across the street by two pointed arches to the Archbishop's palace. The external decoration is in stone of two colors. In the first chapel at the right are six tombs of kings and queens of Sicily. Other objects of interest in the cathedral are an "Assumption" by Velasquez and the tabularium or archives with interesting Latin, Greek and Arabic documents.

Paris: Notre Dame, 1163-1235, French Gothic. Begun by Bishop Maurice de Sully, completed by Jean and Pierre de Chelles. Built on the site of two earlier churches dedicated to the Blessed Virgin and St. Stephen. The cornerstone was laid by Alexander III, the high altar consecrated by the papal legate in 1182. It has a wide nave and double aisles, and transepts of small projection practically in line with the aisles. The impressive and somber interior has a nave arcade with cylindrical columns carrying pointed arches and shafts to support the lofty sexpartite vaultings. The wide-spreading western façade is the finest and most characteristic in France and served as a model for many later churches. In 1239 the Crown of Thorns, a portion of the True Cross, and a nail of the Passion were deposited in the cathedral by St. Louis. The first States General was assembled here in 1302, and Mary Stuart was crowned here in 1560. During the French Revolution the treasury was despoiled, but the capital Crown of Thorns was taken to the Bibliothèque Nationale and thus escaped destruction. The statues of the kings, which adorned the porch, were destroyed in 1793 by order of the Paris Commune. Catholic worship was resumed here in 1802, and in 1832 so strong a public sentiment was aroused in favor of the cathedral by Hugo's "Notre Dame de Paris" that the government ten years later entrusted Lassus and LeDuc with a complete restoration. Notre Dame has been a minor basilica since 1805.

Peterborough Cathedral, 1117-90, Norman. Formerly a Benedictine abbey founded in 654 by Peada, King of the Mercians, and destroyed by the Danes in 870. It was rebuilt in 970 by Ethelwold, Bishop of Winchester, and burned in 1116 during the abbacy of Dom John of Sais. He began the present building which was continued by Martin de Bec and completed and consecrated by Robert Grosseteste, Bishop of Lincoln, in 1237. The interior is second to Durham in fineness, with a nave of eleven bays, transepts and presbytery terminating in a circular apse. The timber roof of the nave is probably the oldest in England. The western façade, one of the grandest and most original in Europe, is Early English, 158 ft. wide, with a portico of three gigantic arches, the full height of the cathedral, supported on triangular columns and enriched with a number of delicate shafts which open into a long narthex extending the whole width of the building. The monastery was surrendered to Henry VIII in 1541 but the church was spared from destruction because it contained the remains of his first wife. It then became the cathedral of the new diocese of Peterborough and the last abbot, John Chambers, was rewarded for his compliance to the royal demands by being made the first bishop.

Pisa Cathedral, 1063-92, Central Italian Romanesque. One of the finest of the Romanesque period, begun by Buschetto and consecrated by Gelasius II in 1118. It has long rows of columns connected by arches, double aisles and a nave with the usual timber roof of the basilican type. The transepts have a segmental apse at each end. The elliptical dome over the crossing, or intersection of nave and transept, is of later date. Among the notable objects in this cathedral are the octagonal pulpit, the urn of St. Ranieri, and the lamp of Possenti da Pietrasanta under which Galileo studied the isochronism of the pendulum.

Reims Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1211-1311, French Gothic. The coronation church of the kings of France, the pride of France and a treasure house of art. Begun by Bishop Alberic de Humbert upon the site of an earlier edifice built by Hincmar and destroyed in 1211. The nave and aisles of the western arm are broadened out in the eastern arm into a nave and double aisles so as to include the projecting transepts and thus give space for coronation ceremonies. The western façade has recessed portals exquisitely carved with some five hundred statues. The tympana are occupied by rose windows framed by five rings of statues and enclosed by richly ornamented gables of which the central one contains the group of the Coronation of the Virgin. The magnificent rose window above the central portal is 40 ft. in diameter, flanked by high traceried openings, while in the upper stage is a band of tabernacled statues of the kings of France. The two lofty western towers were originally surmounted by spires. The interior gives an impression of great space and is grand in the extreme. In the treasury is preserved the chalice of St. Remigius from which the kings of France used to communicate under the species of wine at the end of the coronation ceremonies, and which, according to tradition, was cut from the gold of the celebrated vase of Soissons broken by one of Clovis' soldiers. In 1886 the cathedral was affiliated to the Lateran Basilica, thereby participating in the privileges of all the indulgences and spiritual favors attached to the cathedral of Rome. In 1892 a part of the relics of St. Petronilla was translated from St. Peter's at Rome to the cathedral of Reims.

Rome: St. John Lateran. Cathedral of the Bishop of Rome, mother and head of all the churches of the earth. Basilican originally, but has been so much altered at various times as to have lost its Early Christian character. It was originally the palace of the family of the Laterani and came eventually into the hands of Constantine. He gave it to Popes Melchiades and Sylvester I, who opened a chapel in it. It was plundered by the Vandals in the fifth century and destroyed by fire in 1308, and again in 1360. The present church was restored by Borromini, and the façade designed by Galilei in 1726. The plan is a Latin cross with one nave and four aisles. The apse was enlarged in 1878 and the ancient mosaics replaced successfully in the new setting. A transverse nave was introduced by Clement V. The high altar has no saint buried beneath it, and is unique among all the altars of the Catholic world in being of wood and not of stone, and enclosing no relics of any kind. The reason of this is that it is itself a relic of unique interest, being the actual altar used by St. Peter in celebrating Mass during his residence in Rome. Above the altar, in the upper part of the canopy, are preserved the heads of the Apostles Peter and Paul, the great treasure of the basilica. At the entrance is an inscription commemorating the dream of Innocent III, when he saw the church of the Lateran upheld by St. Francis of Assisi. In the archives of the Basilica rests the tabula magna, or catalogue of all the cathedral relics.

Salisbury Cathedral, dedicated to Our Lady, 1220-66, Early English. Begun by the seventh Bishop of Salisbury, Richard Poore, who laid the foundation stones beginning with the Lady Chapel which was consecrated in 1225. Among those present was St. Edmund, afterwards Bishop of Canterbury, and at this time treasurer of Salisbury. This characteristic English Gothic church has double transepts with the loftiest spire in England (404 ft.) above the crossing of the more westerly one. Salisbury Cathedral stands alone among English cathedrals in having been built all of a piece, and thus possesses an architectural unity which is exceptional. Francis Mallet was named the last Catholic bishop of the cathedral, but was ejected by Elizabeth before his consecration.

Seville Cathedral, 1401-1520, Spanish Gothic. The largest medieval cathedral in Europe and, with the exception of St. Peter's in Rome, the largest church in the world. It owes its plan and size, with nave, double aisles and side chapels, to its erection on the site of a mosque built in 1171 and remodelled by the Catholics soon after the reconquest of Seville by St. Ferdinand. However this converted mosque became too small, and the cathedral chapter resolved in 1401 to rebuild it on so vast a scale that posterity should deem it the work of madmen. It is rectangular in outline, 400 ft. by 250 ft. The cathedral is about eight times the width of the nave in Westminster Abbey. The interior is impressive because of its great size and height; the exterior, because of many additions, has a certain shapelessness and absence of skyline, and bears a general resemblance to Milan Cathedral, although of a simpler Gothic type and less fanciful in detail. The slender Giralda, one of the most celebrated and beautiful towers in the world was originally the minaret of the mosque, and gives this massive group a curiously Oriental aspect. The magnificent reedos of the high altar was designed by Danchart in 1482 and is the largest in Spain. In the sacristy are preserved the Alphonsine Tables, a reliquary left by the Wise King. The Chapel of San Antonio holds Murillo's famous picture of the Saint's ecstasy. The chapel royal contains the tombs of St. Ferdinand, Alphonso the Wise and his consort, Beatriz, and Christopher Columbus. Among the sacred vessels is the great silver monstrance of Juan Arfe, which requires 24 men to bear it in procession.

Siena Cathedral, 1245-1380, Italian Gothic. One of the most stupendous undertakings after the building of Pisa Cathedral. Said to occupy the site of a temple of Minerva. The plan, only a part of the intended scheme, is cruciform with an unusual, irregular hexagon, at the crossing, covered by a dome and lantern. Because of a slope of the ground, the sanctuary is built over the Baptistry of S. Giovanni which thus forms a crypt and is entered from the lower level. The interior is striking in its zebra marble striping on wall and pier and the incised marble floor. The building stands on a stepped platform which gives dignity to the composition. The Chapel of San Giovanni contains a statue of the saint by Donatello, besides statues by other sculptors and frescoes by Pinturicchio. The library of the cathedral possesses ancient choir books and other manuscripts, and is adorned throughout with frescoes by Pinturicchio, representing scenes from the life of Pius II. In the center of the library is the celebrated group of the Three Graces, presented by Pius II.

Strassbourg Cathedral, 1250-90, French Gothic and Romanesque. The Gothic nave was added by Bishop Conrad of Lichtenberg to the Romanesque choir and transepts built in 1179. The beautiful western façade, the work of Erwin of Steinbach, has a recessed portal, richly carved, surmounted by an open-work gable and tracery in two planes, above which is a rose window, 42 ft. in diameter, flanked with double traceried windows and two western towers, one of which terminates in an open-work spire 466 ft. high, erected in 1439. It is the outcome of four centuries of work. The minster is rich in stained glass of the period from the twelfth to the fifteenth century.

Syracuse Cathedral, Sicily, Early Christian. A pagan temple of Athena built in the sixth century B. C., converted into a Christian church in 640 by the construction of a wall between the range of columns (peristyle columns) surrounding the court and by the formation of openings in the cella walls. The present cathedral is built on the ruins of this temple, and of the 36 columns only 22 remain. In front of the cathedral are statues of St. Peter and St. Paul by Marabitti; in the interior are the famous silver statue of St. Lucy and several pictures by Scilla who also painted the frescoes of the vault of the Blessed Sacrament Chapel. The baptismal font is made from a large Greek crater, resting upon seven small lions of bronze, found in the catacombs of San Giovanni. Among the furniture is a historiated amber chalice.

Toledo Cathedral, 1227-1493, Spanish Gothic. Commenced by King St. Ferdinand and Archbishop Jimenez de Rada and built upon the site of a mosque which was formerly used as a Christian church. Similar to Burgos Cathedral in general plan, with five aisles, a range of side chapels, and choir enclosure, as usual in Spain, west of the crossing. A singularly shallow sanctuary with immense wooden retabulo, flanked by tiers of arcaded statuary completes a most impressive interior. The Chapel of Santiago erected by Count de Luna in 1435 as a mortuary chapel had doorways with elaborate screenwork and great frilled arches supporting the octagonal vault. There are fine stained-glass windows, beautiful carved choir stalls and a treasury containing the famous silver-gilt Custodia, the flower of Spanish Gothic miniature art.

Tournai Cathedral, Notre Dame, 1066-1338. Illustrates the styles of three successive periods and is largely built of the famous black Tournai marble. The nave is Romanesque, the circular-ended transepts and the central lantern are Transitional, and the choir is fully developed Gothic, very light and elegant in character after the French manner. The whole is surmounted by five towers and spires. This cathedral contains the tomb of St. Piát.

Treves Cathedral, 1016-47, German Romanesque. This oldest church of a Christian Bishop on German soil succeeded a basilican church several times destroyed by the Franks and Normans. It has an eastern apse and also a western apse flanked by entrances. The cathedral contains the remains of twenty-five archbishops and electors as well as those of the last four bishops. The most precious of its numerous treasures is the Holy Coat of Christ, given to the Church by St. Helena.

Valadolid Cathedral, 1585, Spanish Renaissance. Designed and built by Juan de Herrera, the Spanish Palliádo (the greatest architect of the later Renaissance). It has a rectangular plan, 400 ft. by 200 ft., and contains some fine choir stalls. The imposing exterior was never completed. The principal façade has four Doric columns supporting the entablature of the first story; between each column rises a magnificent arch overhanging a rectangular door over which is placed the figure of the Assumption, the titular of the cathedral. In the inter-columnar spaces are statues of St. Peter and St. Paul. The tabernacle built by Juan Arfe in 1590 and the choir stalls brought from the Dominican church are two of the precious possessions of this cathedral.

Venice: St. Mark, 1042-1071, Byzantine. Stands on the site of an original basilican church founded in 864 to receive the body of St. Mark. Between 1042 and 1071 the plan was completely transformed to resemble that of the Byzantine Church of the Apostles in Constantinople. Transepts were added, the sanctuary was extended, a long arcaded porch (narthex) was built along the north and south sides, and the interior altered from the basilican to the Byzantine plan of a Greek cross surmounted by domes. There is a central dome 42 ft. in diameter and a dome over each arm of the cross. The great piers, 28 ft. by 21 ft., carrying the dome, are pierced on the ground and gallery levels, and arcades support passages connecting the central piers to the extremities of the nave and transepts. In the treasury is an episcopal chair of the seventh century.

Worms Cathedral, 1110-1200, German Romanesque. The representative church of this period and the smallest and latest of the Romanesque cathedrals on the upper Rhine. Octagonal apses at both ends; one vaulting bay of the nave corresponds to two of the aisles with cross vaults used in both cases. Twin towers flank the eastern and western apses and the crossing of the nave and transept is covered by a low octagonal tower. The entrances are in the aisles, a characteristic of German Romanesque. This building makes a strong impression by the imposing force and richness of its exterior and its unity of appearance as a whole.

PRINCIPAL FEASTS

Arranged in Chronological Order

The Circumcision is a feast in memory of the day upon which Our Lord was circumcised according to the Jewish law and received the adorable name of Jesus, brought down from heaven and made known to the Blessed Virgin by the Angel Gabriel. It is commemorated on the eighth day after Christmas, and is a very ancient one. In the sixth century the Church made it a solemn feast, in order to atone in some way for the crimes committed by the pagans on that day, which is the first in the year, and is consequently called New Year's Day.

The Epiphany is a feast observed January 6, in honor of Christ's manifestation to the Gentiles, represented by the Three Kings of the East, who guided by a miraculous star, came to adore Him. It also commemorates the baptism of Christ and the miracle of the marriage feast of Cana. It is sometimes called Twelfth Night, as it comes twelve days after Christmas.

The Purification, on February 2, is a feast in honor of (1) the Purification of the Blessed Virgin in the Temple of Jerusalem, and (2) the Presentation of our Lord on the same occasion, according to the law of Moses. This feast is also called Candlemas, because candles are blessed before the Mass of this day and carried in solemn procession by the faithful while the choir sings the canticle of the highpriest Simeon: "A light to the revelation of the Gentiles, and the glory of His people Israel." This procession represents the entry of Christ Who is the Light of the World into the Temple of Jerusalem.

Ash Wednesday is a day of public penance, and is so called from the ceremony of blessing ashes on that day, with which the priest signs the people with a cross on their foreheads, at the same time saying, "Remember, man, thou art of dust, and to dust thou shalt return." Lent begins with this day.

The Annunciation, on March 25, is a feast in memory of the Angel Gabriel being sent to the Blessed Virgin, at Nazareth, to announce to her that she was to be the Mother of God.

Palm Sunday is the Sunday immediately preceding Easter Sunday, commemorating our Lord's triumphant entry into Jerusalem. It receives its name from the palm branches which the people threw under the feet of Jesus, crying out, "Hosanna to the Son of David." On this day palms are blessed and distributed to the faithful.

Maundy Thursday, or Holy Thursday, occurs in Holy Week and commemorates the institution of the Holy Eucharist by our Lord at the Last Supper the night before He died. There is only one Mass in each church on this day; white vestments are used because of the joyful commemoration, but at the same time there are certain signs of the mourning proper to Holy Week, such as the silencing of the bells. The celebrant consecrates two Hosts, one of which he receives, while the other is placed in a chalice and carried in solemn procession to an altar prepared for its reception called the Altar of Repose or Repository. Here it remains for the adoration of the faithful until Good Friday when it is taken back to the high altar and received by the priest at the Communion in the Mass of the Presanctified. After the procession of the Blessed Sacrament on Holy Thursday, the altars are stripped to remind us of the way our Lord was stripped of His garments. Then follows the washing of the feet, known as the "Mandatum" from the first word of the antiphon recited during the ceremony; whence the name "Maundy" Thursday.

Good Friday commemorates the Passion and Crucifixion of our Lord. It has been a day of fasting and penance from the earliest ages of the Church, and the liturgy is in every way of an exceptional character, befitting the day of the Great Atonement. Black vestments are worn, the altar is covered only by a single linen cloth and there are no lights. The distinctive feature is the Mass of the Presanctified said on this day, in which there is no Consecration, the Host having been consecrated in the Mass the day before. The service consists of: (1) lessons from Holy Scripture and prayers, terminating with the chanting of the Passion; (2) solemn supplication for all conditions of men; (3) veneration of the Holy Cross; (4) procession of the Blessed Sacrament from the Repository and the priest's Communion, or the Mass of the Presanctified proper.

Holy Saturday is the day before Easter. During the twelfth century the custom of anticipating the vigil Office was creeping in. Now the time has been changed but the words of the Office remain the same. This explains the joyous character of the Mass, and the fact that the history of the Resurrection is sung in the Gospel. The ceremonies begin early in the morning with the blessing of the new fire and the Paschal Candle, which is followed by the reading of the twelve prophecies. The priest then goes in procession to bless the font, and the water is scattered toward the four quarters of the world to indicate the catholicity of the Church and the worldwide efficacy of her sacraments. Solemn High Mass is then sung, white vestments are used, flowers and candles set upon the altar, statues unveiled, the organ is heard and the bells, silent since Holy Thursday, are joyfully rung. Lent ends officially at noon on this day.

The Resurrection or Easter Sunday commemorates our Lord's rising from the dead by His own power on the third day after His Crucifixion, and occurs on the first Sunday after the first full moon after the vernal equinox, or March 21. It is named from "Oriens," which signifies the "East" or "Rising," and is one of the titles of Christ: "And His name shall be called 'Oriens.'"

The Invention or Finding of the Holy Cross is a feast established in memory of the miraculous cross which appeared to Constantine A. D. 312, and of the finding of the true Cross by St. Helena A. D. 326, after it had been hidden and buried by the infidels for 180 years. This feast is observed on May 3.

The Patronage of St. Joseph, on the third Wednesday after Easter, honors St. Joseph as the patron of the Universal Church.

The Ascension, on the fortieth day after Easter, commemorates our Lord's Ascension into heaven from the top of Mount Olivet, in the presence of His Blessed Mother and His Apostles and disciples.

Pentecost is a solemn feast on the fiftieth day after Easter in honor of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the apostles, in the form of fiery tongues. The word "Pentecost" means "fiftieth." The time from Easter to Trinity Sunday is the Paschal time, which is a joyous preparation for this feast. It is also called Whitsunday, from the white garb of the catechumens, who were admitted to baptism on the eve of this feast.

Trinity Sunday is the first Sunday after Pentecost, and is a day on which the Church honors in an especial manner One God in Three Divine Persons.

Corpus Christi is a feast on the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, in honor of the Body and Blood of Christ, really present in the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist. The observance of this feast was extended to the Universal Church by Urban IV in 1264. It was established in order to assist in making reparation for the sins committed against our Lord in the Blessed Sacrament and to reanimate the devotion of Christians toward the adorable Mystery.

The Feast of the Sacred Heart, on the Friday after the Octave of Corpus Christi, is a day on which we honor the Heart of Jesus as a symbol of His love for us and render love to Him. The feast was extended to the Universal Church in 1856 and raised to the highest rank in 1929. An act of reparation is recited in all churches on that day.

The Feast of SS. Peter and Paul, on June 29, honors the Prince of the Apostles, and the great Apostle of the Gentiles, who were both martyred on this day at Rome. St. Peter was crucified with his head downwards, as he felt himself unworthy to die in the same manner and posture as his Divine Master. St. Paul, being a Roman citizen, was beheaded.

The Precious Blood is a feast established by Pius IX and celebrated on July 1, in honor of the Blood of our Saviour shed for the redemption of mankind.

The Visitation is celebrated on July 2, in memory of the Blessed Virgin's visit to her cousin St. Elizabeth. This feast was established by Pope Urban VI, and was afterwards extended to the whole Church, in the fourteenth century, by Pope Boniface IX.

The Assumption, on August 15, commemorates the Blessed Virgin's being taken up, soul and body, into heaven, after her death.

The Nativity of the Blessed Virgin is a feast in honor of her birth, and is kept on September 8. It is of very ancient origin.

The Exaltation of the Holy Cross is a feast established in the seventh century in memory of the exaltation or setting up of the Cross by Heraclitus the emperor, who regained it from the Persians. He carried it on his own shoulders to Mount Calvary. This feast is observed on September 14.

Michaelmas, on September 29, is a feast in honor of St. Michael, prince of the heavenly host, who remained faithful to God and defeated Lucifer and the apostate angels in the great battle fought in heaven in defense of God's honor.

The Feast of Christ the King, instituted by Pius XI, is celebrated on the last Sunday in October to give public homage to Christ the Ruler of the World. The consecration of the world to the Sacred Heart is yearly renewed on this day.

The Feast of All Saints, on November 1, was established at Rome by Pope Boniface IV. On this day we honor all the saints, especially those who have no fixed festivals during the year.

All Souls' Day, on November 2, is a day set apart by the Church to pray for all the faithful departed in purgatory. The clergy recite the Office of the Dead, and by a decree of Benedict XV all priests may say three Masses: one for the souls in Purgatory, one for the intention of the Pope, and one for the priests.

The Presentation of the Blessed Virgin is a feast commemorating her presentation in the Temple of Jerusalem at the age of three by her parents St. Joachim and St. Anne. It is observed on November 21.

The Immaculate Conception is a feast commemorating the preservation of the Blessed Virgin from the stain of original sin from the moment of her conception. It is the patronal feast of the United States, observed December 8.

The Nativity is a solemn feast observed December 25, commemorating the birth of Christ. It is also called Christmas from the Mass of the birth of Christ. On this day priests are allowed to say three Masses in honor of the three births of our Lord: (1) His eternal birth in the bosom of His Father, (2) His temporal birth in the stable at Bethlehem, (3) His spiritual birth in the hearts of the just.

PRINCIPAL DEVOTIONS

The Stations of the Cross is a devotional exercise instituted as a means of helping us to meditate on and have sympathy for the sufferings of our Divine Lord. The early Christians had the deepest love and veneration for those places made sacred by the sufferings and presence of Jesus Christ. Devout pilgrims went to the Holy Land from the farthest parts of the earth, to visit Jerusalem, the Garden of Olives and Mount Calvary. To encourage the piety and devotion of her children, the Church granted many and great indulgences to those who with true sorrow visited the scenes of our Lord's Passion. Unable, through various causes, to share in this devotion, as well as the spiritual blessings attached to it, were many who wished to do so. Therefore, the Church sanctioned the establishment in churches of the Stations of the Cross, which represent fourteen scenes from the Passion of our Lord. To this devotion are granted: (a) one plenary indulgence as often as one makes the Way of the Cross in some church or place where it is legitimately erected; (b) another plenary indulgence if on the day when one makes the Way of the Cross one receives Holy Communion, or once a month on the day on which one receives Holy Communion, if one has made the Way of the Cross ten times during the month.

The Three Hours' Agony is a devotion practised on Good Friday, in memory of the three hours our Lord hung upon the Cross. It begins at twelve o'clock, the hour our Lord was nailed to the Cross, includes prayers, hymns and meditations upon His sufferings and His seven last words, and ends at three o'clock, the hour at which He died.

The Sacred Heart — We owe the Sacred Heart of our Lord the same worship we owe to His humanity for it is personally united to His divinity. By practising this devotion we honor the infinite love of the Heart of Jesus for all mankind, and in some measure repair the outrages to which He is exposed in the Blessed Sacrament. This devotion was revealed to St. Margaret-Mary Alacoque at the Visitation monastery of Paray-le-Monial, France, in the seventeenth century. The feast is celebrated on the third Friday after Pentecost. The Holy Hour and the Communion of Reparation on the First Friday of each month are special manifestations of this devotion. Our Lord promised the "grace of final perseverance" to those who receive Communion on nine consecutive First Fridays.

The Five Wounds—We honor the five Sacred Wounds of our Lord, and have devotion to them, because they are the channels through which the Precious Blood flowed for our redemption. This feast is observed on the third Friday in Lent.

The Precious Blood—We honor the Precious Blood of our Lord, and have devotion to It, because It is the price of our redemption, for our salvation is due to the merits of Jesus Christ Who shed His Blood for us. This feast is celebrated on the fourth Friday in Lent and a second commemoration is on July 1.

The Forty Hours' Adoration is a most solemn form of exposition of the Blessed Sacrament. This devotion was first instituted in Milan in 1534, and received the formal sanction of Pope Clement VIII in 1592. It begins and ends with a High Mass and procession and the Litany of the Saints.

Benediction is a short exposition of the Blessed Sacrament which takes place sometimes after Mass but usually after Vespers or as an evening service. At the close of the exposition, following the singing of the "Tantum Ergo," the priest makes the Sign of the Cross with the Blessed Sacrament over the people.

Vespers and Compline form a part of the Divine Office which all priests are obliged to say every day, and which is divided into seven hours or portions to be said at certain hours. Of these the evening hours are called Vespers, which means "evening," and Compline, which means "finishing," because it finishes the Office for the day.

The order of Vespers is as follows: (1) five psalms, with antiphons; (2) the capitulum, or little chapter; (3) a hymn; (4) versicle and response; (5) the Magnificat, with its antiphon; (6) the prayer; (7) conclusion, after which comes an anthem to the Blessed Virgin. Of these anthems there are four, which are taken in turn according to the season.

The order of Compline is as follows: (1) three psalms with an antiphon; (2) a hymn "Te Lucis ante Terminum"; (3) a little chapter, with responses; (4) the canticle of Holy Simeon, the "Nunc Dimittis"; (5) the prayer, "Visita, Quaesumus"; (6) one of the four anthems used at Vespers.

The Angelus is a devotion in honor of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ. It consists of three versicles or little verses, each followed by a "Hail Mary," and concludes with a special prayer. This devotion reminds us of how the mystery of our Lord's coming into this world was made known to Mary, and how, on her giving her assent to be the Mother of God, the Incarnation actually took place. It receives its name from the word with which it commences.

The Rosary is a form of prayer in honor of our Lady made up of a series of ten "Hail Marys" or decades, each beginning with an "Our Father" and ending with a "Glory be to the Father." The complete rosary is made up of fifteen decades and each five decades is devoted to meditation on certain mysteries: joyful, sorrowful and glorious. These mysteries commemorate some event either in the life of our Lord or in that of the Blessed Virgin. Our Lady confirmed the efficacy of this devotion by an appearance to St. Dominic in the thirteenth century when he was preaching to the Albigenses in France. Rosary beads have been devised to aid us in counting the prayers without distraction, and the usual form is a chaplet of five decades, pendant from a crucifix and five beads on which at the beginning of the rosary are said the "Apostles' Creed," one "Our Father," three "Hail Marys" and one "Glory be to the Father," and connected by a medallion usually bearing the image of the Blessed Virgin, on which at the completion of the rosary a "Hail, Holy Queen" is said. A plenary indulgence is granted to all who after confession and Holy Communion say five decades of the rosary in a church or chapel where the Blessed Sacrament is reserved. A feast has been instituted in honor of the Most Holy Rosary, on the seventh day of October, and the whole month is dedicated to it.

The Scapular consists of two square pieces of woolen stuff, joined to each other by two strings, so that one piece may hang over the breast and the other over the back of the wearer. It represents the habit of dress of a religious order. The scapular must be blessed and put on each person in due form, by those who have the right of investiture with it. If the scapular is worn out, or lost, it may be replaced and worn with the same advantages and privileges as the first without a new blessing. This does not apply to the scapular of the Blessed Trinity which must be blessed every time it is renewed. The scapulars are each made of a different colored material, according to the color of the religious habit they represent, such as the Brown Scapular of the Carmelites, or a color appropriate to the special devotion, as the Red Scapular of the Passion. There are eighteen kinds of scapulars in popular use. (See page 182.)

By regulation of the Holy Office, December 16, 1910, it is permitted to wear a medal of metal in place of one or more of the small scapulars. The scapular medal has on one side a representation of the Sacred Heart and on the other an image of the Blessed Virgin. These medals, now in general use, must be blessed by a priest who has power to invest with the scapular which the medal represents.

Large scapulars are worn by religious and members of the third orders for the laity, such as that of the Third Order of St. Francis.

The Miraculous Medal devotion owes its origin to apparitions accorded in 1830 to Blessed Catherine Laboure, a Sister of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul. When the Blessed Virgin appeared to the Sister, she was standing on a globe, and from her hands were emitted rays of dazzling light: a "symbol of the graces I shed upon those who ask for them." Around the figure appeared an oval frame bearing in gold letters the inscription: "O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee." The vision reversed and Sister Catherine beheld the letter M surmounted by a cross with a crossbar beneath it and under all the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. A command was given to have a medal modeled like the apparition, and great graces were promised to all who would wear such a medal. The first medal was struck in 1832, with ecclesiastic approbation, and the devotion spread rapidly. So extraordinary were the favors received that the medal soon became known as the "Miraculous Medal." The feast of the Miraculous Medal is celebrated on November 27. Various indulgences may be gained by those who wear the medal, provided it be blessed by a priest having proper faculties; other indulgences can be gained only by those who have been invested in the medal. Miraculous Medal devotions are now held in many parish churches throughout the United States. The Central Association of the Miraculous Medal is located at 100 E. Price St., Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

Mother of Sorrows devotion is a popular novena devotion to the Sorrows of Our Lady, held in many churches every Friday of the year. It consists in the recitation of approved prayers, a sermon on the Blessed Virgin, the Via Matris and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The Via Matris, or Stations of the Cross of Our Sorrowful Mother, represent the Seven Sorrows of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Upon application to the Father General of the Servite Fathers these Stations may be canonically erected in any church.

THIRD ORDERS

Affiliated with certain religious orders and sharing in their good works are associations of the laity called third orders secular and communities of religious known as third orders regular. Permission of the Holy See to establish third orders has been granted to the Augustinians, Carmelites, Dominicans, Friars Minor, Marists, Minims, Premonstratensians, Salesians, Servites, and Trinitarians. The members are called tertiarys.

The Third Order of St. Francis is the largest of the nine tertiary bodies represented in the United States. These are:

1. The Third Order of St. Francis.
2. The Third Order of St. Dominic.

3. The Third Order of St. Augustine.
4. The Third Order of Servites.
5. The Third Order of Our Lady of Mount Carmel.
6. The Third Order of Premonstratensians or Norbertines.
7. The Oblates of St. Benedict.
8. The Pious Union of Salesian Co-operators.
9. The Third Order of the Society of Mary.

The Oblates of St. Benedict are not, strictly speaking, a third order, for St. Benedict wrote but one rule for all his children to follow. However, they have a rule of life which resembles those of the various tertiarys, and may be classified with them.

EMBLEMS OF THE SAINTS

Saints are represented in art with emblems indicative of something specific in their lives or the instrument of their martyrdom. The emblems of the Evangelists refer to their sacred writings. Thus a man is representative of St. Matthew because he begins his Gospel with the human ancestry of Christ. The lion of the desert is emblematic of St. Mark because he opens his narrative with the mission of St. John, "the voice of one crying in the wilderness." The sacrificial ox is the emblem of St. Luke whose Gospel begins with the Highpriest Zachary. The eagle soaring heavenward is emblematic of St. John who with the opening words of his Gospel carries us to heaven itself. Emblems of various saints are as follows:

AMERICAN MARTYROLOGY

This list includes the names of those within the confines of the present United States, who died a martyr's death or in the odor of sanctity, having sacrificed all in God's cause. (Subject to the decision of the Holy See and the decree of Pope Urban VIII.)

St. Isaac Jogues and Companions, eight Jesuit martyrs of North America, beatified by Pope Pius XI, June 21, 1925, and canonized by the same Pontiff, June 29, 1930. Feast celebrated on Sept. 26. They are: Fr. Isaac Jogues, martyred at instigation of Mohawk medicine men, at Auriesville, N. Y., Oct. 18, 1646; Bro. John Lalonde, martyred a day after Fr. Jogues, Oct. 19, 1646, at Auriesville; Bro. Rene Goupil, martyred at Auriesville, Sept. 29, 1642; and the following five who shed their blood for Christ when pagan Hurons made attacks on 15 villages of Christian Hurons in Canada, Fr. Anthony Daniel, July 4, 1648, Fr. Gabriel Lalemant, March 17, 1649, Fr. John de Brebeuf, March 16, 1649, Fr. Charles Garnier, Dec. 7, 1649, and Fr. Noel Chabanel, Dec. 7, 1649.

Felix de Andreis, C. M. (1778-1820), first Superior of the Vincentians in the U. S. and Vicar General of Upper Louisiana. A beautiful star appeared over the spot where his body lay after death and disappeared after the funeral services. Many miracles were attributed to his intercession. His cause was introduced in 1918.

Frederic Baraga (1797-1868), first Bishop of Marquette, suffered untold hardship to bring the Gospel to the Redmen during a 37-year apostolate to the Indians of Michigan and Wisconsin. Preliminary process of beatification begun in Yugoslavia, his birthplace, and Michigan in 1933.

Mother Mary Magdalen Bentivoglio (1834-1905), foundress of the Poor Clares in the U. S., despite great discouragement. Finally the strict enclosure was established in Omaha in 1882. Her beatification cause is before the Roman Tribunal.

Simon Gabriel Brute, S. S. (1779-1839), first Bishop of Vincennes, after refusing two bishoprics. His zeal knew no bounds, though his health was feeble. He died, worn out by his labors.

Bl. Frances Xavier Cabrini, M. S. C. (1850-1917), foundress of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, in Italy. She established them in the United States, becoming a citizen in 1909. Her order had a remarkable growth, and her work remains as her monument. Beatified by Pope Pius XI, Nov. 13, 1938. Process of canonization under way.

Luis Cancer, O. P. (c. 1500-49), labored as a missionary in Haiti, Puerto Rico, Nicaragua, Guatemala and finally Florida, where he was martyred near Tampa Bay, June 26, 1549.

Magin Catala, O. F. M. (1761-1830), "The Holy Man of Santa Clara." He labored in the Santa Clara Mission for 36 years with heroic sacrifice, and lived an austere priestly life of prayer, fasting and discipline. The examination of his writings has been completed and the formal introduction of his cause is being prepared.

Bl. Rose Philippine Duchesne, R. S. C. J. (1769-1852), foundress of the Religious of the Sacred Heart in the U. S. Through her heroic zeal she made the first foundation at St. Charles, Mo., and helped establish many others, becoming a spiritual power house during the solitude of her last decade. Declared Venerable by Pope Pius XI and beatified by Pope Pius XII, May 12, 1940.

Benedict Joseph Flaget, S. S. (1763-1850), first Bishop sent to the West, Bishop of Bardstown (Louisville), lived to see within his territory the erection of 11 dioceses, 2 to archiepiscopal rank. He worked perseveringly and wrote voluminously.

Demetrius Gallitzin (1770-1840), Prince-Priest, Apostle of the Alleghenies. Scion of a Russian princely family and reared in the Greek Orthodox Church, he became a Catholic at 17 and when 22 came to the U. S. Attracted to the priesthood, he was ordained in 1795 and after four years' labor in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia, obtained permission to establish a Catholic colony in western Pennsylvania. There he labored for 41 years, expending some $200,000 of his princely fortune in his priestly work, and suffering poverty. He lived a life of heroic holiness.

Mother Theodore Guerin (1798-1856), foundress of the Sisters of Providence of Indiana. She came from France to establish her order in the U. S. and founded a community in a then wild and isolated section of the New World, at St. Mary-of-the-Woods, Indiana, in 1840. Tribulation, poverty and persecution were endured. Her writings were favorably considered by the Sacred Congregation of Rites, in 1940, with a view to beatification.

Leo Heinrichs, O. F. M. (1867-1908), "Martyr of the Eucharist." In 1907 he was appointed pastor of St. Elizabeth's, Denver, Colo., and while distributing Communion there on Feb. 23, 1908, he was assassinated by an anarchist, who after receiving the Sacred Host spat it out and emptied his revolver into the heart of the priest. The process of investigation for beatification was begun in 1926 and the reports forwarded to Rome in 1933.

Luis Jayme, O. F. M. (d. 1775), Franciscan protomartyr of California. Came from Franciscan Province of Majorca to Upper California in 1770. Labored at San Diego until Indians fired the Mission, Nov. 4, 1775, and clubbed Fr. Luis Jayme to death. The saintly Serra exclaimed, "Thanks be to God, the land is now watered," and thereafter the San Diego Mission, watered by this martyr's blood, surpassed all others in neophytes.

Eusebio Francisco Kino, S. J. (1645-1705), the "Padre on Horseback," cartographer and organizer, established 19 missions in the land of the Pimas, in Mexico, California and Arizona.

Mathias Loras (1792-1858), first Bishop of Dubuque, traversed prairies, rivers and mountains of his diocese on horseback, foot, steamboat and stage, to minister to some 300,000 Indians and the white settlers. The "saintly Loras" died, worn out with his labors. In 1937 the Archbishop of Dubuque instituted the process of his beatification.

Pedro Martinez, S. J. (1533-66), Jesuit protomartyr of New World, was betrayed and killed by Indians on St. George Island, Fla., Oct. 6, 1566.

Samuel Charles Mazzuchelli, O. P. (1806-64), "Builder of the West," a saintly Friar. Through Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa he rode or walked, ministering to the faithful, converting, organizing, building. Founded the Dominican Sisters of the Most Holy Rosary.

Richard Miles, O. P. (1791-1860), "Father of the Church in Tennessee," first Bishop of Nashville. A native American, he tirelessly worked and built for the Church in this country.

John Nepomucene Neumann, C. Ss. R. (1811-60), fourth Bishop of Philadelphia, called the "Missionary Bishop." For his work in the confessional he mastered 12 languages, founded parochial school system and prescribed Forty Hours Devotion in his diocese. Pronounced Venerable by Pope Leo XIII, and with a view to beatification Pope Benedict XV declared he practiced virtue to a heroic degree.

Francisco de Porras, O. F. M. (d. 1633), Franciscan martyr of Arizona. A Spaniard, he joined the Franciscans in Mexico, and was assigned to New Mexico in 1628. Traveled to Hopi territory and there cured a deaf-mute. Jealous medicine men poisoned his food.

Joseph Rosati, C. M. (1789-1843), first Bishop of St. Louis, when the diocese embraced Missouri, Arkansas and two-thirds of Illinois. Wrote many important documents for first four Provincial Councils of Baltimore. Noted for zeal, sanctity and untiring labors.

Francis Xavier Seelos, C. Ss. R. (1819-67), missionary in Pittsburgh, and finally in New Orleans where he was stricken with yellow fever. Of extraordinary holiness, he was chosen to important offices, and won many souls. In 1912 information was presented to the Sacred Congregation of Rites with a view to having his cause introduced.

Junipero Serra, O. F. M. (1713-84), Apostle of California. Labored in Mexico from 1750 to 1769, and from then until his death in California where his labors were prodigious and he founded numerous missions. He was father to all, and his love for the Indians was limitless. He lived and died in great sanctity. The cause for his beatification is expected to be introduced shortly.

Elizabeth Ann Bayley Seton (1774-1821), foundress of the Sisters of Charity in the U. S. Mother of five children, widowed at an early age, a convert to the Church in 1805, she opened a school for girls in Baltimore and the work prospered. She longed to embrace religious life, and thus with the aid of Fr. Dubourg were founded the Daughters of Charity in the U. S. Her cause was formally introduced in 1940.

Kateri Tekakwitha (d. 1680), "The Lily of the Mohawks." An Indian maid, treated as a slave and accused of immorality because of her desire for virginity, she was secretly baptized by Fr. de Lamber-ville and her virtues led great numbers to the Faith. She was the first of her race to vow virginity and after her death appeared to several persons, protected her village from storms and warfare, and created great fervor among her people. Her home at Caughnawaga, Canada, has been a place of pilgrimage for almost three centuries. Her cause was introduced in 1926 and speedy completion is hoped for.

One hundred and eleven American martyrs for whom joint beatification and canonization is being sought, are named below, with date and place of martyrdom, in chronological order. The list was compiled under the direction of Bishop John Mark Gannon of Erie and was sent to the Sacred Congregation of Rites by Cardinal Archbishop Dougherty, of Philadelphia. ## THE EIGHT BEATITUDES

1. Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

2. Blessed are the meek, for they shall possess the land.

3. Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted.

4. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after justice, for they shall have their fill.

5. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.

6. Blessed are the clean of heart, for they shall see God.

7. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.

8. Blessed are they that suffer persecution for justice's sake for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Religious Orders

Canon Law defines the religious state as "a stable manner of community life in which the faithful besides observing the common precepts bind themselves to the observance of the evangelical counsels by the vows of obedience, chastity and poverty." Religious life, then, is a striving after perfection through intensified love of God and of neighbor.

Over and above the common end of religious life which makes it a school of perfection, the various religious communities have particular objects of their own which divide them into contemplative, active, and mixed communities. Contemplative are those which devote themselves to union with God in a life of solitude and retirement; active, those which expend their energy in doing good to men, for example, caring for the sick and the orphans. If their activity is spiritual in its objects and requires contemplation for its attainment, they are called mixed communities.

Though the following lists comprehend all three types of religious bodies, they do not include all the orders and congregations in the world. Only those communities are included which live and work in the United States.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES AT HOME AND IN FOREIGN FIELDS

(Figures taken from "A Missionary Index of Catholic Americans.")

According to statistics compiled by the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade and published by them in "A Missionary Index of Catholic Americans," there were 5,187 Catholic Americans engaged in missionary work at home and abroad in May, 1942. Of these 2,313 were men and 2,874 were women. Outside the United States there were 1,468 men and 1,225 women, a total of 2,693. In home missions there were 845 men and 1,649 women, a total of 2,494.

The largest number of missionaries was reported by the Jesuits, who have 484 men in home and foreign missions. Maryknoll missionaries numbered 240 men, of whom all but 13 were abroad. The Order of Friars Minor ranked third, with 216. The largest group among religious orders of men working in a single missionary field is the Society of St. Joseph, with 127 engaged in the Colored missions of the United States.

Among the Sisterhoods, the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People rank first, with 347. Next come the Maryknoll Sisters, with 313. Various Franciscan Sisterhoods have a combined personnel of 441 doing missionary work.

The distribution of priests, Sisters and Brothers doing full-time work in the home and foreign mission fields is as follows:

THE HOME MISSIONERS OF AMERICA

The Home Missioners of America are a society, organized in 1937, and now in process of formation under the patronage of the Most Reverend John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, with the purpose of carrying the Faith to the rural sections of the United States. The Home Missioners are interested in the conversion of all of non-Catholic America, but they feel that the best place to begin such a work is in the rural sections: first, because it is here that the Church is least known and most misunderstood; and secondly, because these sections, having a much higher birth-rate than the cities, are the population reservoirs of the nation. There is also the fact that a very fine American society of priests, the Paulists, is already specializing in convert work in our cities.

The Home Missioners aim to do for the rural sections of America what the Maryknoll Fathers are doing for China, and in broad general outline they will follow the Maryknoll pattern of organization. While their attention for the present is confined to the formation of a body of priests, they aim later on to organize also co-operating communities of Brothers and Sisters.

Their quarterly publication is "The Challenge."

Catholic Charities

The Catholic Church from its very beginning has carried on works of charity in some form or other. Love of God necessarily demands love of neighbor. Our Lord has made this very clear to us in His teachings, especially in the parable of the Good Samaritan. Charity and faith can never be separated. The stronger our faith is the more widespread will be our charity.

There are a large number of priests and religious, both Sisters and Brothers, who, being so imbued with Catholic teaching, are practising works of charity in hospitals, schools, orphan asylums, homes for the aged and institutions for the blind and deaf all over the world. These men and women are following in the footsteps of Our Saviour, and without them our charities would be impossible.

The early Christians gave us shining examples of charity. They were forgetful of self, because they realized that the human possessor of goods is only a distributor and steward for the Supreme Owner, who is God. Their charity even received praise from a Roman Governor who said, "See these Christians, how they love one another."

In the Middle Ages the monasteries were centers of charity. The people went to the monasteries for relief during the times of famine and distress, because they knew that in the monasteries the religious practised charity for love of God. The religious saw in every poor person the image of Christ Himself. This was particularly so with St. Francis of Assisi and his Friars, with St. Dominic and his followers, and also with the many other religious orders.

After the so-called Reformation the "Council of Trent laid down certain regulations concerning the administration of hospitals and hospital funds, and reaffirmed the duty of the bishops not only to enforce these regulations, but to examine and oversee all measures for relief of the poor. In many portions of the Catholic world these ordinances soon bore considerable fruit, especially in connection with the re-establishment of parish relief. The greatest name identified with this work is that of St. Charles Borromeo, Bishop of Milan" ("Catholic Encyclopedia," III, 602).

An important feature of the period after the Council of Trent was the rise of the religious communities and other associations to relieve various kinds of distress. Among these were the Brothers of Charity, founded by St. John of the Cross in Granada, 1534; the hospital orders of the Brothers of St. Hippolytus (Mexico, 1585), and the Bethlehemites (Guatemala, 1660); the Daughters of Charity, or Sisters of Charity, founded by St. Vincent de Paul about the year 1633. "St. Vincent's work on behalf of foundlings, galley-slaves, and the wretched of all descriptions, makes him the most remarkable worker in the field of charity that the world has ever known" (ibid.). The Piarists, whose object is the instruction and care of poor children, were instituted in 1597 by Joseph of Calasanza. The institute of the Blessed Virgin, the "English Ladies," founded by Mary Ward in 1611, was intended chiefly as a teaching order though it also has orphan asylums. The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, devoting themselves to the reformation of wayward girls, were founded by a Frenchman, Fr. Eudes (1642). The Little Sisters of the Poor had their origin in the charitable work of a French servant girl, Jeanne Jugan, and received the approbation of the Holy See in 1854.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul may be classified as the greatest lay-organization for the relief of the poor and the unfortunate.

It was started in 1833 by Frederic Ozanam and seven other Catholic students in Paris. This is a society of laymen for the relief of their suffering fellowmen. The society is usually established in conferences which are attached to a parish. The members usually live in the neighborhood of that parish or have previously lived in the parish, and therefore are thoroughly familiar with the particular parish area. There are in the United States about 2,500 conferences with about 25,000 active members and 5,000 honorary members. The first St. Vincent de Paul Conference in the United States was established in the old cathedral parish in St. Louis in 1844.

The founding of child-caring institutions dates back to 1548 in Mexico City, when the first institution called La Caridad was established through a private benefice. In 1721 the Ursuline nuns established an orphanage in New Orleans. The period of greatest growth in the number of children's institutions occurred in New York State from 1875 to 1889.

The care of children has occupied a larger place in Catholic welfare in the United States than any other type of work. Catholic agencies now care for 21,500 children in foster homes, while there are 300 child-caring institutions and 110 day nurseries. There are 24 homes for physically handicapped children and 6 for those mentally handicapped, 52 infant asylums and maternity hospitals, 50 industrial and technical institutions for boys, and 68 homes for delinquent girls.

Hospitals were also founded at a very early date in America, the first one being established in Mexico City by Cortez in 1532. The first Catholic hospital in the United States was established at New Orleans in 1720 by private benefice.

There are in the United States at the present time some 689 Catholic general hospitals with 260 allied agencies and institutions, including hospitals for tubercular patients, convalescent homes, homes for incurables, hospitals for mental and nervous diseases, visiting nurse services, etc. There are some 60 Catholic hospitals with medical social service departments. In 1920 the Catholic Hospital Association was formed for the purpose of improving the care of the sick in hospitals and to enable the members to profit by the experience and methods of other hospitals throughout the country. It is a voluntary organization and any Catholic hospital is eligible for membership.

There are many other Catholic organizations established in this country for carrying on particular phases of Catholic charity other than those mentioned above. Thus numerous Fresh Air Homes are maintained for the care of poor women and children. There are approximately 50 Catholic settlements throughout the country, also numerous institutions for crippled and feeble-minded children and a great many homes for the care of the deaf and the blind.

Today you will scarcely find a diocese that does not have a Central Bureau of Charities. About seventeen years ago Catholic diocesan Bureaus of Charity began to make their appearance throughout the country. Each bureau is usually under the direction of a priest who has had some training in social work, and therefore has some understanding of the problems that arise in the diocese. The appointment of the Diocesan Director of Catholic Charities is made by the bishop. In order to co-ordinate the work of the various dioceses throughout the country there is the National Conference of Catholic Charities, 1317 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. This organization has a membership of approximately 3,800 individuals, and 800 institutional agencies. It has associated with it 80 diocesan offices and 100 branch offices. Any person interested in Catholic Charities or anyone wishing to know the location of the Bureau of Charities in the diocese, may write or telephone to the Chancery office of the diocese for any information concerning Catholic Charities.

Education

Education consists essentially in preparing man for what he must do and what he must be here below in order to attain the Sublime End for which he was created. Education includes all those experiences by which the intelligence is developed, knowledge acquired and character formed. The foundations are laid in the home, and agencies and institutions for that express purpose train a child so as to fit him for the activities and duties of life. The purposes and ideals of life as understood by the educator are therefore important. The content of education is mankind's previous acquisition in various fields, the elements of which vary considerably in value, and the selection of that which is desirable as mental possessions and as means of culture must be subordinated directly, or at least indirectly, to the attainment of man's last end. There can be no ideally perfect education which is not Christian education.

CANON LAW ON EDUCATION

The following excerpts from Section XXII of the Code of Canon Law issued in 1918 state the official position of the Catholic Church regarding education:

Canon 1113: "Parents are bound by a most grave obligation to provide to the best of their ability for the religious and moral as well as for the physical and civil education of their children, and for their temporal well-being."

Canon 1372: "From childhood all the faithful must be so educated that not only are they taught nothing contrary to faith and morals, but that religious and moral training takes the chief place."

Canon 1373: "In every elementary school religious instruction, adapted to the age of the children, must be given."

Canon 1374: "Catholic children must not attend non-Catholic, neutral or mixed schools, that is, such as are also open to non-Catholics. It is for the bishop of the place alone to decide, according to the instructions of the Apostolic See, in what circumstances and with what precautions attendance at such schools may be tolerated, without danger of perversion to the pupils."

Canon 1375: "The Church has the right to establish schools of every grade, not only elementary schools, but also high schools and colleges."

THE CHURCH'S STAND ON EDUCATION

- 1 — Parents are responsible for the training of their children.
- 2 — Parents may be assisted by the Church, the State, private societies or individuals in fulfilling this duty.
- 3 — Teachers have their authority to teach by delegation from the parents.
- 4 — The Church has the right to demand of the parents that their children be trained in religion and morality.
- 5 — Since such training is not given in non-Catholic schools, parents who send their children to such schools are bound under pain of mortal sin to supply such training fully and adequately.
- 6 — Since most parents are unable to supply full and adequate religious training to their children, it becomes in most cases their obligation to send the children to Catholic schools.
- 7 — Parents may send their children to non-Catholic schools only when such practice is tolerated by the bishop of the diocese.
- 8 — The State has the right to demand that the child be prepared for his duties as a citizen. Such training is given in parochial as well as public schools.

CATHOLIC EDUCATION IN THE UNITED STATES

Law Promulgated by Third Plenary Council of Baltimore

In 1884 the following law was promulgated by the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore:

"Near every church where there is no parochial school one shall be established within two years after the promulgation of this Council, and shall be perpetually maintained, unless the bishop for serious reasons sees fit to allow delay.

"All parents shall be bound to send their children to a parochial school, unless it is evident that such children obtain a sufficient Christian education at home, or unless they attend some other Catholic school, or unless, for sufficient cause approved by the Bishop, with proper cautions and remedies duly applied, they attend another school. It is left to the Ordinary to decide what constitutes a Catholic school."

Pronouncements of Pastoral Letter of the Hierarchy in 1919

The following are some of the pronouncements of the Pastoral Letter issued by the Hierarchy of the United States in 1919:

"The Church in our country is obliged, for the sake of principle, to maintain a system of education distinct and separate from other systems. It is supported by the voluntary contributions of Catholics who, at the same time, contribute as required by law to the maintenance of the public schools. It engages in the service of education a body of teachers who consecrate their lives to this high calling; and it prepares, without expense to the state, a considerable number of Americans to live worthily as citizens of the republic.

"Our system is based on certain convictions that grow stronger as we observe the testing of all education, not simply by calm theoretic discussion, but by the crucial experience of recent events. It should not have required the pitiless searching of war to determine the value of any theory or system, but since that rude test has been so drastically applied and with such unmistakable results, we judge it opportune to restate the principles which serve as the basis of Catholic education.

"First: The right of the child to receive education and the correlative duty of providing it are established on the fact that man has a soul created by God and endowed with capacities which need to be developed, for the good of the individual and the good of society. In its highest meaning, therefore, education is a cooperation by human agencies with the Creator for the attainment of His purpose in regard to the individual who is to be educated, and in regard to the social order of which he is a member. Neither self-realization alone nor social service alone is the end of education, but rather these two in accordance with God's design, which gives to each of them its proportionate value. Hence it follows that education is essentially and inevitably a moral activity in the sense that it undertakes to satisfy certain claims through the fulfillment of certain obligations. This is true independently of the manner and means which constitute the actual process; and it remains true, whether recognized or disregarded in educational practice, whether this practice include the teaching of morality, or exclude it, or try to maintain a neutral position.

"Second: Since the child is endowed with physical, intellectual and moral capacities, all these must be developed harmoniously. An education that quickens the intelligence and enriches the mind with knowledge, but fails to develop the will and direct it to the practice of virtue, may produce scholars, but it cannot produce good men. The exclusion of moral training from the educative process is more dangerous in proportion to the thoroughness with which the intellectual powers are developed, because it gives the impression that morality is of little importance, and thus sends the pupil into life with a false idea which is not easily corrected.

"Third: Since the duties we owe our Creator take precedence of all other duties, moral training must accord the first place to religion, that is, to the knowledge of God and His law, and must cultivate a spirit of obedience to His commands. The performance, sincere and complete, of religious duties, ensures the fulfilment of other obligations.

"Fourth: Moral and religious training is most efficacious when it is joined with instruction in other kinds of knowledge. It should so permeate these that its influence will be felt in every circumstance of life, and be strengthened as the mind advances to a fuller acquaintance with nature and a riper experience with the realities of human existence.

"Fifth: An education that unites intellectual, moral and religious elements is the best training for citizenship. It inculcates a sense of responsibility, a respect for authority and a considerateness for the rights of others which are the necessary foundations of civic virtue—more necessary where, as in a democracy, the citizen, enjoying a larger freedom, has a greater obligation to govern himself. We are convinced that, as religion and morality are essential to right living and to the public welfare, both should be included in the work of education. . . .

"With great wisdom our American Constitution provides that every citizen shall be free to follow the dictates of his conscience in the matter of religious belief and observance. . . . And since education is so powerful an agency for the preservation of religion, equal freedom should be secured to both. This is the more needful where the State refuses religious instruction any place in its schools. To compel the attendance of all children at these schools would be practically equivalent to an invasion of the rights of conscience, in respect of those parents who believe that religion forms a necessary part of education.

"Our Catholic schools are not established and maintained with any idea of holding our children apart from the general body and spirit of American citizenship. They are simply the concrete form in which we exercise our rights as free citizens, in conformity with the dictates of conscience. Their very existence is a great moral fact in American life. For while they aim, openly and avowedly, to preserve our Catholic faith, they offer to all people an example of the use of freedom for the advancement of morality and religion."

History of Catholic Education in the United States

The Catholic faith and Catholic education were first brought to America by Spanish and French settlers and by English colonists in Maryland. By the end of the sixteenth century Franciscan missionaries had begun educational work in Florida; in 1606 a classical school was established at St. Augustine. Soon after Franciscan schools for Indians and Spanish were founded in the Southwest, in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. In Maine French Capuchins were teaching the Indians before 1640. In Maryland the Jesuits established a grammar school in 1640, a college at Newton in 1677, antedated only by Harvard, and a classical school at Bohemia Manor in 1744. About this time they extended their labors into Pennsylvania and the "mother of all the parochial schools in the English-speaking colonies," St. Mary's, was founded by the Jesuits at Philadelphia in 1782. Among those who zealously promoted education in Maryland and Pennsylvania were Archbishop Carroll, Archbishop Neale, the Jesuits, Frs. White, Wapeler, Schneider, Farmer, Ritter and Molyneux, and the Sulpician, Fr. Gallitzin.

The first missionaries on the California peninsula (Lower California) were Franciscans; forced to leave because of adverse circumstances, they were succeeded by the Jesuits. Likewise the Franciscans were the first to teach in what is now California proper. Notable among the Franciscans in California were Frs. Junipero Serra and Francis Lazuen. In Detroit, soon after its founding in 1703, the Franciscans and Jesuits taught successively. There were schools in Mackinaw, Mich., and Kaskaskia, Ill., before 1720, and by the end of the eighteenth century a complete system of Catholic schools was developing in Detroit. The Sulpician, Fr. Gabriel Richard, was particularly zealous in his labors in the cause of education and he was one of the founders in 1817 of the University of Michigan, of which he and the Rev. John Monteith were the entire faculty.

About 1780 there were French schools further west, at Vincennes and St. Louis. In the Middle West Fr. Gibault labored earnestly. Catholics established the first school in Kentucky, where Frs. Nerinckx and Badin were notable for their zeal. The first free school in the District of Columbia was founded by Catholics. The first parish school in New York City was St. Peter's Free School established in 1800.

The first convent of nuns in the United States was founded in New Orleans in 1727 by Ursulines from France. There they established a school, orphan asylum and hospital. Georgetown Convent, in the District of Columbia, was founded in 1799 by the Visitation Nuns, who had schools as far away as Illinois and Alabama by 1833. The Sisters of Charity of Emmitsburg, Md., were founded in 1808 and spread rapidly in all directions, operating 58 schools and asylums in 1850. In Kentucky the Sisters of Loretto were founded in 1812, the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth in 1813, and soon after a community of Dominicans was established there. The Religious of the Sacred Heart under Blessed Philippine-Rose Duchesne came to New Orleans in 1818 and later settled at St. Charles, Mo. The Sisters of Mercy opened a school in Chicago in 1846.

The Franciscan Sisters labored particularly in the Middle West, the Sisters of the Holy Cross in Indiana, the School Sisters of Notre Dame in the East, and the Sisters of the Holy Names in Washington and Oregon. Other teaching orders of nuns are various branches of the Sisters of Charity, the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet who labored early in Missouri, the Sisters of Providence, of Notre Dame de Namur, of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, of St. Joseph, of Loretto, of the Precious Blood, of the Divine Compassion, of the Incarnate Word, of the Sacred Heart of Mary, of the Holy Child Jesus, of Notre Dame, Benedictine Sisters, and Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament caring exclusively for the Indians and Negroes.

Today Catholic education in the United States is a monument to these holy women. Notable names are many, among them Mothers Seton, Spalding, Angela, Guerin, Fournier, Clarke, Warde, Drexel, Duchesne.

Secondary schools for boys were founded by the Brothers of the Christian Schools, Xaverian Brothers and Brothers of the Holy Cross as well as by the Jesuits, Dominicans, Franciscans, Benedictines and other teaching orders. The nuns conducted academies for girls. And in the late nineteenth century secondary education flourished.

The oldest Catholic university in the United States is Georgetown, founded in 1789. St. Louis was founded in 1828 and the Catholic University at Washington in 1889. St. Mary's Seminary, founded in 1791, is the oldest seminary for priests. Now there are over 300 colleges and seminaries for men.

College education for women came later. St. Elizabeth's College, Convent Station, N. J., founded 1899, is the oldest Catholic college for women. There are now 116 such colleges in the United States.

Legal Status of Catholic Education

Schools established and administered by private corporations or individuals are legally separate from the public school system though subject to regulation by civil authority. Their right to exist, free from unreasonable interference, is generally recognized and expressly confirmed in several important law cases. Public funds cannot be used to support denominational schools, but such schools are not taxed.

Bible Reading and Religious Instruction in Public Schools

Bible reading in the public schools and the religious instruction of public school pupils is obligatory or specifically permitted in some states. In at least twenty-eight states school time is actually being used for religious instruction. Week-day religion classes for Catholic public school children have been provided in some forty dioceses. In some

Education is compulsory in all states and the period of attendance is the same for private as for public schools. In some states inspection and supervision of private schools and their approval for compulsory education purposes is required. The general curriculum is regulated by law in most states, as are the teaching of civics and the Constitution and the use of the English language.

twenty dioceses religious vacation schools are held for public school children, from four to six weeks in the summertime under the supervision of the Catholic Sisterhoods, Catholic teachers in the public schools and organizations such as the Catholic Instruction League and the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

A Federal Department of Education

For more than a decade agitation has been rife in the United States both in favor of and in opposition to a Federal Department of Education. Proponents of the proposed plan make a point of standardization and look to an increase of appropriations for general and specific purposes through the medium of a special organization. Opponents of such an establishment point out the inherent unconstitutionality of such a step which, they argue, would encroach upon the administration of the several states and would gradually assume to itself powers which even its proponents are unwilling now to concede to it. Catholic educators everywhere have opposed the erection of the department.

The original proposal was the Smith-Towner bill in 1913, which provided for federal aid to the states and wide federal powers of interference in local education. Private universities, state colleges, etc., opposed the measure, causing various amendments to be added to it. The National Education Association favored it. The Reed-Curtis bill was a modified proposal but also undesirable. According to Archbishop Hanna: "The Reed-Curtis bill would establish an educational bureaucracy in Washington, as well as a great politico-educational machine, with all its attendant evils.... What education needs is local stimulation and local support. It does not need, and should not have, federal control."

In 1923 President Hoover appointed the Advisory Committee on Education to study the relation of the Federal Government to education in the various states. In 1932 the Advisory Committee submitted a majority report to the Secretary of the Interior recommending a Department of Education so constituted as to be a national clearing-house for information. The principle of local control of the schools was upheld nevertheless. Drs. Pace and Johnson, the two Roman Catholic members of the Advisory Committee, submitted a minority report opposing the erection of a Federal Department.

Federal Aid and State Aid

The Advisory Committee on Education, created by President Roosevelt in 1936 to study the relation of the Federal Government to the support of education in the United States, made its report in Feb., 1938, after two years' intensive study. The Committee advocated continuance of federal subsidies now being made and recommended new grants of $72,000,000 increasing to $199,000,000 by the year 1944-45, to be divided among 6 major funds: (1) general aid fund for the current operating and maintenance expenses of elementary and secondary schools; (2) preparation of teachers and other educational personnel; (3) construction of school buildings; (4) improved administration of state departments of education; (5) civic, general and vocational part-time adult educational activities; (6) rural library service. A recanvass in 5 years was recommended.

According to Dr. George Johnson, director of the Department of Education of the N. C. W. C., and a member of the Committee, there are large areas in the United States which cannot support a decent system of schools and unless federal aid be granted great numbers of children will lack adequate education. The report would distribute money on the basis of need and would strictly maintain local control. Also "in view of the fact that non-public schools are saving the nation such great sums of money, the Committee recommends that where federal aid is used for such incidental services as the provision of reading materials, the transportation of pupils, the care of health, and scholarships, it shall be made available to all the children of the nation whether they are in public schools or not."

did the Thomas Bill of 1939. On April 7, 1941, Senators Thomas and Harrison introduced Senate Bill 1313, entitled "A bill to strengthen the national defense and promote the general welfare through the appropriation of funds to assist the States and Territories in meeting financial emergencies in education and in reducing inequalities of educational opportunities."

On April 29, 1941, Dr. George Johnson, directed by the Administrative Committee of Bishops of the N. C. W. C., addressed a letter to Senator Thomas, Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, expressing their opposition to the bill in its present form. The letter pointed out that it would introduce the principle of permanent federal aid to education involving a degree of federal supervision and control that may eventually "destroy that local autonomy which to date has kept our schools free."

Dr. Johnson declared that religious freedom means not only freedom of religious worship but to provide means of education that accord with the dictates of conscience. But, "government makes it impossible for citizens to exercise their right of free choice in matters educational by creating, as the defense program does in many areas, a situation in which it is impossible for Catholic children depending solely on the meager resources of their parents to obtain a Catholic education."

Participation by Catholic children in state educational expenditures is limited to: free bus transportation, provided by law in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Washington; textbooks supplied in Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oregon and West Virginia.

Organization of the Catholic School System

The Catholic school system includes five classes of institutions: parochial or elementary, secondary, normal, seminary and university.

Institutions in the seminary division are of two classes, preparatory and major. A national summary follows:

THE CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY OF AMERICA

Formal approval was given by Leo XIII, in 1887, for the foundation in the United States of a university under Catholic auspices, and in 1889 he approved the constitutions. Under the supreme authority of the Holy See, the governing power of the University resides in the episcopate of the United States, and by their delegation in the board of trustees composed of bishops, priests and laymen.

Washington was selected as the site, sixty acres of land purchased and the university incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia. Rt. Rev. John J. Keane, then Bishop of Richmond, was made Rector. Miss Mary Caldwell, of Newport, R. I., donated $300,000 for the establishment of the School of Sacred Sciences, opened in Caldwell Hall, November 13, 1889. Msgr. James McMahon, of New York City, donated property valued at $400,000 and the McMahon Hall for the Schools of Philosophy and Social Sciences was opened in 1895.

The School of Law was separated from the School of Social Sciences in 1896, and the latter formed into the School of Philosophy. In 1923, the Department of Canon Law was taken from the School of Sacred Sciences and made a distinct School of Canon Law.

In 1929-30, a Graduate School of Arts and Sciences was organized and undergraduate departments—the Schools of Philosophy, Letters and Sciences—were consolidated in the College of Arts and Sciences and in the School of Engineering.

An important factor in the development of the university, now a center of learning for laity, clergy and religious, has been the affiliation with it of various institutions.

On Oct. 12, 1938, the university inaugurated the celebration of its golden jubilee year. An Apostolic Letter of Pope Pius XI on the occasion lauded the achievements of the university during "a half-century of fruitful labor," and spoke of its future responsibilities. In compliance with his wishes therein expressed the bishops inaugurated a nation-wide program of education in the principles of democracy and the Catholic University also sponsored a National Crusade for God in Government.

On Nov. 13, 1939, fifty years after the first 11 professors and 42 students assembled in Caldwell Hall, the university with impressive ceremony brought to a close its jubilee year. Pope Pius XII broadcast his felicitations and Apostolic Blessing and said: "Our chief hope, after God, rests in schools of Christian culture, old and new, among which stands your Catholic University as a typical example, assigning, in its zeal for truth, the correct place in its program to the natural sciences and metaphysics, mind and heart, past and present, reason and revelation."

Today the university has more than 270 members of the faculty and 2,000 students, and has increased its holdings to 250 acres.

THE NATIONAL CATHOLIC EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

The purpose of the National Catholic Educational Association, a voluntary organization formed in 1904, is to unite the Catholic educators of the country, to bring understanding among them, and to encourage the spirit of mutual helpfulness in order that the Catholic educational interests of the country may be safeguarded and promoted.

The Association comprises the following departments and sections: Seminary Department; College and University Department; Secondary School Department; School Superintendents' Department; Parish School Department; Minor Seminary Section; Deaf-Mute Section; Blind Education Section. The College and University Department has 5 regional units: New England; Eastern; Southern; Midwest; Western. The Secondary-School Department has 4 regional units, and is to have 6: Eastern; Southern; Central; California; Northwestern (being organized); New England (not yet organized).

National meetings are held annually, thus affording each department and section the opportunity for exchange of views and experiences, and discussion of their respective problems. Regional unit meetings are held during the year.

All Catholic colleges are eligible to membership. Types of membership include: first, institutional membership for colleges and universities; second, institutional membership for secondary schools; third, individual sustaining membership; fourth, individual membership. At the close of the fiscal ending June 30, 1940, membership totaled 3,425.

The official organ of the Association is "The National Catholic Educational Association Bulletin," published quarterly. The August number is the Report of the Proceedings and Addresses of the Annual Meeting. The February, May and November numbers are pamphlets.

The president general is the Most Rev. John B. Peterson, Bishop of Manchester. Vice-presidents general are: Rev. John B. Furay, S. J.; Rev. William F. Cunningham, C. S. C.; Rt. Rev. Joseph V. S. McClancy; Rev. Paul E. Campbell; Rev. J. J. Clifford, S. J.; Brother Eugene A. Paulin, S. M. The secretary general is the Rev. George Johnson, and the treasurer general is the Rt. Rev. Richard J. Quinlan. The general committees are: Advisory; Finance; Program; and Publication. The national headquarters of the Association is at 1312 Massachusetts Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the National Catholic Educational Association was held in Chicago, Ill., April 6-9, 1942. The Most Rev. Samuel A. Stritch, Archbishop of Chicago, opened the meeting by welcoming the assembled 5,000 Catholic educators. Archbishop Stritch gave the delegates the keynote of the conference by asking the question: "Where are the promises of our educators of yesterday?" He pointed out that the philosophy of aggressor nations is the same as that taught in public universities of this era, and asserted: "The very terror of this catastrophe is not the work of ignorant people.... The necessity of Christ in the schools is well proved in the world events, and without Christian support, freedom has no foundation...."

The Most Rev. John B. Peterson read a letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt on the occasion of the convention, in which he praised the N. C. E. A. Conference for its interest in this grave crisis.

Rev. Dr. George Johnson, secretary-general, said: "Catholic education has a vital stake in the outcome of this war.... We must win the war. Catholic education must enlist wholeheartedly with the war effort. Though we thrive best in peace, we must gird for war—even in war certain values must be preserved."

Discussing the missionary problem, the Very Rev. Msgr. Edward A. Freking, secretary-treasurer of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, spoke of the drastic cut in missionary personnel due to conditions of war in European countries, and declared that it is up to the United States to solve the problem, to furnish men for the missions.

Women's colleges in relation to defense work was considered by the Rev. Francis J. Furey, president of Immaculata College, in his paper, "Salvaging Permanent Values for Women's Colleges." Pleading for an effort to preserve the identity of these colleges, Fr. Furey called in a special way for the deepening of the knowledge and love of God and His Blessed Mother.

The committee reported on the intensive educational courses and civilian defense activities of women's colleges in the emergency, and considered such items as the conservation of materials, making of surgical dressings, donation of blood banks, sale of defense stamps and bonds, collecting of reading material for the U. S. O., hospitality for service men, distribution of Catholic articles, kits for chaplains, daily adoration before the Blessed Sacrament and prayers for peace.

The Department of Education of the N. C. W. C. reported an increase of enrollment in Catholic colleges in the past 20 years to 378.9 per cent. The enrollment climbed consistently — with the exception of the period 1932-1934 — from 33,789 in 1920 to 161,886 in 1940. In 1920 the survey reported 130 Catholic universities and colleges in the United States. In 1940 there was an increase of 48.5 per cent giving a total of 193 Catholic institutions. Of the institutions in existence in 1940 there were, for men, 24 universities, 45 senior colleges and 7 junior colleges; and for women, one university, 92 senior colleges and 24 junior colleges.

THE FRANCISCAN EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

(From the Annual Reports of the Conference)

Among the important Catholic Educational Associations existing today in the United States, the Franciscan Educational Conference takes a high place. Its influence has not been confined to this country for its great work has been recognized from the very beginning, and in Europe, especially among the Franciscans, it has been followed as a pattern to a great extent.

Origin — The forerunner of the Conference was the Conference of Seraphic Colleges, the first meeting of which was held in 1914. A few years later, the president of this Conference, Rev. Thomas Plassmann, O. F. M., began a movement to broaden the Conference's field of activity. His efforts met with the approval of the provincial superiors. The project of bringing about a greater unity of action and sympathetic co-operation among Franciscan educators of this country, and of uniting in some form of voluntary association the many Friars engaged in educational work was successfully carried into effect by members of the Order of Friars Minor. The new association, the Franciscan Educational Conference, held its first meeting in St. Louis, June 29, 1919. Rev. Thomas Plassmann, O. F. M., who is president of St. Bonaventure's College, Allegany, N. Y., was the chairman of this meeting. Before it closed he was elected president of the Conference and has held this position since.

The Conference is held annually under the auspices of the provincials of the three branches of the Franciscans: Order of Friars Minor, Order of Capuchins and Order of Minor Conventuals. The Capuchins were affiliated with the Conference in 1921, the Conventuals in 1922.

Purposes — The purposes and advantages are: To bring together in mutual consultation and co-operation professors of the different departments, so as to reach a complete understanding as to the exact scope of each department, and to reconstruct the Franciscan educational system on a scientific basis of progress and efficiency, to keep the professors constantly in touch with educational work, activities and policies; to put the Franciscan ideals continually before the lecturers and to look back to Franciscan antiquity. The advantages are that the unification of Franciscan educational efforts will stimulate and extend the varied activities of the Friars and enable them to contribute their humble share to the advancement of learning in accordance with the ideals and traditions of the once eminent Franciscan school.

The Conference has frequently been favored with the expression of confidence on the part of the highest superiors in Rome and also continues to enjoy the generous patronage of the several provincial superiors at home.

Publications — Printed copies of the papers and discussions on economics can be obtained by writing to St. Anthony's Guild, Paterson, N. J. Beginning with 1941, the "Report of the Franciscan Educational Conference" has been published as the fourth number of the "Franciscan Studies," a Franciscan quarterly review recently introduced as the official organ of the Conference. Other publications offered by the Conference include books treating the following subjects:

Education: Textbooks and Methods of Study; Classical Education; Franciscan Education; Religious Instruction; Seraphic Seminaries.

History: Study of History; Franciscans in American History.

Literature: The Classics; Modern Catholic English Literature.

Philosophy: Franciscan School of Philosophy; Catholic Philosophy; Psychology; Modern Thought; Sociology and Social Progress.

Theology: Study of Sacred Scripture; Ascetical Theology; Franciscan School of Theology; Liturgy.

Books have also been published on the Study of Languages, Missionaries and Preachers, Science, and the Youth Movement.

The twenty-fourth annual meeting of the Franciscan Educational Conference was held at Quincy College, Quincy, Ill., June 15-17, 1942. The following officers were elected: Very Rev. Thomas Plassmann, O. F. M., president; Rev. Basil Heiser, O. M. C., vice-president; Rev. Sebastian Miklas, O. F. M. Cap., Secretary; and Rev. Marion Habig, O. F. M., editor of "Franciscan Studies."

The theme discussed at the 1942 meeting was: "Basic Trends of the Franciscan School." The Franciscan Order has contributed much to the advancement of philosophy and theology, impressing on these subjects a stamp characteristic of the spirit of St. Francis. It was the endeavor of the delegates at the Conference to point out the doctrines and ideas fostered and developed by early Franciscan scholars. Some of the subjects brought up for consideration were: Franciscan Spirituality; The Fundamental Lines in Franciscan Teaching; The Metaphysics of Duns Scotus; Voluntarism in Franciscan Philosophy; The Primacy of Charity in Franciscan Theology; Franciscan Christology; The Personality of the Seraphic Doctor; and The Personality of the Subtle Doctor. The scholarly research expended on these various titles opened up a treasure of thought from the writings of St. Francis, St. Bonaventure and Duns Scotus.

The members of the Conference heartily endorsed the resolutions of the committee, namely, to make Franciscan sources more available to scholars and students in general; to popularize the Franciscan spirit of thought in theology and philosophy; and to gather bibliographical information concerning Franciscan works. A Bibliographical Institute of Franciscan Incunabula was suggested to the delegates and approved by them.

The year 1943 marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the annual conference, and the convention this year commemorates the occasion.

WORKERS' SCHOOLS

Schools for Catholic workingmen are a practical development of the labor encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII and Pope Pius XI. In "Quadragesimo Anno" Pope Pius writes: "It belongs to the Bishops to permit Catholic workingmen to join these unions [neutral unions, such as we have in America], where they judge that circumstances render it necessary and there appears no danger for religion, observing however the rules and precautions recommended by Our Predecessor of saintly memory, Pius X. Among these precautions the first and most important is that, side by side with these trade unions, there must always be associations which aim at giving their members a thorough religious and moral training, that these in turn may impart to the labor unions to which they belong the upright spirit which should direct their entire conduct."

These schools, therefore, have been organized for the intensive training of Catholic workingmen in Catholic principles, for their own good, and so that they in turn may teach others. Some of the schools are under the auspices of a national organization, the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists, while others have been set up by diocesan authorities, colleges and other institutions.

The first workers' school was established by the A. C. T. U., in New York, November, 1937. The sessions were held in the Woolworth Building, branch of Fordham University. On January 4, 1938, the Crown Heights School of Catholic Workmen opened its doors in Brooklyn under the direction of Fr. William Smith, S. J.

The students of these schools are men and women of all trades and occupations. Some of the schools permit only members of unions to enroll. Most of the schools are free, but a few have found it necessary to charge nominal fees for books and other expenses. Classes are held at night. Non-Catholics are not excluded from the schools.

The following courses are offered by the A. C. T. U. schools: (1) Trade Union Practices and Parliamentary Procedure, to give the workers an understanding of the way to conduct meetings, propose and oppose motions, elect officers, and other training that will help Catholic workingmen to take an active part in union affairs. (2) Labor Ethics, to teach the rights and duties of both employers and employees in relation to each other and to society, based on the Christian concept of the dignity of man and of his relations toward God and his fellow man. (3) Labor Relations, to acquaint the men with the legislation set forth in the various Labor Acts, together with a study of cases. (4) Labor History, to give them a full perspective of their place in the history of labor, to show them what progress has been made, along with the mistakes of the past. (5) Economics, to show the place of labor and industry in the life of the nation, and to study the problems connected with the producing and using of goods.

This curriculum is designed for schools that are limited to members of trade unions. In other schools, where the union card is not a prerequisite for admission, less emphasis is laid on the relation of labor problems to the union man.

The Crown Heights School has a slightly different program, which may be described as follows: (1) A series of talks given by labor leaders. (2) A class dealing with the Message of the Hierarchy on Social Action. (3) One on the Essentials of Sound Citizenship. (4) Another on Current Events. (5) Public Speaking and Parliamentary Procedure. (6) Labor Ethics. In this school classes begin and end with a prayer to "Christ the Worker," a devotion popularized by Fr. Wm. Smith, S. J.

Special emphasis is laid upon Public Speaking and Parliamentary Procedure in the Catholic Labor Schools. If the men are not trained to be articulate, they will not be able effectively to present the Catholic social message to their fellow workers. Ousting the Communist minority from control wherever they have gained a foothold, also depends upon Catholic workers trained for leadership.

The rapid spread of workers' schools throughout the country indicates the eagerness of the Catholic workmen of America for such an apostolate. Military service and the longer and more irregular hours of the war industries will undoubtedly notably affect the registration. However the spirit of this apostolate must continue to function if Catholic principles of social justice are to play an effective part in the post-war labor adjustments.

THE EDUCATION OF RETARDED CHILDREN

Every pupil has distinctive characteristics and qualities which constitute his individuality. While the racial, physical and social differences are significant, the educator is chiefly concerned with differences in mental capabilities and in the capacity to learn. These differences between the best and the poorest pupils in a class are considerable. Practically every classroom contains one or more pupils who, due to lack of mental ability, are unable to make normal progress. To each of these pupils education must offer the direction, guidance and special work which he requires in order to improve himself to the maximum of his capacities. While there are many agencies engaged in direction and guidance of these mentally retarded children, such as Catholic Charities, Public Welfare, the Child Center of Catholic University and other Children's Clinics, there are only seven schools under Catholic auspices for them, and this despite the fact that there are several hundred thousand backward children in the United States. In these schools an integrated program, based on scientific methods, is provided for physical, mental and moral training of children who cannot derive benefit from the regular school education. The curriculum embraces the academic subjects, crafts, physical training and the industrial and household arts.

The methods used are much the same as those used in ordinary classes except that more emphasis is placed on the concrete; kindergarten practice persists over a longer period of time; experiences are more actively brought into the lives of these children so lacking in initiative of their own.

The children are placed, after careful study, into small groups. In the special classes no attempt is made to bring all the children of a group to one certain level. Through careful observation and intimate contact with the child, a relative course of training is adopted. Usually the children are grouped on the basis of achievement level in each subject. The length of time spent in any field of activity depends upon various factors: age, early training, home environment, mental ability and the environment which the child will probably enter in later life.

Adequate recreational facilities are provided and in this environment of work and play, school competition among equals becomes possible. The schools under Catholic auspices engaged in this work are the following:

St. Colletta's Academy, Jefferson, Wis. Sister M. Anastasia, O. S. F., Directress.

The Wharton Memorial Institute, Port Jefferson, Long Island, N. Y. Ven. Mother Lucia, Superior.

St. Vincent's School, Santa Barbara, Calif. Sister Mary, Superior.

St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts, 4801 Sargent Rd., N. E., Washington, D. C. Sisters of St. Benedict.

St. Mary of Providence Institute, 4242 North Austin Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Sister Clare, Superior.

St. Michael's Industrial School (for boys), Hoban Heights, Pa. Rev. Hammond, in charge.

St. Anthony's School, Comstock, Mich. Sister M. Carmel, S. S. J., Superior.

CATHOLIC WORK AMONG THE BLIND

Catholic Pioneers in the Field — The example of her Founder has ever led the Catholic Church to give of her best to the world's unfortunates. The severe handicap of loss of sight has continually recommended to her boundless charity the countless persons who have been forced to go through life without ever seeing the grandeur of a sunset or the exquisite beauty of a flower. Her hand cannot always lift the veil, as could that of the Saviour, from darkened eyes. But what comforts she can give, she gives always gladly and lavishly.

Education of the blind as a class did not come until 1784. It was then that Valentin Haüy (1745-1822), a Catholic, began the movement that has brought about the establishment, in all civilized countries, of institutions of learning and industrial training schools for the blind. No one before him had ever tried seriously to make printing available for the blind, or to establish libraries of literature printed in relief. Though his system of raised printing is no longer used, the world will ever remember him as the man who started the blind along the way that has led to a more normal and a much more complete life.

Louis Braille (1809-1852), also a Catholic, is well-known as the originator of the raised printing which bears his name. Blind himself from his third year, Braille realized the inadequacy of the line-letter systems of raised printing then in use. He reduced a twelve-point system to his own six-point printing which was simple and easy to learn. Though since slightly modified and changed in various countries, his system of letters, numbers, and musical notes is basically the same now as the day he devised it.

Catholic Schools for the Blind in the United States — In the United States today there are three Catholic schools devoted exclusively to the care and instruction of the blind.

The Lavelle School for the Blind

in New York City is conducted by the Sisters of St. Dominic. A diocesan institute with an enrollment of 42, it provides for the education of boys and girls up to the age of sixteen. Those children who have reached high school age continue to reside at the institute but commute each day to the various schools of the city for their advanced education.

St. Joseph's Home and School for the Blind in Jersey City, N. J., is conducted by the Sisters of St. Joseph of Newark. It is primarily an adult institution, the only one of its kind in the United States. Approximately 170 persons are cared for. Connected with the adult institution is a grammar school. Pupils who fail to qualify for high-school work are transferred to the permanent workshop in the men's or the women's house. The school work is carried on by four departments: literature, music, manual training and physical training.

St. Mary's Institute for the Blind in Lansdale, Pa., is also conducted by the Sisters of St. Joseph of Newark. This diocesan institute, with an enrollment of 35, provides both a grammar-school and a high-school course. It is the only school for Catholics which offers a high-school training. Adults and children who wish to remain after the completion of their education are welcome to make their home at the institute.

All three schools follow the same curriculum as the parochial schools in their respective districts. There is, however, the additional subject of Braille which makes the first years of study much more difficult for the blind than for the average-sighted child. The children are taught the touch system of typing as soon as possible. Some have begun typing when only six years old. Knowing the touch system enables the blind children to type their examinations and to correspond with their relatives and friends, most of whom know no Braille. Mathematics is taught by means of the Taylor arithmetic slate which is a very complicated system of numbering. Raised maps are used in teaching geography. Throughout the grades, music is taught. The manual arts are used extensively for tactual training. The industrial departments provide many and varied types of the handicraft arts: knitting, crocheting, handloom weaving, bead-work, basketry, wood-work, leathercraft, chair-caning, mop-making, rug-weaving, etc. The obvious purpose of this training is to provide, where possible, an occupation in after-life which will enable the blind to earn a livelihood.

There is no greater problem for the blind student aspiring to higher education than the lack of Braille texts corresponding to state or diocesan courses of study. Despite this severe handicap, blind persons have qualified for almost every type of occupation which does not absolutely require the use of the eyes. Among the more common avocations are teaching, law, journalism, braille, telegraphy, dictaphone operating, insurance, and the management of candy and stationery stores. It is believed that radio work will open an extensive field of action to competent blind persons.

Catholic Library for the Blind
— The Xavier Free Publication Society for the Blind is an organization which aims to place at the disposal of the blind throughout the United States and Canada some of the choicest books covering a wide variety of subjects, including those of a religious nature. With the help of its volunteer transcribers, the Society has been able to establish a sizable lending library. It has placed books in more than forty state, city or institute libraries for general and free circulation among the blind. From the Society's own central library books are sent to every part of the country. Not only are books loaned free of charge to the blind, but the Society's monthly magazine in Braille is sent gratis to any blind applicant.

A beginning has been made, too, in providing talking books for the blind. A book of 60,000 words can be published on twelve double-face disc records. To date, the Society has recorded the four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. The remainder of the New Testament and other standard Catholic works will follow.

The International Federation of Catholic Alumnae has organized a committee for the specific purpose of functioning as an auxiliary of the Xavier Society. The I. F. C. A. has no direct contact with blind persons. Rather, it assists the blind indirectly by transcribing books in Braille and by contributing financially to the support of the Xavier Society.

Magazine — With the September 1940 issue, the "Catholic Digest" began regular publication in Braille. Printed in the so-called one and a half-point characters by the National Braille Press, Inc., of Boston, its contents are identical with the ink-print book. Arrangements for production were made through the Catholic Guild for the Blind of Boston, and 1,000 copies were sent free of charge to institutions and individuals. Continued success of the project depended upon voluntary contributions.

New York's Catholic Center for the Blind is a home for blind working girls. At the present time it has accommodation for 40 girls. Besides providing the comforts and conveniences of a home for these girls, the Center helps secure work for them when they become unemployed, cares for those who are no longer able to work, and gives every possible material aid to lighten the burden brought by blindness to its charges. The urgent need of erecting a home for destitute blind cannot be met because of present limited facilities. The directors of the Center hope to raise sufficient funds for a new building to care for these destitute blind which they are at present unable to accommodate.

work began about 1936. The Guild is an organization of priests and laymen who offer their time and financial support to the blind who live at their own homes. Chief among the many objectives of the Guild is the care of the blind in a spiritual way. To this end, retreats are conducted periodically by several of the five different units which go to make up the Guild. Persons unable to give of their time to the blind may assist them by membership dues. The money thus obtained is used to help the blind by providing them with the necessities of life, and, wherever possible, with a few of its luxuries. By devoting one or more days a week to the blind, the active members of the Guild have helped immensely in brightening the otherwise drab days of those destined to go through life without the use of their eyes.

Dog Guides for Poor Blind Boys and Girls are being provided by the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil, Auxiliary Bishop of Chicago. The project is under the care of the Catholic Youth Organization. Some two hundred dogs are now being trained. Children, with the help of these expert guides, can begin to live almost the normal life of a seeing child. With dogs to serve as eyes, these children have one more link added to the chain which binds their lives to that of the seeing world in which they must live.

Prevention of Blindness is receiving added attention from Catholic educators. Parochial schools in St. Louis, Mo., Albany, Buffalo, and Troy, N. Y., provide sight-saving classes. These special classes are not for children who are blind, but for those who have seriously defective vision. Large type printing in textbooks, heavy chalk and pencils, more carefully planned lighting facilities, continual medical care, and the like help preserve what sight the child has and frequently result in the restoration of normal vision.

The Catholic University of America has made frequent use of publications and other material offered by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla, S. J., Dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, is a member of this organization's Board of Directors. He and his associates have been active in the field of prevention of blindness for almost ten years.

Non-Sectarian National Organizations — Mention should here be made of two national organizations that have done outstanding work in the field of blind education. Catholic educators and social workers among the blind have profited greatly from the assistance given by both groups. The facilities of both are at the disposal of anyone interested in the care and education of blind persons, as well as of persons who have defective vision.

The American Foundation for the Blind in New York City was incorporated as a national agency in 1921. The purposes of this organization are to collect and disseminate information regarding all phases of work for the blind; to promote state and federal legislation in behalf of those without sight; to arrange for the establishment of needed agencies for the blind throughout the country; to promote the training and placement of well-qualified, professional workers for the blind; to develop mechanical appliances for the blind, such as the Braille typewriter and the Talking Book; and to assist in increasing the efficiency of work for the blind in all particulars. The Foundation is supported in part by income from endowment, but largely by annual contributions from individuals interested in the blind.

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness with headquarters in New York City began its independent existence in 1915. The objects of the Society as stated in its by-laws are: (1) to endeavor to ascertain, through study and investigation, any causes, whether direct or indirect, which may result in blindness or impaired vision;

(2) to advocate measures which shall lead to the elimination of such causes; (3) to disseminate knowledge concerning all matters pertaining to the care and use of the eyes. It is fundamentally a lay organization, the activities of which are based on approved teachings of the medical profession. Its responsibility is to secure such scientific knowledge regarding the prevention of blindness and conservation of vision as is susceptible of sociologic interpretation, and to promote such social action, whether by private or by public agencies, as will enable the person to prevent ocular difficulties whenever this is possible and to receive necessary care and treatment when ocular troubles exist.

CATHOLIC WORK AMONG THE DEAF

The Catholic Church, ever mindful of the sayings of Christ, the Divine Teacher, has always attached a practical meaning to that revolutionary sentence: "Amen I say to you, as long as you did it to one of My least brethren, you did it to Me" (Matthew, xxv, 40). The Church has resolutely set herself the task of imitating Christ Who was the first among men to show real mercy to the deaf. It was common practice before Christ's time to abandon deaf or dumb children to the mercy of the elements, to throw them over a cliff or into the sea. The Justinian Code in Roman days took away deaf persons' civil rights, not even allowing them to make a will. Roman law later provided that persons "unable to manage their property owing to deafness, dumbness, blindness or some serious chronic disease, must apply for a curator." The survival of this law of guardianship has persisted through French, German and Spanish Law.

But even with the best of purely natural help, the condition of the deaf remained pitiful. Walled in by silence, solitary, ignorant, unable to communicate with his kind except by signs and harsh cries, treated as an outcast of society, a shame and a burden to his family, shut out from the enjoyment of refined society, unable to earn a decent living, and ignorant of religious truths — he grew up little better than the animals, dwarfed in soul, stunted in intellect, caring only for the physical comforts, envious of the more fortunate, malicious, spiteful, bitter and consumed with silent discontent for the fate which had treated him so harshly. His lot indeed was a hard one. Even if his mind were schooled in the rudiment of knowledge and his hand trained to some useful occupation, his state still remained deplorable. For, unless religion could give him fortitude to bear his cross in patience, unless it could teach him to make a virtue of necessity, his affliction would almost certainly bring him to the black depths of despair.

Catholic Beginnings — Christ, our Great Exemplar, performed miracles in His day to help the deaf. He has cured them, too, through the centuries at the request of His saints. We are not here so immediately concerned with the miraculous as with the natural, and with the spirit which underlies both — the spirit of Christ — which has led countless Catholic men and women to devote their time and talents, to spend their lives, in the service of the deaf.

The Benedictine Order was the first to bring to the deaf a scientific training. In other words, the Benedictines were the first to attempt a system of education which attacked the problem of lack of hearing with a view to supplying the defect. They began their work in the 16th century.

Padre Pedro Ponce de Leon, O. S. B., born in Valladolid in 1520, a teacher at San Salvador at Ora, is said to have been the first teacher of the deaf. He taught several children, using chiefly the "Oral Method."

About fifty years after Padre

Ponce, another Spanish priest, Padre Juan Pablo Bonet (1579-1633) had a number of deaf pupils under his care. He used a manual sign alphabet, invented a system of visible signs representing to the sight the sound of words, and gave a description of the position of the vocal organs in the pronunciation of each letter. His work contained many valuable suggestions which have proved useful to modern teachers of articulation and lip-reading.

St. Francis de Sales, in the first years of the 17th century, instructed for confession and communion a deaf-mute whom he had in his retinue. He was made the Patron Saint of the Deaf by Pope Pius IX.

The celebrated Jesuit naturalist and physician, Lana Terzi (1631-1687) considered the education of the deaf in his "Prodromo dell Arte Maestra." It consists in this, that the deaf first learn to perceive the disposition of the organs of speech in the formation of sounds, and then imitate these sounds and recognize speech in others by reading their lips.

The practical utility of pantomime in the education of the deaf was not fully realized before the days of Abbe Charles Michel de L'Epee, who was born at Versailles in 1712. In the course of his priestly labors L'Epee made the acquaintance of two deaf-mute Sisters who had been educated by a Father Vanin by means of pictures. On the death of the latter their education came to an end, and L'Epee resolved to continue their training. He met deaf persons among the poorer classes and to these he devoted his time and his fortune. He first tried the different methods which had been used in previous years, methods using signs instead of words for conveying ideas to the mind. Finally, the idea that words are merely connatural gestures indicative of objects, he hit upon the idea of using a sign-language as a means of communication. Since words are but the conventional signs of our ideas, why could he not substitute conventional sign gestures? He rightly concluded that the natural language of signs which had come to be used by the deaf even without previous instruction would form the best basis for his system. All the needs of grammatical syntax were not met by natural signs, so he invented signs for them until he had a systematized vocabulary of considerable size. Arbitrary signs he used only where natural signs could not be had. Both the book which he wrote and the school which he opened in Paris in 1755 (the first school for the deaf) have brought him international recognition. L'Epee died in 1789, and Abbe Sicard took up the work so successfully inaugurated by his predecessor.

Catholic Work in the United States—Education of the deaf in the United States began in the year 1817 when Abbe Sicard, successor to the Abbe de L'Epee, allowed his best pupil, Laurent Clerc, to come to this country with Dr. Thomas Gallaudet a non-Catholic minister who had gone to Europe to study methods of deaf education. Most Americans viewed this new phase of education with wonderment: many of them looked on with sceptical eye declaring that any effort to educate the deaf was doomed to failure. Once it had been proven that the deaf were amenable to education, schools were erected in the different states for their training.

To Bishop Rosati of St. Louis and to the Sisters of St. Joseph belong the credit of founding the first Catholic institution for deaf-mutes in the United States. In 1836, at the invitation of that apostolic prelate, Sister St. John and Sister Celestine came from Lyons, France, where they had been trained for the work and opened a school in the city of Carondelet. It was later transferred to St. Louis (in 1861) where it was known as St. Brigid's Deaf-Mute Institution. Other schools for the Catholic deaf were established in Buffalo, New York City, etc. At the present time there are twelve such schools under Catholic auspices.

Catholic educators of the deaf today insist that the parents of deaf children send their children to the Catholic schools, rather than to "any of the so-called non-sectarian schools in which, as experience has shown, there is great danger to their precious faith. About two-thirds of our Catholic deaf are lost to the Faith because they are obliged to attend these so-called non-sectarian institutions owing to the woeful lack of schools under Catholic auspices."

Systems of Education—Deaf children cannot be educated as other children; hence schools must employ special methods of instruction. All communication with the deaf, and consequently, all their instruction, must be in visual forms of which five are possible: sign language, finger spelling, writing, lip reading, and a new method depending largely on vibration.

Of these, the sign language is the easiest and the most natural. This because it is a purely visible language, appealing directly to the eye. It is as much a real language as French or English or German. It is, in fact, one of the oldest of living languages, as exemplified in the hieroglyphics of the Egyptians and the famous pantomimes of the Greeks and Romans, as well as in the picturesque gestures of the North American Indians. The sign language is a comprehensive and effective combination of pantomime, facial expression, and gesture. St. Augustine tells us: "A sign is the thing which, over and above the impression it makes on the senses, causes something else to come into the mind as a consequence of itself: as when we see a footprint we conclude that an animal whose footprint this is has passed by: and when we see smoke we know that there is fire beneath. . . . Natural signs are those which, apart from any intention or desire of our using them as signs, do yet lead to the knowledge of something else, for example, smoke, when it indicates fire. . . . Conventional signs are those which living beings mutually exchange for the purpose of showing, as well as they can, their emotions, or their perceptions, or their thoughts. Nor is there any reason for giving a sign except the desire of bringing forth and conveying into another's mind what the giver of the sign has in his own mind."

"Thought may precede language in definite and detailed imagery and then be translated into language as a separate process." While the young deaf child may not know language, nevertheless he makes a substitute for it from the storehouse of his experience. He reacts to his environment by means of gestures. Young children learn signs with amazing rapidity because this knowledge furnishes them with the means of communication. It is a truism that education must begin with the child's experience. Therefore, pioneer workers among the deaf began with a language the child understood. In the early days of deaf-mute education signs were considered the aide-de-camp of every teacher of the deaf. For about fifty years this method has been successfully used in the American schools.

Next to sign language, finger spelling is the most facile means of communication among the deaf. Finger spelling resembles writing, in so far as it is a word language whose symbols are written in the air instead of on paper.

Articulation, or the teaching of speech, commonly called the "Oral Method," was first taught by means of "Visible Speech" symbols in the United States. Alexander Graham Bell's system was an attempt to Americanize the German "Oral Method" of Samuel Heinicke. This method shows how the organs of speech are used and how the movements in speech may be interpreted by the eye. But it was found that speech could be taught just as readily by the German method, or the method of imitation by which, through careful observation, the child is taught to imitate the teacher, and to speak the words thus presented. The acquisition of speech depends upon the child's facilities. He must have good eyesight and his vocal organs must not be impaired.

Educators agree that the acquisition of language is through social channels. The normal child is engulfed in an atmosphere of language. He learns to speak by listening to words and by imitating sounds. Throughout the entire day his ear is absorbing language. His actual, though informal, auricular education begins during the second year of the child's life. With the deaf child it is far different: for he must depend upon lip-reading. Lip-reading (sometimes called speech reading) is the art of understanding a speaker by watching his face, especially the movements of his lips. With this method scarcely half of the spoken elements are visibly recognizable; the other half must be guessed. And only one who has a complete command of language can guess that invisible half.

A new method in American schools has been introduced at the De Paul Institute in Pittsburgh, Pa. By years of patience and by excellent progressive training, the pupils are enabled not only to speak with a pleasant and well-modulated voice but also, through an almost uncanny method of training the other senses in the work of the one they lack, to "hear" speech as speedily as the person in whom the auditory sense is not impaired. They learn to "hear" through their fingertips. They are taught how to form the lips and how to use the tongue properly to bring forth sounds and words.

Years of experience have convinced educators of the deaf that since there is a wide range of mental capacity and educational receptivity among deaf pupils, no single method can adequately educate all. Hence it is obvious that such methods should be adopted as will achieve the best results. It is for this reason that many of the schools for the deaf today employ what is known as the "Combined Method." These schools regard speech and lip-reading as very important, but at the same time they realize that there are some pupils who can never acquire facility of speech. Since mental development and acquisition of language are of far greater importance, such methods are chosen for each pupil as seem best adapted to his particular needs.

Statistics — In the United States today there are approximately 95,000 deaf persons. Some 20,000 are enrolled in the 212 schools throughout the country. These schools may be classified as follows:

Public Residential Schools ...	65
Public Day Schools .....	127
Denominational and Private Schools .....	20

Of the total number (212 schools) 12 are under Catholic auspices:

State	School	Teachers	Founded
1. California.....	St. Joseph.....	Sisters of St. Joseph .....	1894
2. Illinois.....	Ephpheta.....	Ladies of the Sacred Heart	1884
3. Louisiana.....	Chinchuba Institute..	School Srs. of Notre Dame	1890
4. Maryland.....	St. Francis Xavier.....	Missionary Helpers .....	1897

It is estimated that there are more than 4,000 Catholic deaf boys and girls in the United States. Of these only 1,300 are in Catholic schools. The number of religious in the United States engaged in the instruction of the deaf is about 200. There are about 7 resident chaplains in schools for the deaf. There are, likewise, members of the Jesuit, Redemptorist and Passionist orders and a number of secular priests engaged in giving missions for the deaf throughout the year. Some of the major seminaries have included in their courses a fundamental training in sign language.

Catholics who are nationally prominent in deaf education today are many. We list but a few of them: Fr. Daniel Higgins, C. Ss. R., author of "Sign Dictionary" which includes many Catholic words; Fr. Michael A. Purtell, S. J., editor of "Catholic Deaf-Mute"; Msgr. Henry J. Waldhaus, superintendent of St. Rita's School and editor of the "Silent Advocate"; Fr. Stephen Landherr, C. Ss. R., director of deaf-mute work in Archdiocese of Newark; Fr. Mark De Coste, C. Ss. R., director of deaf-mute center, Roxbury, Mass.; Dr. Gertrude Van Adestine, principal of Detroit day school; Dr. Oscar Russell, educator; Miss Marie K. Mason, educator.

Catholic education and Catholic charity have played their part in breaking down the walls of silence and ignorance which formerly cut off the deaf from the world of men in which they lived. No longer are they outcasts of society; they are, rather, the living proof of Christian charity in action. No longer dwarfed in soul or stunted in intellect, they are now capable of taking their place in society. Bitterness toward a blind fate has been replaced by gratitude to a kind Creator Who has given them other faculties which can almost replace the one of which they have been deprived. Religion has shown them the way to true contentment, education in that religion has given them the means to attain it in this life, and the promise of Christ, "Come to Me, all you that labor, and are burdened, and I will refresh you" (Matthew, xi, 28) has found in them a literal fulfillment.

NEWMAN CLUBS

There are well over 150,000 Catholic students in secular institutions of higher learning in the United States. The Newman Clubs established at these various schools represent an attempt to protect their Christian faith in an atmosphere which is at best indifferent, and often openly hostile.

The first Newman Club was formed by five Catholic students at the University of Pennsylvania in 1893. These men, all of whom later gained prominence, were: Timothy L. Harrington, James J. Walsh, Joseph Walsh, John J. Gilbride and John J. Robrecht. Determining to make their Catholic faith an active force in their circle, they adopted Cardinal Newman as their patron. The fruit of this small beginning is now more than 600 Newman Clubs in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, Australia and China.

In the United States alone 307 clubs have about 50,000 members.

At a meeting in Hunter College in 1914, where members of the five clubs in New York City were gathered, the idea of a combined organization was first brought forth. This organization was launched in 1915 with eleven clubs from New York, Philadelphia and Princeton as its core. Other clubs were invited to affiliate in the hope that the movement would spread to all non-Catholic colleges in the United States. At the annual conference held in Washington in 1938 the name of the Newman Club Federation was adopted. In the spring of 1941 the Newman Club Federation became a member of the National Catholic Youth Council, under the Youth Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. In 1943 they celebrate the 50th anniversary of their foundation.

THE RETREAT MOVEMENT

The Retreat Movement has its foundation and best example in Christ's life upon this earth. Throughout His three years' public ministry we find our Lord withdrawing from His public life to meditate and pray in peace and quiet. Time and time again throughout the centuries the Fathers of the Church have urged the people to withdraw from the hustle and bustle of daily life to think of their Creator and their purpose in life. Early in the thirteenth century at the request of thousands, St. Francis instituted another order, a Third Order, for those men and women who could not leave the world and spend their lives within the cloister. These Third Order Franciscans, then as now, withdrew on different occasions from the business of the world and spent periods in prayer and meditation. This work of lay retreats has not been a Franciscan prerogative but has been under the special care and protection of the religious groups throughout the history of the Church. Living detached lives within the cloister they drew lay people to pray and meditate within the peaceful shelter of the monastery walls.

Although lay retreats were held previous to his time, St. Ignatius of Loyola was the first to systematize them. For this reason he has been named the patron saint of the Lay Retreat Movement and in many of these retreats the Ignatian method is followed.

In the United States—The history of laymen's retreats in the United States is full of interest. There are records of lay retreats being held in what is now the state of Maryland as early as 1638. In 1852, the Redemptorist Fathers of Baltimore are listed in the "Metropolitan Catholic Almanac" as admitting "into their convent... gentlemen of the laity for performing exercises of a spiritual retreat." In 1876, the Jesuit Fathers conducted retreats at St. Charles College, Grand Coteau, La. We read of retreats being held at St. Stanislaus Novitiate, near Cleveland, in the year 1898. And there are, undoubtedly, many unrecorded instances of lay retreats held during the last century.

The movement which assumed national proportions in 1928 when the first National Conference met at Malvern, Pa., had several distinct regional beginnings. In California, Rev. Richard A. Gleeson, S.J., conducted lay retreats at Santa Clara College, in 1903. The following year, a permanent organization for the promotion of retreats in California came into existence. At Techny, Ill., the Fathers of the Divine Word began in 1906 the retreats for laymen which they have conducted ever since. In Kansas, the Jesuit Fathers held retreats at St. Mary's College in 1909. In New York City, at Fordham College, Rev. Terence Shealy, S.J., began in 1909 the retreats which, in 1911, led to the organization of the Laymen's League for Retreats and Social Studies and to the opening of Mt. Manresa on Staten Island, a house devoted exclusively to lay retreats. In Scranton, Pa., the Passionist Fathers began conducting retreats at their monastery in 1911.

In later years, all over the country new houses were opened and the number of retreats and lay retreatants steadily increased. In many places, Laymen Retreat Leagues were organized to extend the influence of the retreat by acquainting the laity with the nature and value of a periodic withdrawal from the world and a few days spent in prayerful reflection and solitude. A new impetus was given the Catholic Laymen's Retreat Movement when it became a national organization in 1939.

At the present time there are retreat houses throughout the United States and close to 50,000 men making retreats every year. Sixteen religious orders and congregations are actively engaged in this great work; and there are about 25 permanent retreat houses where retreats are held almost every week throughout the year. Besides this, there are more than 50 seasonal houses where retreats are conducted especially during the summer months.

The most desirable type of retreat is that which begins Friday evening and lasts until Sunday evening, though some retreats are of briefer duration owing to local circumstances. Those making "closed" retreats stay at the retreat house for the whole period of the retreat; those making "open" retreats attend all the exercises but do not stay at the retreat house. Whenever possible the closed retreat is to be preferred. Much of the value of a retreat comes from the detachment from the world, the leisure for the things of God, the solitude and spirit of recollection that are effected by a few days of life in a new spiritual atmosphere; away from the distractions and disturbances of life in the world, the retreatant can spend a short period of closer contact with the undiminished truth and invigorating life of the Church.

Permanent retreat houses are either separate buildings exclusively devoted to lay retreats, or quarters attached to the monasteries of the various religious orders and congregations. St. Paul of the Cross provided in his rule that every Passionist monastery should have rooms for the accommodation of lay retreatants. In a great many cases the rooms and dormitories of Catholic colleges and boarding schools are used for the seasonal retreats.

Besides the week-end retreat, there is also a retreat of one day's duration, called the "day of recollection."

Although the lay retreat is for no particular group or class in the Church and is usually made up of the average working man and woman, there are, nevertheless, some Special Group Retreats. Thus, for several years the Franciscan Fathers at St. Francis Friary, Brookline, Mass., have conducted retreats for blind men; the same opportunity for spiritual refreshment is given to blind women by the Sisters of the Cenacle at Brighton, Mass. The Parish Retreat aims to have the families of a parish make the retreat together. The men and women of the parish spend the day in a spirit of devotion, and attend religious exercises and sermons in their own parish church. Meals are usually served in the Parish Hall. This type of retreat has met with considerable success in Anacostia, Washington, D. C., where the Campion Evidence Guild has sponsored retreats for the colored people.

Concerning the cost of making a retreat, some houses have set rates, while others have free will offerings; but all are reasonable and merely desire to be self-sustaining. The rapid spread of the Retreat Movement among the Catholic men and women of America is sufficient to prove the popularity and the worth of lay retreats.

The National Catholic Laymen's Retreat League

The Catholic Laymen's Retreat League was organized on an informal basis until October, 1939, when at the Ninth National Conference of the League, in Brooklyn, N. Y., it was knit into a national organization by the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, drawn up by Joseph P. Walsh, Chairman of New York Knights of Columbus Retreat Committee.

The objects of the League are: personal sanctification of members; advancement of closed retreats; co-operation with local leagues in establishing retreat houses; encouragement of individuals interested in establishing a local retreat league. Local retreat leagues engaged exclusively in the promotion of closed retreats are eligible for active membership; organizations of Catholic laymen whose activities include the promotion of closed retreats are eligible for associate membership. Individuals rendering conspicuous service to the closed retreat movement can be elected to honorary membership by the Board of Directors.

The officers of the League are a president, a vice-president, a treasurer, a secretary and a moderator, all elected by ballot, except the moderator who is appointed by the president or the Board of Directors. The Board of Directors is composed of the officers of the League and three trustees.

Laywomen's Retreat Movement

The Diocesan Councils of the National Council of Catholic Women provide retreats for women in the dioceses of: Belleville (days of recollection); Buffalo; Charleston; Denver (retreats and days of recollection); Des Moines; Duluth; Fort Wayne; Harrisburg; Leavenworth; Los Angeles (days of recollection); Omaha (days of recollection); St. Augustine (Tampa, Jacksonville, West Palm Beach, Miami); St. Louis; Santa Fe; Wheeling.

Retreats are also held by the Minnesota State Religious Council.

The Religious of the Cenacle, whose purpose it is to hold retreats for women and who have taken an active part in organizing the movement, maintain four permanent houses of retreat. Permanent houses of retreat are also maintained by: Sisters of St. Dominic, Religious of Mary Reparatrix, Passionist Nuns, Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament, Religious of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, Tertiary Sisters of St. Elizabeth, Sisters of the Precious Blood, Visitation Nuns, Franciscan Sisters of the Atonement, Religious of the Sacred Heart of Mary, Helpers of the Holy Souls, Benedictine Sisters, Maryknoll Sisters, Sisters of Christian Charity, Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis, Social Service Sisters, Sisters of St. Joseph of Peace, Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis, Sisters of the Holy Humility of Mary, Sisters of Mercy, Missionary Servants of the Most Holy Trinity, Sisters of Charity of the Incarnate Word, and others.

Throughout the United States are local Retreat Leagues, organized to promote the spiritual advancement of their members by means of retreats and to provide others with the opportunity of making retreats. One of the most active of these is the Women's Retreat Group of Albuquerque, N. M., which meets twice a month and is attended by Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

The latest figures show that in the United States there are 23 permanent houses (2 of these are conducted by the Capuchin Fathers, assisted by laywomen trustees) and 88 seasonal houses of retreat. In 1940, 42 retreat houses, permanent and seasonal, reported a total of 470 closed retreats, which were attended by a total of 24,257 retreatants, 3,783 more than in 1938. Days of recollection in 1940 numbered 350, with 20,147 retreatants attending. These are the figures sent to the fourth biennial congress of the National Laywomen's Retreat Movement, held at Providence, R. I., in October, 1941.

Catholic Action

"The participation of the laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy"
(Pope Pius XI)

ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT

Earliest of members in Catholic Action work are those co-laborers of St. Paul and the other Apostles, so often saluted in the Epistles. For Catholic Action has existed since that day when Christ sent forth His twelve to win all men to Him. The command, "Going therefore, teach ye all nations" (Matt., xxviii, 19) was a command to the whole Church. To the officers did it primarily apply — and the Apostles proved themselves worthy of the trust placed in them by the Master. To the laity also that command was given — and they were ever eager to do their part in conquering the world for Christ the King. There was much to do in those early days when Christianity was new in a pagan world. Side by side with the Apostles and their successors the laity labored in planting the good seed of the Gospel in the pagan hearts of misguided men.

When nearly all men and nations had become Christian, the task of the laity became less urgent. The Church was firmly rooted everywhere; life was simple; and, as a result, the clergy leaned less upon the active apostolic endeavors of the laymen. That glorious age has passed.

Today the need for Catholic Action is as pronounced as it was in the beginnings of Christianity. The disintegrating influences of the Protestant Reformation have laid waste much of what was once Christian. The old paganism, modernized and with new names, once more seeks supremacy in a world that should belong to Christ. The ever increasing complexities of life, products of industrialism, have made it ever more difficult for the clergy to reach the great mass of men. So it has come about that the layman's role in the conquest of the world for Christ has once again come to the fore. The priest who cannot go personally into the mine, the factory or the office to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ can reach the workers there only if assisted by the laity who are working in the mines, the factories and the offices of our modern world.

DEFINITION

Catholic Action is not political or economic action; it is not a negative thing; it is not some new weapon forged to combat the forces of Communism or any other modern menace; it is not even the mere exercise of charity or the intensification of one's own personal holiness.

Classically defined by our late beloved Pontiff, Pope Pius XI, Catholic Action is: "The participation of the Catholic laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy." Analyzing the definition, Cardinal Pizzardo brings out four main points: (1) Catholic Action is an apostolate, a mission for the salvation of souls. (2) It is an apostolate of the laity, called by the hierarchy to work for the salvation of souls. (3) It is an organized apostolate, necessarily so, since its mission is social. (4) It is an apostolate organized hierarchically, that is, after the pattern of the Church — parochial, diocesan, and universal — under the direct supervision of the teaching and ruling body of the Church.

DOCTRINAL FOUNDATION

The doctrine of the Mystical Body of Christ is the basis for the very existence of Catholic Action. When the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity assumed human nature He gave to every man the dignity of brotherhood with Him. This bond of union between each man and Christ has given a new and deeper meaning to the fellowship of man with man, for all men have become brothers of each other in Christ. By His death on the Cross Christ merited for every man the right to enter heaven. Man, on his part, must participate in those merits of Christ, he must apply them to himself. Catholic Action goes out to those who have cut themselves off from the Body of Christ, to those who have never been incorporated into that Body. Men already joined to Christ, living His life in the Mystical Body, seek to bring to all men the realization of the high dignity that is theirs because of the Incarnation and the salvation that awaits them because of the Redemption. As members of Christ's Mystical Body we must have the same aims as did Christ Himself. He spent Himself in the winning of souls. In His physical Body He no longer walks among us. Instead, He uses us — His mystical members — as instruments to continue His work on earth.

OBJECTIVE

Since its aim is identified with that of the apostolate of the hierarchy, Catholic Action must bend its every effort, even as does the hierarchy, to the winning or the bringing back of souls. This quest for souls must be insisted upon. To veer ever so slightly from this one objective is to miss the whole point of Catholic Action.

The apostle of Catholic Action must first make sure of his own hold upon the eternal truths; he must form his conscience in accord with the principles laid down by Christ; he must live the Gospel and show by the example of his daily life how the Christian way of living can and does transform human nature. Only then will he be in a position to direct and guide other men. Certain of his own footing, his task lies in apostolic fields. To the men of the little world in which he lives he must bring the saving truths of the Gospel. Not to society in general is he sent, but to individuals. In imitation of the Master, he will not rail against the existing political abuses, but he will strive to convert the politician to Christ; he will not complain of the unequal distribution of wealth, but he will warn the rich man of the rust that consumes and he will teach the poor man to lay up for himself treasures in heaven. Ranting against abuses will never reform the world, but making the message of Christ to live in the hearts of men will change the face of the earth. And Catholic Action is even now re-making the world, reclaiming it for Christ its King.

Pope Pius XI of happy memory insisted always upon the supernatural note in this campaign for Christ. "Prayer, first; the supernatural, first," were familiar words upon his lips. They were his commentary on the words of Sacred Scripture: "Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it. Unless the Lord keep the city, he watcheth in vain that keepeth it" (Ps. cxxvi, 1-2).

ORGANIZATION

"Catholic Action is not a piece of machinery which can be erected here, there, and anywhere by a process of manufacture, to the design of a blueprint. Catholic Action belongs to life. It is a thing that grows. What is growing is a new community, a new society, a Christian society." Though variable in its organization, Catholic Action is invariable as far as its fundamental principles are concerned. The two basic elements of true Catholic Action must ever be the same: (1) apostolic aim, that is the salvation of souls; (2) organization under the direction of the hierarchy (pastor, bishop, and Pope).

With these two points taken care of, Catholic Action will conform itself to the varied and varying circumstances of the world in which it labors. Specialization there must be, for "if the world is to be won for Christ, then each man must strive to win his own little world, the world of his daily communications and intercourse. He must win himself, he must win his family, he must win the men and women with whom he is, day by day, in association: the people he works with, plays with, eats with, travels with, all his little world. If each Catholic is winning his own little world then the whole world is being won."

Because it may take one of many different forms, the ideal Catholic Action group is difficult to describe. Leaving aside the specific form of organization which will depend upon the circumstances of time and place, it might be well here to point out several important features that must be present in every Catholic Action group. It must be a group, for Catholic Action is essentially a corporate undertaking. It must be a spiritual group, composed of members sensitive to spiritual values and living Catholic life to the full. It must be a corporate group, aware of its task as a functioning unit of the Mystical Body of Christ. It must be an apostolic group, always in quest of souls. It must be an obedient group, following out to the finest detail every command of its bishop.

AUXILIARY SOCIETIES

Cardinal Pizzardo points out the distinction between Catholic Action groups and other Catholic societies. He says: "(1) Catholic Action is rigidly hierarchic, its organization being grafted upon the hierarchic economy of the Church. (2) Catholic Action gives its members a complete shaping or structure, not only religious and moral but social and specialized in accordance with their professions. It trains consciences to be more sensitive and more courageous in meeting and solving the problems of life in a Christian way. (3) Catholic Action embraces in its program every form of apostolate, while the auxiliary societies and associations are engaged solely in a work of religious development or in some particular apostolic work."

Included in this term "auxiliary societies" are those which care for individual ascetical progress, those concerned only with practices of piety or charity, those which defend the liberty of Catholics in civic matters; likewise those which look to the improvement of economic conditions for workers, co-operative societies, and labor unions; and finally, those societies whose aims are immediately of a political nature.

Speaking of such "auxiliary societies," the late Pope Pius XI made clear that they are good societies and have their specific part to play. They need not be done away with, nor is it necessary to change them into official Catholic Action groups. The whole point is simply this: they are not authentic Catholic Action groups, but helpers to the central undertaking of Catholic Action.

Cardinal Pizzardo clearly outlines the distinction in a geometric figure: "In the center is Catholic Action organized in accordance with the forms laid down by the teaching of the Pope, and directly and completely dependent upon the hierarchy. All other organizations and societies which we call auxiliaries or socio-economic are like so many concentric circles.... Central apostolic action is the winning and the bringing back of souls, co-operation in their salvation. It is a source of practical direction and inspiration under the supervision of the national center and the diocesan and parochial centers and is set up according to hierarchical procedure. The closer the concentric circles of Catholic activity approach to and are modeled upon Catholic Action, the more nearly will they assume its character and its function, and share in its honor and labors."

CATHOLIC ACTION IN THE UNITED STATES: THE NATIONAL CATHOLIC WELFARE CONFERENCE

As noted above, Catholic Action is not a thing made according to a set pattern. It develops in accordance with the special needs and circumstances which obtain in the place where it is to operate. The vast extent of these United States, the need for national emphasis and concerted action on problems affecting the entire country, and the necessity of adequate representation before the various departments of government gave rise to the establishment of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Pope Pius XI of happy memory realized the need for such an organization in this country. Speaking of the N. C. W. C. he said: "It is not only useful, but also necessary for you. Since you reside in cities far apart and there are matters of a higher import demanding your joint deliberation — as, for example, those relating to the Christian family, the education of youth, public and private morality, care of numerous immigrants, and other problems of this kind — it is imperative that by taking counsel together you all agree on one common aim and with one united will strive for its attainment, by employing, as you now do, the means which are adequate and adapted to present-day conditions."

Definition

The N. C. W. C. is not a council or legislative assembly. The resolutions adopted by the bishops of the N. C. W. C. do not have the force of law. The Conference is, rather, a clearing-house of information regarding activities of Catholic men and women; a common agency acting under the authority of the bishops to promote the welfare of the Church and of Catholic activities in the United States, and to make Catholic teachings more widespread and effective. In the words of Archbishop Austin Dowling: "The National Catholic Welfare Conference is a voluntary association of the bishops. It has not and never can have any mandatory or legislative power. Nothing can be done in a diocese except by the permission of the ordinary. But every bishop gains by contact with his fellow bishops and the very statement of common problems and the discussions thereon are in themselves helpful. This is the great service which the National Catholic Welfare Conference renders to the bishops of the United States."

Purpose

The bishops of this country, acting with the full approval of the Holy Father, established the Conference for the purpose of "unifying, co-ordinating and organizing the Catholic people of the United States in works of education, social welfare, immigrant aid and other activities." As stated in their joint pastoral letter: "We have grouped together, under the N. C. W. C., the various agencies by which the cause of religion is furthered. Each of these, continuing its own special work in its chosen field, will now derive additional support through general co-operation."

It is not the policy of the N. C. W. C. to create new organizations. Rather, it helps, unifies, and leaves to their own fields those that already exist. It seeks to inform the life of America on right fundamental principles of religion and morality. As expressed by Father John J. Burke, C.S.P.: "It was established not to control, but to direct; not to hinder or curtail, but to co-ordinate and to promote; not to rule with a master hand but to facilitate by conference and mutually accepted divisions of work."

Organization

The complex and highly specialized structure of the N. C. W. C. will be dealt with later. Here let it suffice to view that organization only in its broad general outlines. The N. C. W. C. is a national representative body. Consequently it must be governed by a representative group of the national hierarchy. This end is achieved by the election of a board of ten bishops and archbishops at the annual meeting of the bishops of the country. Functioning directly under the several members of this administrative board are eight departments: Executive, Education, Press, Social Action, Legal, Lay Organizations, Youth, and Catholic Action Study. In addition to these departments, the general body of bishops has set up certain special episcopal committees among which are: Committee on American Board of Catholic Missions; on Census; on Confraternity of Christian Doctrine; on Motion Pictures; on the Propagation of the Faith (Foreign Service); on Clean Literature; for Relief. These committees, as can be seen, are chosen to deal with special problems that arise. In some cases it has been found desirable to establish offices for continued and organized work.

Each department deals with problems proper to its own field, in accord with Catholic principles—acting always under the immediate direction of its episcopal chairman, without whose approbation no official action is taken. Furthermore, no official action is taken by the Conference as a whole without the approval of the administrative board.

The special needs of this vast land have brought about this highly organized national body. The whole superstructure of Catholic Action is a reality. What is needed now is a more intense participation of the laity, a joining of forces under this national body for united participation of the laity in this work so admirably organized by the hierarchy. Many problems that confront the ordinary Catholic Action group will find their solution in similar situations already dealt with by the various departments of the Conference. Literature on every phase of life is available through the Conference, which has induced eminent Catholic authorities to write up the problems proper to their respective fields. The stand taken by the hierarchy of the nation on questions having a Catholic interest can be learned through the Conference.

Diocesan organizations may affiliate with the N. C. W. C. through their ordinary, State, regional or national organizations may affiliate through an authorized and acceptable agent. The Administrative Board directs the particular organizations to the proper department of affiliation.

National unity and co-ordination as envisaged in the N. C. W. C. does not alter, however, the fundamental fact that in the diocese where they operate organizations are always subject to the bishop. The bishop is the proper authority to which they should look for guidance and direction. The fact that they may be units of one of the departments of the N. C. W. C., and as such seek guidance from that department on certain matters does not in any way lessen their responsibility to, and their dependence on their bishop.

As noted above, the N. C. W. C. is headed by a board of ten bishops and archbishops. These form the Administrative Board. They form together the general policy for the entire organization. Together they appoint episcopal committees for handling various problems that may arise, and which demand attention. Eight of the members of the Administrative Board individually control and direct the eight departments of the organization. For more intense and specialized work, the departments are subdivided into bureaus. Finally, there are conferences which might be defined as experimental groups working in specialized fields, gathering data, encouraging the support and advice of experts in the field, and working out a feasible plan of action which is presented to the bureau or department for consideration. A brief resume is here given of the purpose and scope of the eight departments with their several bureaus, and of the work of some of the episcopal committees which function directly under the Administrative Board.

1. Executive Department

For more intense and specialized work, some of the departments are subdivided as required into bureaus. The general secretary, as chief executive officer for the Administrative Board, not only directs the work of the Executive Department, but also supervises the operations of the other departments of the Conference, and co-ordinates all of the multiple activities of the various N. C. W. C. units. Functioning directly under the Executive Department are the following:

(a) Bureau of Immigration — This bureau is a national Catholic immigrant aid organization which assists migrants of all nationalities, serves as a clearing-house for questions of immigration and emigration with which the Church in the United States is particularly concerned, and aids the foreign-born already in the country. The primary object of the bureau is to protect the faith of the Catholic immigrant and to help him become a worthy citizen.

(b) Confraternity of Christian Doctrine—The Confraternity works to extend knowledge and practice of the Faith among those outside the Catholic school system. (A special section on the Confraternity will be found elsewhere in the Almanac.)

(c) Bureau of Information — This bureau serves as a clearing-house of Catholic information for national news and radio agencies and other media of public communication, as well as providing persons and organizations with factual material in relation to Catholic activities in this country.

(d) "Catholic Action," official organ of the N. C. W. C., records monthly the work of the Conference. "Catholic Action" is also the official organ of the National Council of Catholic Men and the National Council of Catholic Women. It regularly stresses the Catholic needs of the day and records the interests of the N. C. W. C. and its several departments.

Featured regularly in "Catholic Action" are monthly study club articles planned to promote the proper understanding of, and active participation in, practical programs of Catholic thought and life. These study discussions are prepared by the N. C. W. C. Study Club Committee, composed of representatives of the several departments and bureaus of the N. C. W. C.

(e) Publications Office — The N. C. W. C. through its publications office has made available a considerable volume of literature, mostly in pamphlet form, intended to assist that intellectual preparation necessary for "successful participation of the laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy."

(f) Historical Records — The Executive Department is custodian of a valuable historical collection, comprising more than 800,000 service records and documentary accounts of the participation of the Catholics of the United States in the World War.

2. Department of Education

The Department of Education aims to serve the great system of Catholic schools voluntarily maintained by the Catholic people in fidelity to the ideals and teachings of the Church. In carrying out this purpose the department engages in the five following activities: collection of data concerning Catholic education; furnishing information to school officials and the general public; acting as an advisory agency to assist Catholic educational institutions in developing their programs; safeguarding the interests of Catholic education; serving as a connecting agency between Catholic education activities and government education agencies. A Committee on Seminaries functions under the department also.

Specifically, the department every two years makes a statistical survey of Catholic schools. The first survey was in 1920. The data gathered is invaluable to those interested in the progress of Catholic education in this country.

The department co-operates with research students in compiling information for use in dissertations and special studies. A teachers' registration section maintained by the department places teachers in Catholic schools.

The interests of Catholic education have been safeguarded through the activities of this department, in co-operation with the Executive and Legal Departments, in opposing federal and state legislation inimical to the welfare of Catholic schools. It keeps in close touch with all government agencies that deal with educational problems.

The Catholic Bureau of Inter-American Collaboration, inaugurated by Pax Romana, now functions within the Department of Education. The purposes of the bureau are: first, to foster mutual understanding between the Catholics of North and South America; second, to offer mutual aid whenever possible in combating anti-Christian and anti-Catholic propaganda; third, to direct the services of existing Catholic institutions into the field of inter-American collaboration, and by so doing to foster the extension of those institutions best adapted to the needs of Catholic life in the Americas. The bureau's fields of activity are listed under three heads: (1) Cinema and Radio; (2) Publications; (3) Exchange Professorships and Scholarships.

3. Press Department

The N. C. W. C. Press Department has the function of promoting, developing and assisting the Catholic Press of the United States. Under its episcopal chairman, it carries on its activities with a lay director experienced in journalism, and with a trained personnel of editors and writers including a headquarters staff in Washington and a large staff of experienced field correspondents in key cities of the United States and in the leading capitals of the world.

The department offers to Catholic publications:

(a) A news service of approximately 50,000 words weekly, covering the Catholic news of all the world, gathered by radio, cable, telegraph, telephone and mail.

(b) A Catholic feature service of 17 to 20 articles weekly, averaging 10,000 words in all, calculated to interest all members of the family.

(c) A Catholic news picture service.

(d) A telegraphic service, covering certain types of last-minute news.

(e) An editorial information service, supplying factual material for editorial writers' use.

(f) A biographical service, including authenticated biographies of prominent Catholic figures.

(g) A Washington letter, interpreting each week national events of particular interest to Catholics.

(h) Special texts, giving in full important Vatican documents, radioed immediately upon issuance.

(i) Special supplements, including features and pictures, at appropriate seasons.

(j) Special syndications, series on subjects of particular timeliness and interest, written by noted authors.

Inaugurated in 1941, Noticias Catolicas, the Ibero-American section of the News Service, makes available to the Ibero-American press in Spanish and Portuguese the department's facilities for the collection and dissemination of news. Noticias Catolicas provides for its subscribers in every Ibero-American country a news service of many thousands of words at least twice a week, including special texts of the encyclicals and other pontifical and ecclesiastical documents.

The Press Department serves over 437 Catholic publications which include, besides virtually all Catholic newspapers in the United States, journals in 32 other countries. "Osservatore Romano," the great Vatican City daily, has for many years been a subscriber.

Because of its standard of factual reporting, the N. C. W. C. News Service is entitled to the privilege of admission to the press galleries of Congress and the White House press conferences. It is the only news service primarily for religious papers enjoying that privilege.

By pioneering in the news radioing of complete texts of papal encyclicals, the N. C. W. C. News Service has influenced the secular press to multiply the space given these important documents.

An important aim of the department is to make possible simultaneous, and accordingly powerful, presentation by the Catholic press of programs, problems and teachings of the Church.

4. Department of Social Action

The Department of Social Action was established to promote the social teaching of the Church and to interpret, under the guidance of the bishops, the application of this teaching to the complex social problems of the country. It is concerned with studies and programs dealing particularly with industrial problems, civic obligations, rural life, family life, and in general with subjects affecting social welfare and international relations.

As to method, the department tries to do these things in its fields: (1) know the social teaching of the Church; (2) know American facts, movements, proposals, trends and personalities; (3) make the teaching and facts known through books, pamphlets, newspaper articles, magazine articles, public addresses; (4) keep in touch with the Catholics working in its own fields; (5) help lay organizations affiliated with the National Councils of Catholic Men and Women and other groups pledged to the extension of Catholic life and influence in America.

The following are the chief fields of present activity:

(a) Industrial Relations — The work of the department on industrial questions centers in making known, explaining, and trying to show the application to America, of Leo XIII's great encyclical, "The Condition of Labor"; of the incomparable encyclical of Pius XI, "Reconstructing the Social Order"; and of Pope Pius XI's encyclical on "Atheistic Communism," which embraces in resume the principles of the two earlier ones.

It has given its services to the preparation of special studies on women in industry, and to the planning and conducting of a special Institute on Women in Industry.

It has a wide variety of bibliographies on Catholic and secular books and pamphlets dealing with industrial and economic questions.

The bishops entrusted to the department the program for establishing Schools of Social Action for the clergy, which are summer courses for priests on the social encyclicals, their application to American life, and the means priests can use to spread their teaching.

(b) Rural Life Bureau — The Rural Life Bureau of the Social Action Department was set up to study and to analyze Catholic social teaching in relation to the great rural population of our country. The following are some of the varied activities of the bureau: (1) Aid to migrating Catholic families to settle within the confines of established rural parishes. (2) Advice regarding co-operatives. (3) Encouragement of diversification of crops or a live-at-home type of agriculture. (4) Fostering of a rural rather than an urban viewpoint on the part of the young people of the country. (5) Seeking to obtain for Catholic farm people the advantages of the Social Security Act. (6) Promoting adult education through the study club. (7) Encouraging the beautification of farm homes and premises, and co-operation with the Government Extension Service agents. (8) Encouraging governmental efforts to bring electricity to the countryside. (9) Promoting recreational, dramatic and social programs on a rural parish and inter-parish basis. (10) Expansion of religious instruction through the rural school system, the vacation school, the correspondence course, the religious study club. (11) Promotion of retreats for laymen and laywomen of the country districts. (12) Fostering activities in behalf of the rural family. (13) Developing a diocesan rural loan library, with collection of dramas, songs and pageants of a rural nature. (14) Initiating rural research projects. (15) Encouraging the writing of the history of the rural parishes of the diocese. (16) Organizing the laity for rural action. (17) Conducting rural institutes on a parish basis. (18) Promoting an annual Catholic Rural Life Day.

(c) Peace and the Causes of War — The department's work on peace and international affairs is to prepare, or promote preparation of, writings on the social teaching of the Church on peace and international relations; bring about the diffusion of these; and help Catholic lay organizations and schools to take their part in the movement for a peaceful world.

This work is done by the department partly in its own name and partly in co-operation with other organizations. Thus, either directly or in collaboration with other groups, the department has collected and translated papal documents and published a great variety of pamphlets on the peace statements of the Popes, on international ethics, on the relations of the United States to other countries, on international organization, on world economic life, on the historic role of the Church in international life, and on the causes of war.

Catholic pamphlets and books prepared in the United States on the subject of peace were rare when the department began its work. By its untiring efforts, a Catholic library covering all the essential points in the field is gradually forming. Study outlines are prepared for all pamphlets so that Catholic lay organizations may have both texts and outlines of study in their work of promoting "the peace of Christ in the kingdom of Christ" (motto of our late beloved Pope Pius XI).

(d) Family Life Section — The Family Life Section is an integral part of the Social Action Department. Its work is under the guidance of a special director, and extends into such wide and varied fields as home economics, parent education, and family relationships. While religion is given special emphasis, the aids offered by sociologists and other scientists are employed in the preparation of studies and programs.

Specific projects and methods of carrying them out are: (1) Studying and disseminating the principles of Christian marriage, particularly as set forth in the encyclical of Pius XI on Christian Marriage, and advancing the cause of parent education, as advocated in the encyclical on the Christian Education of Youth. (2) Developing and disseminating a popular and advanced literature on marriage and the family, and on parent education. (3) Fostering the establishment of the Association of the Holy Family. (4) Encouraging the formation of maternity guilds. (5) Aiding in the development of study clubs dealing with family topics, and encouraging individual reading and study of family literature in the home. (6) Co-operating with other Catholic agencies and organizations at home and abroad in their efforts in behalf of the home. (7) Encouraging the development of Catholic leaders in the field, particularly by urging due provision in schools and colleges for courses on Christian marriage, the family, and parent education, and by encouraging the formation of voluntary study clubs in Catholic educational institutions. (8)

Fostering an interest in family study among Catholic young people outside the school system through such media as sodalities or other young people's organizations. (9) Promoting the fitting celebration of the feast of the Holy Family.

(e) Parish Credit Unions — The Parish Credit Union National Committee maintains in the Social Action Department a secretary for urban interests and one for rural interests. As its title implies, this committee seeks to encourage the establishment on a parish basis of the small loans co-operative banks known in the United States as Parish Credit Unions.

5. Legal Department

The primary function of this department is to serve as a clearing-house for information on legislative matters, a central office in which information is collected and classified and from which that information can promptly and adequately be made available to the dioceses, as well as other departments of the N. C. W. C.

The major interest of the department lies in the field of legislation affecting Catholic life and religious institutions. In this field the department collects documents and data, and with its limited staff endeavors to keep abreast of current developments in legislation in the Federal Congress and in the state legislatures and with action in the courts interpreting legislation touching Church interests. The department receives, examines and analyzes public bills, introduced in the Congress and legislatures, which have a bearing on religious and social interests.

In international matters, the department collects information respecting government action, including legislation on religious and social questions of particular interest to Catholics in the United States, and endeavors to supply promptly accurate information in this field on subjects of particular and timely interest. The department in connection with this work has prepared numerous pamphlets dealing with religious situations in other countries, particularly in Mexico and Spain.

An important function of the department has to do with matters which need to be discussed with administrative officials of the federal government in Washington. Such matters originate frequently in outlying territories and insular possessions of the United States. Frequently, the department has explained the Catholic attitude on current legislation before congressional committees.

Legislative proposals introduced and debated during recent years affect profoundly philosophical and ethical principles upon which our social and political institutions rest. Legislative acts that have been approved, among them the Social Security Act and other social legislation, give rise, in the regulations issued under them and in their administration, to intricate problems affecting Catholic institutions — hospitals, child-caring and other agencies. Interpretation of these legislative acts for the bishops and Catholic authorities is important. Catholic interests must be protected before administrative boards and authorities. Conferences must be attended and service given on committees considering relations between private and public agencies and institutions. The tax-exempt status of our institutions must be supported, and due consideration assured them because of the public character of the important services they render. These works, of vital importance to the Church in the United States, lay an increasing burden and responsibility on the Legal Department.

The staff of the department, by long experience in government procedure, has acquired an exceptional skill in handling the most complex legal problems in the religious institution field. The department contributes much to the welfare of the Church by rendering important services which are as necessary as they are timely.

6. Department of Lay Organizations

This department consists of two constituent bodies — the National Council of Catholic Men and the National Council of Catholic Women — with the chief function of co-ordinating, promoting and assisting the activities of the Catholic lay organizations of the country, under the direction of the bishops. Affiliation with either Council enables Catholic lay organizations to know the mind of the hierarchy, the common guide of all.

In fulfilling their mission, the two Councils have as an important part of their work the duty of channeling out to the lay groups in all parts of the country, the programs, educational material, and suggestions which other departments and bureaus of the N. C. W. C. have prepared — always under the direction of their respective episcopal chairman.

The bishops of the American hierarchy, in establishing the Department of Lay Organizations as an integral part of the general Conference, intended that the Councils of Men and Women constituting that department should be the means of fostering amongst our people the program designed by the bishops for the welfare of our Christian society. The department is essentially an apostolate of Catholic Action. The laity of the United States is invited and commissioned to co-operate as partners in the mission of leavening society with the truths of Catholic faith and the principles of Catholic life.

The department was created not to be another Catholic organization. Its interest and that of its constituent Councils is not to form new societies nor to supersede those already existing. Its true function is to affiliate and to unite in two companion representative national bodies the units of all fraternal, social and religious societies of men and women for the purpose of adequately impressing on our national life the real beauty and full strength of Catholic ideals. Its program for action is sanely intelligent. It stands for the home, for Christian education, for industrial peace and liberty, and for the purging from American life of vicious and low influences which debauch decency and destroy nobility.

(a) National Council of Catholic Men — This Council is made up of affiliated lay societies having ecclesiastical approval. The form of diocesan organization rests entirely on the plans adopted by the individual bishops. In some dioceses men of the individual parishes are grouped into parish councils, which become affiliated with the National Council; in others, pre-existent or new lay societies — spiritual, functional or fraternal — are affiliated with the National Council directly. There are at the present time between 1,200 and 1,300 societies affiliated with the N. C. C. M. In this number are included national, regional and local groups.

The National Council of Catholic Men has as its functions: (1) To federate Catholic lay societies and groups of men in a common, unified agency or council. (2) To serve as an agency for the interchange of information and service between the N. C. W. C. and organizations of laymen, in their common work for the Church. (3) To be a central clearing-house for information regarding Catholic laymen's activities. (4) To promote, under ecclesiastical supervision, unity and co-operation among laymen in matters that affect the general welfare of the Church and the nation. (5) To help existing Catholic lay organizations to work more effectively in their own localities. (6) To co-operate in furthering the aims of all approved movements in the interest of the Church and of society at large. (7) To participate, through Catholic lay representation, in national and international movements involving moral questions. (8) To bring about a better understanding and a more widespread appreciation of Catholic principles and ideals in the educational, social and civic life of the country.

In furtherance of its objectives, the Council established in 1929 a Catholic Evidence Bureau, as a national agency for Catholic exposition and defense. This bureau has come to be a storehouse of information on lay apologetical activities, to which those engaged in apologetics and other forms of Catholic defense turn for data urgently needed and not available locally.

The Catholic Radio Bureau, maintained by the N. C. C. M. since 1938, is intended to advise and assist any Catholic organization or individual in any activity relative to radio: in procuring station time for a Catholic program, in planning and conducting such a program, in providing scripts or material for preparing scripts, and in making effective protest against offensive broadcasts.

Most widely known of the activities of the National Council of Catholic Men is the creation and maintenance of the nation-wide program, the Catholic Hour. (An account of the Catholic Hour is given elsewhere in the Almanac under the section on Radio.)

(b) National Council of Catholic Women — The National Council of Catholic Women is a federating force uniting all organizations of Catholic lay women within the United States, without destroying the autonomy of any one, but rather increasing the effectiveness of each by stimulating larger membership and greater activities.

The Council includes in this federation the membership of eighteen national organizations, and sixty-five diocesan councils, which are federations of all Catholic laywomen's organizations within the particular diocese, both parish and inter-parochial. This plan makes for a complete network within the diocese and forms a perfect channel for guidance, information and reports, into and from the remotest sections of the diocese.

The Council provides a means through which Catholic women may be informed concerning social, civic and religious questions in which they should be interested. It seeks to develop in members a sense of responsibility, as Catholic citizens, in legislation in the various states and in the national Congress, and particularly in laws and proposed laws touching family life, child welfare, education, industrial problems, immigration, etc. To this purpose it proposes to Catholic women that they: (1) Study and promote Christian social principles. (2) Study fundamental Catholic principles underlying international relations. (3) Maintain Christian standards in recreation, dress and literature. (4) Provide representation at meetings of a national or international character when vital principles are at stake or where matters of national well-being which should be their concern are under discussion. (5) Provide national conventions for conference on common problems and through adequate publicity given to these deliberations, place the Catholic attitude on questions of the hour before the general public. (6) Assist, through affiliation with the International Union of Catholic Women's Leagues, in world-wide protection for the home and in the defense of Catholic principles of social action.

The Council has been entrusted with the maintenance of the National Catholic School of Social Service, in Washington, D. C., a graduate school affiliated with the Catholic University of America. The school combines a thorough, modern, scientific training for social work, with Catholic principles and ideals of Christian charity.

7. Department of Catholic Action Study

This department was organized to obtain and disseminate as widely as possible the encyclicals, allocutions and discourses of our Holy Father; to maintain a record of accomplishments of the bishops, clergy and laity of the United States in the work of Catholic Action, and through research and reports as to methods, programs and achievements, both here and abroad, to assist in furthering the aims of the Catholic Action movement.

Important developments in the field of Catholic Action throughout the world are carefully studied in the light of national religious organization. A program for the extension of the service of this department concerns the wide use of available methods of publicity.

8. Youth Department

This, the newest department of the N. C. W. C., was created by the Administrative Board in November, 1940, to meet a definite need in the Catholic youth field. It enables the Church in this country to deal methodically with the new general trend toward greater coordination of youth work and the unification of youth's forces.

The Youth Department has for its objectives: (1) to facilitate the exchange of information regarding the philosophy, organization, program-content and methods of Catholic youth work; (2) to promote the National Catholic Youth Council as the federating agency for all approved Catholic youth groups; (3) to contact and evaluate all national, non-governmental and governmental youth or youth-serving organizations and agencies. The Youth Department provides the framework in which the coordination of all Catholic youth work can be achieved. It helps Catholic youth leaders and young people better to understand the problems centering about youth; it furnishes information and documentation adequate for the interpretation of youth work both Catholic and non-Catholic, youth-led and adult-sponsored, domestic and foreign. Finally, it develops the National Catholic Youth Council.

The National Catholic Youth Council is a federation of approved Catholic youth groups in the United States, instituted to promote interchange of information and services as well as unity and cooperation. It makes provision for two sections: the Diocesan section and the College and University section. The Diocesan section is designed to include the respective Diocesan Youth Councils; and the College and University section includes the two national student federations: the National Federation of Catholic College Students and the Newman Club Federation. (For a more detailed discussion of youth work, see the article on the Catholic Youth Movement elsewhere in the Almanac.)

Episcopal Committees

In addition to the above-named departments, the general body of bishops maintains certain special episcopal committees. The following is a partial list of the committees authorized to date:

Committee on American Board of Catholic Missions

Committee on Census

Committee on Confraternity of Christian Doctrine

Committee on Motion Pictures

Committee on the Propagation of the Faith (Foreign Service)

Committee on Clean Literature

Committee for Relief, including subcommittees on the Mexican Seminary, Polish Relief, and others.

All committees work in conjunction with the Administrative Board to which their reports are referred. In the cases of some of these committees, it has been found desirable to establish offices for continuing and organizing work. Relief work is now centralized in one committee composed of members of the Administrative Board of the N.C. W.C. Functioning under this committee are several sub-committees.

The following is a brief sketch of the work done by three of these committees.

(a) Episcopal Committee for Catholic Refugees—The Bishops' Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany, founded in 1934, has become the Episcopal Committee for Catholic Refugees since it has the added burden of caring for Catholic refugees from various other disturbed European countries. The committee maintains headquarters at 265 West 14th Street, New York City. Chairman of the committee is Archbishop Joseph F. Rummel. Other members of the committee are Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, Bishop John F. Noll and Bishop Stephen J. Donahue.

The Committee for Catholic Refugees has a three-fold purpose:

(1) To help bona fide Catholic refugees, both here and abroad, by means of material and spiritual aid, and technical advice. (2) To raise funds for the immediate material needs of the Catholic refugees, as well as for the purpose of assisting them to settle in other countries. (3) To enlist the generous support of American Catholics by reliable information service as to the situation of the Catholic Church in Europe and the needs of European Catholics.

From the beginning the committee was authorized to take care of refugees from Germany. These included so-called Aryan Catholics, either banished from or forced by circumstance to leave Germany because of their prominence as leaders in Catholic Action, and non-Aryan Catholics. Among the latter were Catholic converts from Judaism and Catholics who were married to Jewish spouses or who were descendants of mixed marriages between Jews and Catholics back to the fourth degree.

The so-called Anschluss, by which Austria became a part of greater Germany, and the incorporation into the German political organization of Sudetenland, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Greece and parts of France, have brought about an immense increase in the number of refugees that would naturally fall within the province of this committee's care.

On account of the restrictive immigration laws in the United States many refugees cannot qualify for admission to this country. Hence two new problems have arisen which demand attention, namely, helping to care for refugees in the transit countries, i. e., those countries bordering on Germany which offer temporary hospitality to refugees; and sharing in the cost of transportation to countries which are willing to offer permanent hospitality to refugees.

Furthermore, because of the war many other problems, especially those regarding the transportation of refugees, have presented themselves for solution.

The following are some of the services rendered by this committee: interpretation of the United States immigration laws to European committees and individual refugees; securing, drafting and examining affidavits guaranteeing the support of relatives and friends; special correspondence with American consuls in difficult cases; securing travelers' aid to the place of destination; finding employment and giving relief until such employment has been secured; corresponding for refugees with relatives and friends; endeavoring to make connections for priests and Sisters desirous of establishing themselves permanently in the United States; finding institutions where professionals can exercise their respective vocations.

Besides the Committee for Catholic Refugees in the United States, there are eighteen other similar organizations in Europe, South America, China and the Philippine Islands.

(b) The Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures and the National Legion of Decency — At the annual meeting of the Bishops in Washington, November, 1933, the Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures was formed whose purpose it was to bring about an improvement in screen production, since individual appeal to producers to better the Hollywood standards had been unsuccessful. Members of this committee are: Archbishop John T. McNicholas, Chairman; Archbishop John J. Cantwell, Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop John F. Noll and Bishop Stephen J. Donahue.

Plans for action were formulated, and in April, 1934, the Legion of Decency was formally inaugurated in order to include the personal cooperation of the laity with the hierarchy in endeavoring to prevent the showing of obscene and lascivious pictures. Every Catholic was asked to take the following pledge of the Legion of Decency:

"I condemn indecent and im moral motion pictures, and those which glorify crime or criminals.

"I promise to do all that I can to strengthen public opinion against the production of indecent and immoral films, and to unite with all who protest against them.

"I acknowledge my obligation to form a right conscience about pictures that are dangerous to my moral life. As a member of the Legion of Decency, I pledge myself to remain away from them. I promise, further, to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show them as a matter of policy."

Each year on the Sunday within the octave of the feast of the Immaculate Conception, Catholics in the United States are invited to renew the pledge. The pledge imposes no new obligation, but merely makes explicit that which every Catholic is obliged in conscience to do, namely, to avoid the proximate occasion of sin.

In February, 1936, the Bishops' Committee on Motion Pictures transferred the responsibility for the review and censorship of films from the various authorities in different dioceses, to the Archdiocese of New York. The address of the secretariate of the Bishops' Committee—the office of the National Legion of Decency—is 485 Madison Avenue, New York City. From this address is issued each week a list giving the moral evaluation of current films. The Motion Picture Department of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, which had been reviewing motion pictures for over a decade and had, over this period, published a list of "Endorsed Motion Pictures," was officially designated as the reviewing and classifying group for the Legion of Decency. From February, 1936, to November, 1942, the National office of the National Legion of Decency reviewed a total of 3,969 feature motion pictures, short subjects and newsreels under the four following classifications: Class A—Section 1: Unobjectionable for General Patronage. Class

A—Section 2: Unobjectionable for Adults. Class B: Objectionable in Part. Class C: Condemned.

Legion of Decency activity is carried on not only by the New York office, which has been charged with the responsibility of the moral classification of films, but also by the various dioceses in the country which have, under diocesan directors, diocesan organizations to bring the knowledge of the national motion picture ratings to all the people and to coordinate Legion activity on a diocesan basis.

(c) Episcopal Committee on Clean Literature—A movement originating with the Most Rev. John F. Noll, Bishop of Fort Wayne, several years ago towards a general "clean-up" of publications resulted in the formation of a committee of bishops to deal with the problem. Following his report at the annual meeting of the bishops of the United States in 1938, Bishop Noll was appointed chairman of the committee. The other Bishops on the committee are the Most Revs. Edmund F. Gibbons, of Albany, N. Y., Francis P. Keough, of Providence, R. I., Bernard J. Sheil, of Chicago, Ill., and Urban J. Vehr, of Denver, Col.

By July, 1939, more than 80 bishops had launched drives in their dioceses, being assisted by scores of Catholic lay organizations. Due to concerted efforts, clean-minded Americans have considerably reduced the number of periodicals exploiting evil, sex, and crime which have been polluting the minds of millions. There were 421 such periodicals in circulation at the time the drive began on a national scale.

The second annual report of the Bishops' Committee, published in 1941, stated: "Since our last report we have learned that some of the very men who once published the worst sort of magazines, now discontinued, are doing a thriving business by publishing and placing on sale 10,000,000 copies a month of comic magazines which, however innocent their appeal to children be, are calculated to do great harm to the morals and to prepare school boys and girls for the patronage, at a later date, of just such periodicals as the N. O. D. L. is desirous of removing from circulation."

Every state in the Union, save one, has laws prohibiting the sale of obscene literature. These laws have been more strictly enforced since the N. O. D. L. campaign and new laws have been passed. Notable among the new laws are the Bashore Bill in California and the Kane Bill in Ohio.

The establishment of uniform boards of censors is still in the process of formation. There is no question of censoring anything which approximates art, nor anything which the common conscience of decent men and women of all races and creeds can possibly condone. What is objected to is the exploitation of evil, sex and crime; lewd books, and nude pictures; atheistic and communistic literature; and filthy advertisements of birth control devices, etc. Accordingly, magazines are rated on text, illustration and advertisement. Libraries will find helpful co-operation in the Indianapolis Catholic Information Bureau and Reading Room.

The 1942 Meeting of the American Hierarchy was held at the Catholic University, Washington, D. C., Nov. 11-13, with 102 Archbishops and Bishops in attendance.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, presided at the meeting which was opened by the reading of a personal message from Pope Pius XII expressing his "heartfelt gratitude" for the spiritual and material cooperation extended by the hierarchy, clergy and faithful of America in his "ceaseless efforts to bring to Our suffering children throughout the world every possible assistance in their hour of need."

The American hierarchy returned a cablegram of response thanking the Holy Father for his message and begging his Apostolic Blessing. They pledged anew their best efforts to aid in the fulfillment of his apostolic charity to war victims.

Also read at the meeting was a letter from Cardinal Maglione telling of the satisfaction and joy experienced by the Holy Father on receiving a message of felicitation from the bishops, clergy and faithful of the United States on the occasion of the silver jubilee of his episcopal consecration.

Archbishop Mooney of Detroit, chairman of the Administrative Board of the N. C. W. C., reported that the months since Pearl Harbor "have brought us a further realization of the extent and gravity of our national crisis." He stated that the present programs and policy of the government has affected to some degree the religious and social mission of the Church. The various new tax proposals of the Treasury Department have been protested since all Catholic colleges and institutions are at the disposal of the government to help win the war. The new "man-power" policy has sadly depreciated the necessary workers to staff these institutions. The employment of mothers in war industries has been discussed and the well-organized and well-financed propaganda of groups which promulgate immoral theories concerning the family is being counteracted to a great extent by the Family Life Bureau of the N. C. W. C.

Archbishop Mooney lauded the Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies as one which will strengthen the "Catholic ties in the crisis which faces the Church throughout the world." In conclusion he expressed the thanks of the Archbishops and Bishops to Bishop Noll of Fort Wayne and to the contributors who made the new building, housing the administrative offices of the N. C. W. C. possible, and to the headquarters staff for "a fine sense of loyalty" in the face of "increasingly difficult work."

Archbishop John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, chairman of the Department of Education, reported that the progress of the war, with its radical effect upon all phases of American life, has had direct repercussions upon education and this has absorbed most of the attention and energy of this department. This department has cooperated closely with the United States Office of Education in supplying information to "Key Centers of War Information," has given much assistance to research students, and has compiled statistics on Catholic schools and colleges.

Bishop John Mark Gannon of Erie, chairman of the Press Department, reported that the N. C. W. C. News Service has greatly aided the Catholic press in the presentation of important documents relating to the Church's stand in this war and in clarifying deceits and falsehoods in the war propaganda. The first revision of the Catholic Press Directory since 1932 has revealed that Catholic publications have increased their circulations by nearly 2,000,000 in the past ten years, while the units of the Catholic press increased by 68. The Noticias Catolicas, the special Catholic News Service for Latin America, has enjoyed a very encouraging growth in the past year.

Bishop John F. Noll of Fort Wayne, chairman of the Department of Lay Organizations, reported that the wartime activities of the National Council of Catholic Women were highlighted by "all-out" cooperation with the National Catholic Community Service. The twenty-first National Convention of the N. C. W. C. was held at Hollywood, Fla., and it was apparent at this convention that the women would be equal to the two-fold task of continuing to promote the Bishops' Program of Social Reconstruction and of initiating such services as the nation required of them in this time of war.

The National Council of Catholic Men reported the formation of three new Diocesan Councils. Letters requesting Msgr. Sheen's addresses totaled 175,638. It is estimated that 20 per cent of these letters were from non-Catholics. A total of 242,600 pamphlets containing 734,800 addresses were distributed during the year.

Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara of Kansas City, chairman of the Department of Social Action, reported that this department has carried forward its progress of promoting Catholic social teaching upon economic, civil and international life. This department has stressed the Papal Peace Program in the discussion of specific terms of peace and these will serve as a background for further discussion at conventions and conferences.

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle of Pittsburgh, chairman of the Legal Department, spoke of the changes in national life made necessary by the war: "Churches, schools and social agencies all felt the impact of these new conditions."

Bishop John A. Duffy, chairman of the Youth Department, stated that the youth problem has become more complicated because of the war. "The problems of intellectual and spiritual guidance of youth are no less important though less sensational than the moral problems," the Bishop added. A frightening aspect of the present youth problem is "the relaxation of standards of moral decency among the thousands of young workers now in the nation's capital alone."

Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara, chairman of the Fraternity of Christian Doctrine, stated that the revisions of the Baltimore Catechism and of the New Testament have given immense stimulus to their program. He also mentioned the release of the 750-page commentary on the revised English translation of the New Testament.

The Administrative Board issued a statement on "Victory and Peace," which spoke the minds of the Bishops of the United States. It contained a ringing call for victory for the United States and its allies in the present world struggle, with the warning that we are engaged against an enemy that would create "a slave world," and that compromise is impossible.

Emphasizing the fact that Catholics are exerting every effort in support of the government's war program, and will continue to do so, the Bishops turned to the peace that will follow the current strife and indicated the principles which must underlie it if it is to be just and lasting. "We urge," the Bishops said, "the serious study of the peace plans of Pope Pius XII which insist that justice be inspired by love—first, love of God, and then love of every human being."

They stated that secularism with its narrow vision, exploitation with its greedy might, or totalitarianism with its despotism, cannot write a real and lasting peace. "The spirit of Christianity can write a real and lasting peace in justice, and charity to all nations, even to those not Christian."

Working mothers, 18-year-olds in the armed forces, domination of Poland, the treatment of the Jews and of other defenseless people are the concern of the Bishops and they ask "acknowledgment and respect" for these last and "particularly for our Colored fellow citizens."

They concluded by again urging "unceasing prayer," and by setting aside December 8, the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, the Patroness of our country, as "a special day of prayerful supplication": "In its observance the priests and faithful of every diocese will follow the timely instruction of their Bishops.... Let us all unite in praying for a victory and for a peace acceptable to God."

Executive Department: Supervises and co-ordinates the work of all departments. The Chairman of the Administrative Board presides over the Executive Department which includes the Bureaus of Immigration and Information; Auditing Office; Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

Education Department: Furnishes educational statistics and information; teachers' registration; and Catholic education research.

Press Department: Provides Catholic press in the United States and abroad with news, feature, editorial and pictorial services.

Social Action Department: Deals with studies and programs connected with industrial and civic problems, with rural and family life.

Legal Department: Collects and classifies legal information which is available to dioceses and to all Departments of the Conference.

Lay Organizations Department: National Councils of Catholic Men and Women are the channels through which all the facilities of the above departments are made available to affiliated lay organizations.

Catholic Action Study Department: Disseminates papal encyclicals, allocutions and discourses; maintains a record of Catholic Action in the United States, and assists in furthering Catholic Action.

Department of Youth: Co-ordinates, promotes and assists the activities of Catholic youth groups throughout the country.

THE CATHOLIC YOUTH APOSTOLATE

"Men hope and believe that stability will come out of this present chaos, that settled conditions of life will eventually replace the present uncertainty. Youth must necessarily play a vital part in the attainment of such stability and order. This makes the work of direction and guidance of youth the most important that Church and State can engage in. Our vision of a better day cannot become a reality unless the youth of this hour, who will be the men and women of tomorrow, have developed a character and disposition that favors the arts of civilization and world peace. The Catholic Church, which has lived through the rise and fall of empires, the dissolution of governments and the extinction of great civilizations, sees this problem with crystal clarity. It, alone of all, knows from the experience of centuries, the profound truth that peace and settled social order will come only when the youth of a transitional era are trained mentally, physically and by far above all else spiritually" (Statement of Bishop Duffy to Youth Directors).

Essential Characteristics

The essential note differentiating Catholic Youth Work from all similar secular endeavors is its apostolic character. The Catholic Youth Movement is an apostolate: its sole reason for being is to reform and penetrate the natural, temporal order of society with the spiritual, supernatural truth and vitality of Christ in His Church.

(a) It is a personal apostolate exercised by each one in his (or her) own natural medium of daily life.

(b) It is grouped, coordinated for mutual support and stimulation and to produce the necessary cumulative effect upon society.

Organizational Structure

The broad organizational structure of Catholic Youth work was indicated by the Apostolic Delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, in his letter to the Diocesan Youth Directors of August 25, 1941, as quoted below.

"There has been given to you, Diocesan Youth Directors, the mandate of your own bishops to organize and direct the various groups of Catholic Youth and their labors. Many times recent Sovereign Pontiffs have taught that proper ordering and coordination of these groups is the key to such organization and direction."

"Good order is a fundamental requirement. The first and necessary mark of this order is the approbation of the Ordinary of the diocese. It is his prerogative to say whether or not this or that group is capable of the apostolate. The apostolate comes from Jesus Christ, "I have chosen you" (John 15, 16). And just as the Apostles chose their lay assistants, so do their successors, the bishops. Neither the breadth nor the attractiveness of a program alone suffices for calling it an Apostolate unless those who conduct it are recognized and approved by ecclesiastical authority."

Parochial Groups — Not every Youth group, simply by virtue of being a Youth group, is entitled to representation on the parish, district or diocesan youth council, but only such groups as have been approved by the Ordinary. Note that this approval does not come from any national office of any constituent group, but solely from the Ordinary of the diocese.

"It is clear that the primary center of direction and organization is the parish. It is here, first of all, that the youth forces of the parish should receive counsel and coordination; it is here that each group ought to expend its greatest activity under the direction of the pastor and the bishop. Furthermore, for the sake of good order, the various parochial groups should work together harmoniously, remembering that they labor under the same head and for the same cause. They should avoid harmful rivalries and — what is certainly much worse — enmity and contention among themselves. Let them shun jealousies and the mania for publicity; good results are always more copious when the individual does not seek personal acclaim but submerges himself in the life of the Church.”

Unity in Multiplicity—The more numerous Youth groups are, the more important it is that there be an orderly coordination of their strength.

“The more numerous youth groups are, the greater the need of coordination—unity in multiplicity. We say coordination however, not unification or exaggerated centralization, for each unity ought to be permitted to pursue its proper lines in accordance with its own nature and constitutions.”

Diocesan Coordination—Inasmuch as Youth groups are to participate in the apostolate of the hierarchy, they should adapt themselves to the structure of that hierarchy and be united not only on the parochial level but also on the diocesan level through diocesan centers.

“When we say that these youth groups ought to live in the atmosphere of the parish, this does not mean that they should be parochial in the sense of being isolated, restricted or disunited. They ought to be a part of a large sphere and should, therefore, coordinate themselves with the larger centers. From the very fact that they are to participate in the apostolate of the ecclesiastical hierarchy, it follows that they should adapt themselves to the structure of this hierarchy and be one not only in the unity of the parish, but also one in the unity of the deanery, and the diocese.

“It appears to be, indeed, not only important but necessary that parochial groups be closely connected with the diocesan center, under the vigilant eyes and immediate control of the Bishop, from whom the directive force must spread throughout the entire diocese. Unity of command, unity of action, harmony of purpose, and union of minds—all these advantages are motives that strongly recommend this coordination, to say nothing of the advantages and benefits that derive from the greater facility with which a central office can usually promote the publication of books, pamphlets and other aids.”

National Coordination—Over and above coordination on the parish and diocesan level it is also important that there be some coordination of Catholic Youth forces on the national level.

“In guarding certain positions and effectively defending them and in keeping alive the enthusiasm of the young for the cause of religion, a general organization spreading over the entire nation is of utmost value.”

The approved agency for coordinating the Catholic Youth forces at the national level is, by recommendation of the Holy See, the National Catholic Youth Council.

“In a letter dated April 23, 1940, for communication to the Most Reverend Ordinaries of the United States, His Eminence, Cardinal Pizzardo, president of the Central Office of Catholic Action, expressed the desire that the numerous groups of Catholic Youths in this country be united in a ‘National Catholic Youth Council,’ ‘in order better to promote Christian ideals and better to safeguard the young from the many pitfalls that they encounter.’ Without doubt the vastness of the country renders the formation of a compact national organization difficult but it is evident that at least some small degree of national coordination is possible and even necessary. ‘Vis unita fortior.’”

“There is also before us the encouraging example of other nations and above all the pronouncements and directive norms that have emanated from the Supreme Authority of the Church, the Sovereign Pontiffs. In guarding certain positions and effectively defending them and in keeping alive the enthusiasm of the young for the cause of religion, a general organization spreading over the entire nation is of the utmost value. And it is rendered

The N. C. W. C. Youth Department

After years of study and planning, the archbishops and bishops of the United States decided to develop within the National Catholic Welfare Conference, their official agency for national coordination, a special pattern for united youth work. The first step was taken in February, 1937, when the bishops instituted a Youth Bureau in the Executive Department of the N. C. W. C. To further this project the hierarchy at their general meeting in November, 1940, approved the recommendation that the Youth Bureau be elevated to a regular department of the Conference. On November 15, 1940, the Administrative Board of the N. C. W. C. created the Youth Department.

The National Catholic Youth Council

The National Catholic Youth Council is sponsored by the Youth Department of the N. C. W. C. It was first launched as a project of the N. C. W. C. Youth Bureau and authorized by the Administrative Board in April, 1937. The purpose of the N. C. Y. C. is to federate all Catholic youth groups on a national scale through the medium of an agency functioning under the direction of the hierarchy; to serve as a channel for interchange of experiences and information regarding youth activity and problems; to help Catholic youth groups better to understand and to cope with problems of national importance; to train youth leaders in the methods of Catholic Action in conformity with the directions of the Holy Father and the American hierarchy; to serve as an instrument to represent all Catholic youth-led organizations in the United States, and to do this without interfering in any way with the autonomy and authoritative and receives its sanction from the fact that Bishops have been put at its head. Do not hesitate therefore, to appeal to the Youth Department of the N. C. W. C. for direction, for counsel, for aid, and you will enjoy the grand advantages that derive from it."

The Most Rev. John A. Duffy, Bishop of Buffalo, is the episcopal chairman of the Youth Department, and the Most Rev. Richard O. Gerow, Bishop of Natchez, is the assistant chairman. With the Most Rev. Emmet M. Walsh, Bishop of Charleston, Bishop Duffy is also co-moderator of the National Federation of Catholic College Students. The following Bishops serve as special advisers to Bishop Duffy on the various phases of the youth set-up: the Most Rev. James A. Kearney, on Newman Clubs; the Most Rev. Francis C. Kelley, on Scouting; the Most Rev. Bernard A. Sheil, on Catholic Youth Organization; the Most Rev. Aloysius J. Muench, on the Rural Youth.

the traditional activities of the individual groups.

The N. C. Y. C. encourages the development of youth conferences and congresses on a district, deanery and diocesan basis; and youth leaders' conferences or training courses on a provincial, regional and national basis.

An Advisory Board makes provision for representation of nationwide youth movements as well as securing the co-operation of prominent men and women active in adult organizations serving youth.

The framework of the N. C. Y. C. makes provision for two major divisions as regards membership: the Diocesan Section; and the College and University Section.

(1) The Diocesan Section of the N. C. Y. C. is intended to reach Catholic organized youth throughout the country who are outside the college and university field. These youth groups are reached through the medium of the Diocesan Youth Council, which council is voluntarily associated with the Diocesan Section of the N. C. Y. C.

(2) The College and University Section of the N. C. Y. C. is designed to include the two national student organizations reaching Catholic students both in Catholic and non-sectarian colleges: the National Federation of Catholic College Students; and the Newman Club Federation (see below under Catholic Action in the Schools).

The Diocesan Youth Council is not a youth movement, but, like the National Council, it is a federating agency grouping together all the approved Catholic youth groups (regardless of their labels or particular objectives) operating within the boundaries of the particular diocese. The Diocesan Youth Council recognizes the existence and respects the full autonomy of the various affiliated groups which maintain their traditional set-up and carry out their specific programs. The Diocesan Youth Council makes provision for deanery and parish youth councils. Essentially, it functions through the Parish Youth Council, which in turn is composed of the various youth groups operating in the parish. In parishes where there is only one youth group, this group would function as a Parish Youth Council.

No provision for individual membership in the council is made. Every Catholic boy or girl, young man or young woman, particularly those between the ages of 16 and 25, wishing to join this Catholic youth front, is connected with the Youth Council by reason of membership in one of the approved youth groups. This group holds membership in the Parish Youth Council, which is nothing else than the federation of all the existing youth groups in the parish. The Parish Youth Council is a constituent unit in the Diocesan Youth Council, which in turn is linked up with the National Catholic Youth Council.

Between the Parish Council and the Diocesan Council, provision can be made for a Deanery Youth Council. This simply means the banding together of the individual groups in a deanery, through the medium of the Parish Council.

Thus we see the Catholic youth of the entire country being united in accordance with the traditional lines of hierarchical order—parish, deanery, diocesan, national hierarchy—under full control and direction of the hierarchy and without interference with the useful autonomy or specific activities of any particular group.

Special interest groups organized on a deanery- or diocesan-wide basis are directly represented in the Deanery or Diocesan Youth Council, even though their local units hold membership in the Parish Council. In this way it is possible to make the experiences of such movements directly available to the deanery and diocesan level. On the national level, the Advisory Board of the National Catholic Youth Council serves a similar purpose.

The N. C. Y. C. continues to make marked progress. Up to the time of writing, some 98 Diocesan Youth Directors have been appointed and Youth Councils are operating in a number of dioceses. Regional Conferences of Youth Directors, training courses for youth leaders, and deanery and diocesan conferences for youth are ever increasing in number. The National Federation of Catholic College Students is reaching a majority of the Catholic colleges and universities in this country. Regional units of the N. F. C. C. S., already functioning in the East, are developing in other sections as well. The Federation has also successfully sponsored two national and several regional congresses.

The N. C. Y. C. idea is taking hold generally and once Diocesan Youth Councils have been established in all dioceses and the two Student Federations strengthened, the unification of youth's forces on a national scale will be accomplished.

Catholic Agencies in the Youth Field

(From "Youth-Serving Organizations," by M. M. Chambers)

Catholic Boys' Brigade of the United States

Founded in 1917, the Catholic Boys' Brigade of the United States has its headquarters at 10 W. 76th St., New York City. A "Brigade Monthly" is published.

Membership: Boys aged 12 to 18, about 40,000 in 325 local branches in 28 states, the Virgin Islands and Canada. There are about 500 adult leaders. About 1,500 girls are associate members.

Purpose: To bring Catholic boys under the influence of Catholic training, instruction, association and activities in order that thereby they may become of greater service to God, their country and their fellow-men; to promote in general the spiritual, moral, mental, physical, social and civic welfare of all boys irrespective of race or creed.

Activities: Drill, physical exercises, first aid to the injured, music, athletics, instruction in civics, recreation, sports, outings, camps, parades, nature study, hobbies, woodcraft. Weekly meetings of local units are divided into three periods of equal duration, with varied activities under an adult leader. Conferences and seminars are held locally every month; leadership training courses are conducted at the national headquarters, which also conducts annual competitions in various activities and distributes medals and awards.

Christ Child Society

A welfare organization pledged to the service of children through relief, health and character building. Founded 1896. Headquarters, 608 Massachusetts Ave., N. E., Washington, D. C. A quarterly report is published.

Membership: Approximately 15,000. This includes both senior and junior membership and membership in the college branches. There are 29 local societies and 8 college and academy branches.

Purpose: To aid and instruct poor children and to uplift and brighten their lives; to interest youth in the service of the children of the poor.

Activities: The enterprises of the Washington unit are typical. It provides layettes for new-born infants; maintains a Fresh-Air Farm for convalescent children; supports a free dental clinic at its headquarters; conducts settlement classes and recreational activities in poorer sections of the city; visits children in their homes; pays particular attention to the Christmas wants; and instructs children in religion. Through these various services the local organization reaches about 4,500 children annually. The total number of children reached through settlement-houses is approximately 300,000.

Junior Alumnae of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae

Membership: Senior girls in Catholic high schools and colleges and younger members of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, probably aggregating about 75,000, in local chapters of the I. F. C. A. in 38 states. The membership is restricted to girls doing good work in school and to alumnae interested and active in social or educational service.

Purpose: To offer definite ideals and suitable methods of organization for the preparation of worthy young women for youth leadership and Catholic Action; to give inspiration and information to youth; to encourage local efforts at organizing; to promote good morals; to develop good citizenship; and to preserve good health.

Activities: Encourages students to continue their education; stimulates friendly competition among schools and alumnae associations in educational and athletic matters; assists talented pupils pursuing special studies; organizes study clubs; considers vocational guidance; compiles and distributes book lists and motion picture lists.

Junior Catholic Daughters of America

Membership: Catholic girls age 12 to 18, admitted only on recommendation by a senior order member, approximately 25,000. There are 385 Courts in 37 states, Alaska, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone.

Purpose: To provide an outlet for the natural desire to "belong to a club"; to furnish opportunities to develop the habit of service to others; and to enjoy recreational, charitable and spiritual activities under proper leadership.

Activities: Enterprises of the local units include camps, workshops, hiking clubs, dramatics, dancing, athletic tournaments, glee clubs, orchestras, sewing, cooking, and visiting orphanages, veterans' hospitals, and homes for the aged, to cheer and help the less fortunate.

Junior Daughters of Isabella

Membership: Catholic girls aged 10 to 22, about 2,200. There are 16 active junior circles located in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Rhode Island and the province of Quebec.

Purpose: To promote religious, ethical, cultural, educational, civic and athletic training of Catholic girls.

Activities: Each local circle holds at least one formal meeting each month and is required to have standing committees on religion, education, social affairs, membership, athletics and sick members. The committees conduct their respective activities as fully as local conditions permit. Local adult leaders, who serve without pay, are chosen from the local circle of the senior order.

Knights of Columbus, Supreme Council, Boy Life Bureau: Columbian Squires

Membership: Boys aged 14 to 18, practical Catholics, numbering 21,000, are members of the Columbian Squires, sponsored by the Boy Life Bureau, and founded in 1924. The organization also has 2,300 adult leaders. There are 380 local units or circles, in 47 states and 5 Canadian provinces. Headquarters are at 45 Wall St., New Haven, Conn. They have a monthly publication, "Columbian Squires Herald."

Purpose: To make available to boys during their leisure time a psychologically sound program under qualified and adequately trained leadership; to cooperate, through the Columbian Squires program, with the home, the church and the school, in the cultural, social, civic and physical development of the members.

Activities: Conducts summer schools of boy leadership, first established in 1924. In 1939 and 1940 these were held at six key universities and colleges in different parts of the country and consisted of six days of intensive training in the philosophy and techniques of boy guidance and youth programs, with one or two evening sessions at which fundamental principles of boy leadership were presented by professionally trained representatives from national headquarters, under auspices of local councils of the K. of C. About 18,000 volunteer workers have been trained thus.

The Columbian Squires program is fivefold: physical, social, civic, cultural-educational and religious.

The Sodality of Our Lady

Founded in 1563, the Sodality of Our Lady was later established in the United States. Its headquarters here are at St. Louis, Mo. Its monthly publication is "The Queen's Work."

Membership: Catholic young people of both sexes, approximately 806,800. There are about 9,626 active units in Catholic parishes, universities, colleges, schools of nursing, and parochial schools in all parts of the United States.

Purpose: To foster a fuller Catholic life in parish and school; to further Catholic social action; to develop an energetic religious and spiritual life among Catholic young people, expressed in terms of personal faith, loyalty to Christ, imitation of Mary, and constructive Catholic activity.

Activities: Each unit has a priest director, a central committee, and various committees to carry on specific religious and social features. The national headquarters conducts several yearly Summer Schools of Catholic Action in different cities and operates schools of spiritual leadership at regular intervals in several regions. The general program of the organization embraces the following activities: spiritual, intellectual, social and recreational, Catholic (such as missionary interest, charity work, cooperation with Catholic social organizations), and annual national and local conventions.

Catholic Boy Scouts

The Catholic Committee on Scouting endeavors to "add the supernatural" by means of the following plan of cooperation with the Boy Scouts of America. The National Committee is advisory to the B.S.A., having the responsibility of promoting and guiding cooperative contacts with the Catholic Church in activities relating solely to this field and to the participation and spiritual welfare of Catholic men and boys in Scouting. The National Committee is composed of a Bishop, a Committee of Priests appointed by the Bishop, and a Committee of Laymen; its officers are the officers of the Bishop's committee.

The Bishop's committee establishes policies governing the spiritual welfare of Catholic men and boys in Scouting, and in cooperation with the National Council, B.S.A., develops and establishes policies affecting the participation of Catholic men and boys in the Program of Scouting and the relationship between the Boy Scout Movement and the Catholic Church; it develops and presents to the American bishops plans, as developed in cooperation with the National Council of the B.S.A., for Catholic participation in Scouting through the Local Councils of the B.S.A. and the Diocesan Committees appointed by their respective bishops; it advises the National Council in all matters of policy related to Scouting among Catholic boys.

The Committee of Priests assists the Bishop as requested; it represents their respective dioceses on the National Committee; and it reports to the Bishop annually on all matters pertaining to the spiritual welfare of Catholic men and boys in Scouting in the dioceses.

The Committee of Laymen assists the Bishop as requested; it represents the Laymen's Committee of their respective dioceses on the National Committee; and reports to the Bishop annually on all Scouting matters pertaining to Troops, membership, activities, etc., among Catholics.

The Diocesan Committees are appointed by their respective Bishops; they include the following: a chaplain, a chairman (layman), and a Catholic layman acceptable to the bishop, from the membership of the Executive Board of each Local Council in the diocese. The Diocesan Committee cooperates with the Region and the Local Councils of the B.S.A. within the diocese in promoting Scouting under Catholic leadership, advising the Local Councils in all matters related to Scouting among Catholics, correlates the Scout Program with the entire parish program, etc.

The total number of dioceses now operating under the Bishops' Scout plan is 101. The total membership as of June 30, 1940, is recorded as 4,125 Troops and Packs (including the Philippine Islands).

Specialized Catholic Action Groups

An example of progress in the field of Catholic Action in the United States is the growth of specialized youth movements similar to those originally launched in Belgium and France, and later in Canada. The first attempts to introduce these specialized activities into this country were influenced by the experiences of the J. O. C. (Jeunesse Ouvriere Chretienne, Young Christian Workers) in foreign countries. But soon the clergy and lay leaders realized that American circumstances and needs necessitated an adaptation of terminology and methods. Following are some of the groups endeavoring to maintain a youth apostolate in the form of organic Catholic Action.

Young Christian Workers: Groups are operating in the Dioceses of Manchester and Brooklyn, in Ponca City, Okla., and elsewhere.

University Groups: Several cells are functioning at Notre Dame University with the official approval of Bishop Noll. At the University of Dayton and in other colleges and universities there are Study Clubs concentrating mainly on the study and dissemination of knowledge concerning the nature, purposes and technique of Catholic Action.

Other Groups: The groups mentioned are more or less engaged in specialized Catholic Action, that is, in an organized apostolate restricted to one social milieu.

A number of similar groups using the methods of Catholic Action (small cells, technique of "Observe-Judge-Act," and so forth), yet feeling that they are not yet sufficiently prepared to engage in complete specialization, exist in many localities.

Included in this number are young students and workers, young men and young women, and sometimes mixed groups. These concentrate partly on studies of Catholic Action and personal spiritual formation, but frequently engage in authentic Catholic Action, especially in those places where they have the formal approval of the ordinary.

Catholics and Non-Catholic Youth Organizations

(Statement of the Rev. Vincent Mooney, C. S. C.)

Youth organizations are not new. Latest reliable records reveal that there are at the present time some 400 national, non-governmental youth and youth-serving organizations and agencies in the United States. Some of these organizations are sponsored by the various religious sects; some are developed by laymen who are sincerely concerned with the welfare and training of young people; and some are definitely "front" organizations established by persons not honestly interested in the well-being of youth and who exploit these organizations as a means to an end. Under the guise of humanitarianism, these latter organizations have not only exploited youth, but have gained the support of well-meaning adults who have succumbed to their propaganda.

Recently there has been a mushroom-like growth of organizations whose purposes are built around controversial issues, particularly those centering about national defense and the present world situation.

Catholic youth leaders are naturally faced with the problem of the attitude to be taken towards the youth groups now in existence and those springing up around the country. The question of Catholic collaboration or non-collaboration with these organizations is important. Those organizations should not be ignored, but they certainly must be evaluated. There need be no opposition to some, but others should very definitely be opposed.

There is a basic principle which governs the question of opposition or collaboration on the part of Catholics as regards non-Catholic and secular groups. In substance, it may be stated as follows: Catholic youth cannot and will not cooperate with organizations and agencies definitely committed to a philosophy of life diametrically opposed to the principles which they profess. Whenever it is a question of opposition or collaboration on the part of Catholics, this principle has been applied.

Catholic youth organizations and Catholic youth generally should not commit themselves to any youth movement, federation or agency, without first having carefully studied its objectives and possible ramifications. It is not always easy, however, to evaluate the true nature or objectives of certain organizations. Cleverly worded literature and attractive program schemes often serve to disguise the real purpose behind such organizations. For this reason, no matter how attractive a program may be, it is well not to become involved without first consulting the proper religious authorities. The Church is well equipped to deal methodically with every situation. On a national basis, the N. C. W. C. Youth Department has for one of its objectives the evaluation of such organizations and through direct contacts is in a position to assist in whatever effort is made to evaluate such movements whether it be on a local, regional, national or international scale.

Many of our Catholic youth leaders are convinced that super-organizations, such as the American Youth Congress, the American Student Union, and others, represent lost motion. These people would adhere to that point of view even if there were no other question involved. They do not believe that inter-organizational set-ups of this kind serve a practical purpose. They insist that despite the sincerity of some of the participants, it is definitely impossible to find a common denominator, due to the fact that it is impossible to reconcile conflicting philosophies of life.

In the case of organizations which spring up over night as it were, and are concerned with the promotion of certain opinions in connection with controversial matters, extreme caution should be exercised before any step towards active collaboration is taken. There is considerable danger in heedlessly setting up units of such organizations, even though apparently there is nothing in their objectives which cannot be reconciled with our philosophy of life.

It is true that young people are free to form their own opinion in regard to controversial issues, but by the very fact that they are still in the formative period, they need direction and guidance along these lines. It is by far more beneficial to them to work through existing approved organizations. Provision can usually be made through such organizations to study the principles underlying the various controversial issues and thereby arrive at sound judgments. Dramatic action, based upon aroused emotion by means of clever propaganda, may appeal to the young people at the moment. Such procedure, however, rarely produces profitable results and frequently fosters in the young participants a distorted notion of their true importance in society.

In this youth-conscious age, many forces are feverishly active, re-vamping programs and organizations for youth and setting up new ones. In the midst of confusion and chaos, the Church continues to exercise deep maternal concern over youthful souls. Down through the ages she has provided various means for young people to enable them to solve the problems which confront them. Today, her vigilance is not lacking. The Church stands ready to satisfy every need of our Catholic youth, and her age-old wisdom can be relied upon to serve as a splendid guide in determining the extent of the relations of our Catholic youth with non-Catholic groups and agencies.

CATHOLIC ACTION IN THE SCHOOLS

The role of the school in the formation and continued success of Catholic Action is by no means slight. Many have failed to see what is a rather obvious reason for this fact. After reading the words of our late beloved Pontiff, Pope Pius XI, one must be convinced of the school's very important part in this world force of Catholic Action. In a discourse to the directors of the university associations of Catholic Action in Italy on December 22, 1935, Pope Pius XI said: "University men and women are certainly not on the borders [of Catholic Action], as some one unhappily expressed it recently, but hold a place which is, in a certain sense, the first, and has always been so called by the Pope; just as, to adopt an image from military life, it is the Military Academy which holds first place in the army because it is from it that good leaders, good officers, and a good general staff must be provided. From among the university men and women, therefore, the Holy Father is waiting for a good general staff for Catholic Action."

What is said here about the university, applies in varying degree to other classes of students. It applies, too, to every form and type of Catholic student group. For the school, in truth, is the training camp of life. If Catholic Action is to be the moving factor in the layman's life, he must learn what it is; he must discover the precise part which he must play in bringing all the world to the feet of Christ the King. If the school is to provide Catholic Action with leaders, then the school must teach the student the essentials of Catholic Action.

The following brief outline will give some idea of the progress made in the United States by Catholic student groups that are vitally concerned with student Catholic Action. With the arduous task of initial organization well in hand, the promoters of Catholic Action in our schools may soon see the fulfilment of their plan to "bring into the University Catholic Action every Catholic student on every campus in the country."

The National Federation of Catholic College Students — Since the purpose of the Catholic college is to train the best minds of Catholic youth in a manner conforming to the Truth of Christ, it should be the outstanding source from which the leaders of Catholic Action will come. Until recently however there has been a noticeable lack of unified action on the part of the Catholic colleges in the field of Catholic Action. For this reason the N. F. C. C. S. was formed a few years ago with the object of bringing about an effective solidarity, in thought and action, among all the university men and women on Catholic campuses. Its comprehensive function is to give adequate attention (through its own force and existing agencies) to all professional, cultural, technical and social problems of student organizations. In time it should become a permanent secretariate for information on all matters pertaining to student life in America.

Newman Clubs — The recognized organ of Catholic Action in non-Catholic colleges is the Newman Club. Organized on a very small scale in 1915 it has spread until now there are about 50,000 young persons in 307 Newman Clubs in non-Catholic institutions of higher learning throughout the country. The club has taken its inspiration from the great educator-convert of the last century, Cardinal Newman. Its purpose is to assist Catholic young men and women in secular educational centers to apply Christian thought and principles to the problems of every-day life. The spiritual needs of the students are cared for by the chaplain and annual retreats are fostered. Under his leadership also, study clubs and discussion groups are advanced in which the truths of the Faith are presented in the light of the needs of the students. The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine and the Social Action Department of the N. C. W. C. have led the way for many of the clubs in their discussion and instruction groups. The materials furnished by these two organizations are the nucleus around which the study plan is advanced. By means of the New-man Clubs students in all American colleges and universities are included in the Catholic Action movement.

National Catholic Alumni Federation — The constituent units of this organization are the alumni associations of Catholic colleges and universities. Individual membership also includes Catholic alumni of non-Catholic colleges. The objects of this Federation are to advance effectively the educational and spiritual ideals for which the Catholic colleges of this nation were founded, and to bring into communication the various distinct alumni associations of Catholic colleges.

The International Federation of Catholic Alumnae is a group similar in form to that of the men mentioned above. Its purpose is to further the cause of religion, education, literature and social work, by serving as a medium of communication between the Federated Alumnae and the Catholic schools, thus stimulating interest and action. The organization, now in its twenty-seventh year, sponsors scholarships and other various means of furthering the cause of Catholic education and the training of women leaders in the field of Catholic Action.

Catholic Student Peace Federation is the student section of the Catholic Association for International Peace, which is affiliated with the N. C. W. C. Its aim is to foster Catholic student opinion on questions of peace and neutrality. It takes a definite stand on vital questions regarding peace which are continually being brought before the public by the legislative bodies, by the World War, by the Pan-American policy, or by Communistic organizations.

Pax Romana is a union or confederation of national university Catholic federations of the world. It is a secretariate which links together student federations throughout the world, helping one group of students to profit by the experience of others, lifting local Catholic activity out of its isolation and thus multiplying its beneficial results. Though its activities are many and varied, two are of supreme importance. By study and debate, Pax Romana members formulate a Catholic student opinion on the many far-reaching social, economic and political questions of the day. A continual combat is waged against the sinister influences and subversive societies designed to contaminate the youth of the world.

Theta Kappi Phi — To provide opportunity for Catholic college men to obtain the Catholic philosophy and viewpoint, Theta Kappa Phi fraternity houses have been established at a number of colleges and universities throughout the country. This is in accord with the encyclical of the Holy Father, as a definite part of Catholic Action. In the fraternity is a Catholic atmosphere in which the collegian spends the most impressionable years of his life. It is the daily living with men of the same wholesome religion, background and philosophy that counts. The fraternity has a five-point program of Catholic Action, concerns itself directly with religious activities and requires of the members that they be good practical Catholics.

Theta Phi Alpha — Much like the Theta Kappa Phi for men this sorority fills a large and important role on our secular campuses. It joins together young women in an atmosphere definitely Catholic, a priceless treasure amid the social and educational environment of our colleges. It attempts to furnish its members with a knowledge of the Faith, and to protect it in university and college life. Membership includes Catholic girl students about 16 to 22 and alumnae members of all ages, numbering about 2,650. There are 12 active chapters and 22 city associations. Both Theta Phi Alpha and Theta Kappa Phi are organized along the lines of American fraternities and sororities.

Kappa Gamma Pi — The purpose of this organization is to set a higher standard of character, scholarship, service and leadership by emphasizing the value of scholarly endeavor and by making active and concerted effort for the maintenance of Catholic educational ideals. It is an honorary society to which the graduates of Catholic women's colleges may be admitted by achieving a high scholastic record and extra-curricular prominence. Membership is a reward for undergraduate effort and a stimulus for a life of Catholic Action after college. It fosters scholarships and fellowships, increases the bond between students and alumnae. Kappa Gamma Pi recommends that individual groups join the N. C. W. C. for better work in Catholic Action.

Catholic Students' Mission Crusade — Established in 1918 to build up a general interest in the mission cause, and to promote among Catholic youth of the country a general knowledge of missionary conditions and activities, both at home and in foreign lands, the Crusade now has a membership of 700,000, of whom about 500,000 are between 12 and 24. There are 1,250 senior units (in high schools, colleges and seminaries), 1,590 junior units (in elementary schools), and 70 veteran units (graduate groups). The activities comprise spiritual, educational and missionary aid.

CONFRATERNITY OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE

In January, 1935, the Sacred Congregation of the Council, with the approval of Pope Pius XI, decreed that the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine be established in every parish.

The work of the Confraternity is the spread of knowledge and practice of the Faith by the following means: religious training of Catholic elementary school children not attending Catholic schools, by instruction classes during the school year and in vacation schools; religious instruction of Catholic youths of high school age not attending Catholic schools, in study clubs and by other methods; religious discussion clubs for adult groups; religious education of children by parents in the home; instruction of non-Catholics in the teachings of the Catholic Faith.

Active members serve at least one hour a week or fifty hours annually, and are enrolled in the following divisions: Teachers, who assist priests and Sisters in catechetical work, especially in religious vacation schools and in instruction classes; Fishers (home visitors), who make systematic surveys of the parish, encourage children to attend instruction classes and adults to join discussion clubs, and promote subscription to the diocesan paper; Helpers, who provide facilities for classes and clubs, transport teachers and pupils, assist with preparation of material for religious vacation schools and instruction classes; Discussion Club Leaders, who conduct or attend religious discussion clubs for adults and secular high school students; Parent-Educators, who cooperate with Parent-Educator programs of the Confraternity; Apostles to non-Catholics, who assist in the development of the program for non-Catholics.

The archbishops and bishops of the United States, at their annual meeting in November, 1934, appointed an Episcopal Committee (of three members) on the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. The Episcopal Committee immediately organized a Publications Department of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine and established a National Center as a bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Publications Department.—Under the direct supervision of the chairman of the Episcopal Committee of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, the Publications Department functions through a priest-censor, a secretary and small staff. It publishes texts and pamphlets on organization, teachers' manuals of graded courses of study and religious discussion club aids; at the request of Confraternity officials, supplies exhibits of Confraternity publications and information regarding their use; maintains a catechetical library of textbooks, charts and other visual materials useful in advancing Confraternity objectives.

The Publications Department of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine has issued the following publications which may be procured at the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, Publications Department, 1312 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.; and St. Anthony's Guild, Paterson, N. J.:

National Center.—With a priest director and an efficient staff at Washington, the National Center functions as a clearing-house for Confraternity information, which is made readily available to any diocese desiring it. Since each diocese is autonomous, the establishment, development and program of the Confraternity are directed by diocesan authority, and not by the National Center. Each parish Confraternity carries out its own program of religious instruction as the ordinary may direct.

The National Center sponsors National and Regional Congresses, makes special surveys, supplies factual information and answers inquiries about Confraternity activities and programs. Upon the request of the Ordinary, it supplies the services of an experienced staff member to assist the diocesan director with organization procedure and the development of Confraternity activities. Diocesan directors of the Confraternity have been officially appointed in 107 archdioceses and dioceses of the United States.

Congresses—National congresses of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine are held annually. Regional congresses are held throughout the United States during the year in order to make available to local clergy, religious and laity the programs developed in the national congresses. Each congress is under the patronage of the ordinary of the diocese in which it is held, with the Diocesan Director of the Confraternity as Chairman of the Congress. All dioceses of the province are invited to participate.

Discussion Clubs — To inform the laity, particularly on religious subjects, and to develop the power of self-expression on the part of all members, are the purposes of the religious discussion clubs. Leadership among the laity is a great need of our day; through the discussion club, latent talent is often discovered, and recognized talent is developed.

The discussion club offers all members an opportunity to obtain useful knowledge of the subject studied, without very great expenditure of time.

The discussion club is not merely for exceptional laymen, experts and college graduates, but for all persons of high school years and over, quite regardless of their degree of formal education. It is for busy men and women who come together to obtain exact information, a readiness in expressing it, and an opportunity to translate it into action.

The Discussion Method is preferable to the lecture or stereotyped question-answer method. Little or no thought is required to listen to a lecture and how much of it can the average listener reproduce when he has an opportunity to do so to advantage? Discussion encourages individual thought and expression, stimulates quick thinking and extemporaneous speaking, fosters toleration for the opinions of others and trains leaders in thought and action.

Small groups are informal, and therefore promote freer expression from all members. The discussion club ordinarily has a membership of eight to twelve persons.

The following is a simple plan for the establishment of discussion-club organizations:

(1) A number of leaders are designated and each one enlists the cooperation of a group—all men, all women, or mixed—to form a club ranging in number from six to twelve.

(2) Sufficient copies for each member of the selected text of study are provided from the outset. (The text must be inexpensive, and each member should purchase his own copy.)

(3) After the personnel of the clubs is fairly well agreed upon, a general meeting of all the members of all the clubs and as many other parishioners as are interested is called to explain the movement. Explanation is offered on

(a) the history of the movement and its possibilities; (b) the general plan of the parish organization; (c) the benefits of a unified study program in the parish, and the importance of adherence to schedule; (d) the simplicity of the discussion method (if possible a demonstration should be arranged).

(4) A discussion club of the group of leaders should be formed. The Parish Director or Parish Chairman of Discussion Clubs can act as leader at a weekly meeting of this group to prepare the week's assignment by the discussion method.

(5) The opening date of the semester having been announced, the leaders' club meeting is held to prepare Lesson I of the adopted text.

(6) Each leader is provided on consignment with sufficient materials for his or her club. Each should hold a club meeting for discussion of Lesson I within the week. Leaders' meetings may be held at the rectory or the parish hall; individual club meetings are held in the members' homes.

(7) At the end of the semester a parish review meeting, to which all the members of all the clubs are invited, is held.

(8) Recommended Confraternity report forms are most suitably used to insure smooth-running organization.

The Religious Vacation School—A standard religious vacation school is an organized school of religion conducted for three hours during the forenoon, five days a week, for four weeks during the public school summer vacation. It is for children who do not attend a Catholic school through the regular school year. Its pupils are: (1) children in parishes without schools; (2) children in sections of parishes remote from their schools; (3) children, who though they are within reach of a Catholic school, for a variety of reasons do not attend. Such schools are in operation in every diocese of the United States.

"Our Parish Confraternity"—The Parish Confraternity undertakes to mobilize the apostolic-minded laity of a parish under the direction of the pastor for the religious instruction of neglected children, of youth and of adults, both Catholic and non-Catholic. The monthly, "Our Parish Confraternity," is intended to make its contribution to the same movement. It contains each month signed articles by experienced Confraternity leaders in America and especially by diocesan directors who have the responsibility for the development of the program, and aims to assist in making the Confraternity a vital, pervasive force in every parish and mission in America. In so doing it attempts to give form to the wishes of the Holy See, that "in every parish... there shall be established and before all others... a Confraternity of Christian Doctrine."

The Catholic Evidence Guild

The Catholic Evidence Guild is a lay movement looking to the diffusion of Catholic truth through the instrumentality of outdoor speaking. There has been outdoor speaking and preaching in the Catholic Church since the time of Christ and His Apostles, but the Evidence Guild stems more directly from its precursors in twentieth-century England — the Guild of Ransom and the Barrow Brigade. Outdoor speaking had been incidental to the aims of both these organizations; but it was made primary in the Catholic Evidence Guild, which was founded on April 24, 1918, in Westminster Cathedral Hall, London, and which began its outdoor work in Hyde Park, London, on August 4, 1918.

With outdoor speaking as its primary object, the C. E. G. began the formulation of a formal method of training, consisting of one private meeting a week at which lectures are given (usually by priests) and questions answered, and another private meeting a week at which practice talks are given. The lay guildsman receives this formal training until such time as he is adequately prepared, when he takes an examination before a clerical board established by the Ordinary, and if successful is ready for his outdoor speaking.

Pitches (outdoor meeting places) are maintained in advantageous spots in the locality, and the licensed guildsmen speak there at regular hours each week. Each guildsman gives a talk on the subject in which he is licensed and then answers questions on that subject (only) whereupon he gives way to another licensee with another subject. A chairman — that is, one who holds a number of these limited licenses and who has shown himself competent to conduct a meeting and to answer general questions — is in superintendence at all outdoor meetings, ready to relieve the unsuccessful speaker, to answer questions which the speaker could not answer on his own subject, and to answer all other questions asked, if possible. It is a primary rule of the Guild never to give an answer of which the speaker is uncertain, but rather to admit the limitations of his knowledge and to offer to provide an answer at the next meeting.

The Guild talks are always doctrinal and expository — never extra-doctrinal or hortatory. Priests are invited to speak from the Guild platforms occasionally, and the "preaching" is left to them.

The Guild has a regular program of spiritual activities, which requires spending a time in adoration before the Blessed Sacrament equal to the time spent in outdoor speaking. Retreats, Communion breakfasts, and prayers and devotions are also maintained.

There were approximately 50 Guilds in England before the War and probably there are as many still. The Westminster Guild, for example, has operated without let-up despite black-outs, air raids, etc. Guilds have also been formed in Scotland, Australia, India and the United States.

Guild work in the United States dates from 1931, although outdoor speaking was inaugurated here as early as 1917 by David Goldstein and his associates. American Guilds are presently operating in Washington, D. C., Baltimore, New York City, Detroit, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Kansas, New Orleans, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Waterbury, Conn., and Belleville, Ill.

The Catholic Evidence Bureau of the National Council of Catholic Men, 1312 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington, D. C., has interested itself in the furtherance of the Guild Movement, and additional information may be procured at that address.

Catholic Campaigners for Christ

Mrs. Martha Moore Avery and David Goldstein, who had been Socialist agitators before their conversion to Catholicism, late in 1916 conceived the idea of expounding Catholic doctrine from an outdoor public platform, just as they had theretofore expounded Socialist doctrine from the "soap-box." With the approbation of His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, they, with a few interested friends, constituted themselves the Catholic Truth Guild of Boston, and arranged for the construction of a special auto-van which would provide them with a sort of traveling rostrum. On July 1, 1917, this was blessed at a public ceremony by Cardinal O'Connell and on July 4 the first open air meeting was held on Boston Common. In the next ninety days, eighty such meetings were held at various cities and towns of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and, at the end of that time Mr. Goldstein, with an assistant, Arthur B. Corbett, set out from Boston on a cross-country tour to San Francisco and back.

The Guild continued to hold outdoor meetings in and around Boston, and in 1930 Mr. Goldstein began another speaking tour on which, save for several relatively brief intervals, he has since been engaged. His aide was Theodore Dorsey, another convert, who has developed outdoor speaking activities in the Diocese of Seattle.

Mr. Goldstein's work is much like that of the Catholic Evidence Guild, in that he gives doctrinal talks and answers questions; he does not, however, invite oral questions, but takes them in writing.

In 1935 the name of the Catholic Truth Guild was changed to Catholic Campaigners for Christ.

Street Preaching

Early in 1932 Rev. S. A. Leven and Rev. V. J. Reid, assistant pastors of St. Joseph's Old Cathedral, organized a Catholic Evidence Guild in Oklahoma City. They established their first outdoor pitch or "stand," as they chose to call it, on the courthouse lawn of that city on Monday, April 11, 1932. They immediately began a class for the training of lay speakers, and in July of that year two laymen were licensed. These two laymen entered the seminary in the fall and no others of the laity have since been licensed. Shortly thereafter other Guilds were established in Geary, Cushing and Bristow, in that diocese.

Partly as a consequence of the lack of lay speakers and partly as a consequence of local conditions, the Guild Movement in that section of the country has diverged considerably from that obtaining in England and in the Eastern cities of the United States. The outdoor platforms are manned altogether by priests, and the object is to "preach" rather than to give merely straightforward expositions of Catholic doctrine and practice.

Other variants have included the establishment of "Catholic Revivals" — maintenance of meetings in one locality on a number of consecutive nights with hymn singing, sermons, etc. — the distribution of apologetical literature, etc.

The Catholic Lay Apostle Guild

In the summer of 1935 the Catholic Lay Apostle Guild, founded by Rosalie Marie Levy, a convert from Judaism, began holding meetings on the streets of New York City at which questions on Catholic doctrine were answered. The Lay Apostle Guild differs from the Evidence Guilds in that no talks are given, and in that the answers are given directly to the questioner rather than to the entire assemblage, whereas the Evidence Guildsmen answer questions from a raised platform in a voice loud enough to be heard by all who care to listen.

Rural Motor Missions

For a half-dozen years now priests in various parts of the country have been conducting mission services for the benefit of the unchurched millions of rural America. These priests have come to be referred to as motor missionaries. They go out into the country districts in large auto vans, fully equipped with facilities for Mass and other religious services, and with living quarters for the missionaries. Through the efforts of these missionaries the doctrines of the Church have been brought to hundreds of thousands who had little or no knowledge of them. Converts have been made — here and there a sufficient number of them to warrant the establishment of a new church. Approximately a dozen such churches have been built during the past five or six years. The latest one was just recently blessed by the Most Rev. Paul C. Schulte, Bishop of Leavenworth. It stands in Linn County, Kansas, at the spot where the American Beata, Rose Philippine Duchesne, began work among the Indians in 1841.

This motor mission work is today being carried on in more than twenty dioceses. The past summer saw the usual corps of workers in the field. While tire and gas shortage affected activities somewhat in two dioceses, this was counterbalanced by more extensive activities in other dioceses.

In some dioceses both secular priests and members of different religious orders are engaged in this rural missionary activity. This is the case, for instance, in the Diocese of Leavenworth. In some dioceses all this motor mission work is done by secular priests. This is true, for instance, of Springfield, Ill. All in all, more than a dozen different religious orders participate in this work.

Full details of the far-flung and rapidly growing motor mission work cannot be given in a brief sketch here. The writer is convinced that this work holds out the greatest promise of all for the building of a strong rural Church in America.

Among the main groups carrying on motor mission work are the following:

The Fathers of the Congregation of Mary center their work at St. Mary's Seminary, Perryville, Mo., which is in the Archdiocese of St. Louis. They include in their motor mission territory seven or eight surrounding dioceses.

The Paulist Fathers have centers in four different parts of the country. Perhaps their main center is that at Winchester, Tenn. During the past summer a new "chapel on-wheels" began operating out of Harriman, Tenn. It is in charge of Fr. C. C. O'Donnell, C. S. P.

The Redemptorist Fathers' headquarters is at Newton Grove, N. C. They hold motor missions throughout the state of North Carolina.

The Diocesan Missionary Fathers are secular priests constituting a mission band in the Diocese of Richmond. Their headquarters are in the city of Richmond. From there they go out on trips through Virginia, some of them running into weeks.

The Home Missioners of America, located at Glendale, Ohio, also have members engaged in motor mission work. These Home Missioners were started five years ago. Today three distinct missionary fields are occupied by the first class ordained under the auspices of this new missionary society. The society aims to work chiefly in the large number of counties in the country that have as yet no resident priests.

THE NARBERTH MOVEMENT

Early in 1929 a small group of men of the parish of St. Margaret at Narberth, Pa., decided to answer the plea of the Vicar of Christ for Catholic Action, with a neighborhood apologetical movement. A committee of seven was formed, with the pastor as censor. A parish rally was called, plans unfolded, money raised — and the movement began under the name: Catholic Information Society of Narberth.

To 500 non-Catholic neighbors went a letter, frankly stating the plans and purposes of the society. From then on the plan has been simply to mail each month to all on the list an envelope containing a pamphlet prepared by the founder and director of the movement, Karl Rogers, who died in 1942. These messages have no semblance of religious tracts, but are little chats from one neighbor to another, which can be read in two minutes. Each explains in a simple and interesting manner one of the many things which non-Catholics do not know or do not understand in its true light. They are never combative. They do not mention Protestant creeds or the lack thereof. They are friendly, informative, courteous, but never compromising.

The front page of each pamphlet is devoted to a short title. Some state interesting facts, such as: "What 360,000,000 people believe"; "76,705 people became Catholics in the U. S. A. last year." Other titles take from the mouths of accusers their very own words, such as: "Is the Catholic Church the church of the ignorant?", "But Catholics go to church because they have to!" The answers are brief, cheerful, reasonable and authoritative, ending always with an invitation to write for an explanation of any other Catholic belief or practice.

The work has the blessing and sanction of Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia. Each pamphlet receives the official approval of the Diocesan Censor of Books. Fifty members of the hierarchy, many nationally known priests and other authorities have not only highly praised this work but have urged that it be spread throughout the land. During the past several years the society has been trying to do this by furnishing the full plan to other societies elsewhere and by printing for them these same pamphlets, ready to be mailed in their own localities.

The pamphlets of the society have been reprinted each month in the N. C. W. C. Feature Service and elsewhere, so that its work is now known in all of the 48 states and in 21 foreign countries. Inquiries have been received from more than 3,000 people; and from the resulting correspondence there have been established 76 Catholic Information Societies, each using the same, simple plan, and mailing out the pamphlets which are furnished ready-printed from Narberth, with the name of the respective society and committeemen on the back.

About 160 lay groups are now publishing the Narberth pamphlets in their local secular papers as free feature articles. They are now appearing in more than 400 such papers each week, reaching well over 2,750,000 non-Catholics, creating good-will and understanding, and pleasing the editors because they are adding interest-value to their columns. One of the advantages of this type of the Apostolate of the Word is that the cost is almost nothing, for Narberth supplies for merely a small supporting fee, 52 articles set up in newspaper style, and ready to be passed on to the editor, together with a complete plan for arranging the work, etc.

Anyone desiring to know more of the Narberth Movement, can obtain free a descriptive folder, or for $.24 in stamps the complete literature and samples of either the newspaper or pamphlet plan, or for $.48 samples of both plans. Address: Catholic Information Society of Narberth, Box 35, Narberth, Pa.

SOCIETY OF ST. VINCENT DE PAUL

The story of the Industrial Revolution is one of misery, greed and human exploitation seldom equaled in the history of mankind. Governments, allowing industry and commerce to expand with no restrictions placed by social legislation, neglected to meet the situation. In the chaos that resulted the Church found a new challenge and a new opportunity.

That challenge came to the ears of Frederick Ozanam, a 22-year-old student of the University of Paris, in a cynical taunt: "Christianity in other times has indeed worked wonders. But today it is dead. You Catholics are very proud of your faith, but what are you doing for the poor? Where are your good works manifesting the value of your faith and compelling us to embrace it?" Young Ozanam and his associates had often and ably defended the historic Church in the public refutation of such calumny. But now the challenge seemed to demand present action. Calling his companions together, Ozanam asked them: "Does it not seem to be time to join action to words and to affirm by works the vitality of our faith?" Thus animated, in 1833 they formed the first Conference, choosing St. Vincent de Paul for their model and patron, and took upon themselves the visitation of the poor in their homes.

Its organizers, mindful that social reform is a matter of individual reform and concerns itself primarily with self-reform, never intended that the Society was to live beyond their college days, much less to extend beyond the walls of the university. They merely intended a society whereby they could help one another in the practice of a Christian life. But others, attracted by the beneficial results that were evident in France, encouraged the spread of the Society. In 1836 a Conference was established in Rome, and in 1844 one was founded in England and Ireland. The first Conference in the United States was formed in St. Louis, Mo., in 1845, and before long it had spread to Chicago, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia and Buffalo.

The works of the Society are an embodiment of the corporal and spiritual works of mercy. They include: spiritual and material comforts for inmates of hospitals and institutions; care of poor and neglected children, religious instruction of public school students, country vacations for the underprivileged, and the purchase of books for the poor attending parochial schools; providing Christian burial for the poor and friendless; furnishing food and shelter for homeless transients; giving legal advice for those who require it; and many other works of charity.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul is a pious association with complete independence of ecclesiastical authority as regards its existence, its constitution or organization, its statutes, its activity and internal government. The Society has been praised, encouraged and enriched with many indulgences by Popes Gregory XVI, Pius IX, Leo XIII, Pius X, Benedict XV, Pius XI and Pius XII. Active membership is limited to practical Catholic men over 18 years of age and requires attendance at at least three weekly meetings of the Conference each month and a weekly visit to the poor family or families assigned to the members. Honorary members are practical Catholic men who do not join actively in the works of the Society, but who make an annual offering of a fixed sum of money.

The Council General, located at Paris, France, maintains general jurisdiction over the Society throughout the world. The Society in national divisions is administered under the supervision and direction of a Superior Council. The Metropolitan Central Councils have jurisdiction in the territory of ecclesiastical provinces, and the Diocesan Central Councils in the dioceses in which they are organized. Particular Councils are established in cities or towns where there are three or more Conferences. The Conference is the unit of the organization of the Society and is based upon parish lines. The Society has 50 Conferences of colored men and several Particular Councils of white members for the advancement of the Negro, of which the most active is in Portland.

The headquarters of the Society in America known as the Superior Council is located at 289 Fourth Avenue, New York City. There are 2,500 units of the Society in this country with a membership of 25,500 and during the past 26 years $50,000,000 have been distributed to the poor by the members. In the same period of time 13,000,000 visits were made to the poor. In 1941 alone, 646,000 such visits were made.

THE CATHOLIC LAYMEN'S ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA

The Catholic Laymen's Association of Georgia was organized in 1916 "to bring about a friendlier feeling among Georgians, irrespective of creed." Its organization was occasioned by a wave of religious bigotry, fomented for political purposes, which culminated in the passage of a "Convent Inspection Bill," the first of a contemplated series of anti-Catholic laws.

With the sanction of their Bishop, the laymen of Georgia gathered to consider the situation. They concluded that the anti-Catholic prejudice was, for the most part, based on the campaign of misinformation that self-seeking political leaders had been conducting for nearly a generation, and they inaugurated a counter-campaign of education.

They set up an information bureau in Augusta, under the direction of James J. Farrell, a former newspaper man and Chamber of Commerce official, distinguished for his knowledge of the Faith. They inserted advertisements in the newspapers of Georgia offering to answer inquiries about the Catholic faith and its practice. Every misrepresentation of Catholic teaching in the press of Georgia was collected and answered. Pamphlets, explaining religious subjects most commonly misunderstood, were published. These zealous and energetic Catholic laymen likewise distributed literature, and placed "The Catholic Encyclopedia" in public, university, college and school libraries of Georgia. Anti-Catholic prejudice in Georgia was further dispelled by the establishment of a Catholic newspaper as a channel of communication to both Catholics and non-Catholics, and by the foundation of a Catholic circulation library. Having passed the first quarter of a century of its existence, the Association never was more vigorous or more active than it is today, in the episcopacy of the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, D.D., the third Bishop of Savannah-Atlanta since the inception of the work. Bishop Benjamin J. Keiley and Bishop Michael J. Keyes, S. M., were the former prelates who aided the work.

The presidents of the Association have been, in the order named: A. J. Long; the late Col. Jack J. Spalding, K. S. G., K. M., Laetare Medalist; Thomas F. Walsh, K. S. G.; the late Capt. P. H. Rice, K. S. G.; and Alfred M. Battey. The executive secretaries and editors of "The Bulletin," the Association's publication, have been the late James J. Farrell, 1916-20, Richard Reid, K. S. G., 1920-40, and the present editor and executive secretary, Hugh Kinchley. The Association has branches in seventeen Georgia cities; all its services to non-Catholics are free. The effect of the work of the Laymen's Association is indicated by the fact that whereas in the early days of its work it was necessary to write as often as one hundred times a week to newspapers to correct misrepresentations, most of them editorials, the average now is two a month; and the objectionable references today are usually in the communications rather than in the editorials or news columns.

THE LEGION OF MARY

On September 7, 1921, fifteen women met in Dublin, under the direction of a priest, to form a society for visiting the sick poor in the Dublin Union Hospital. They knelt around a table on which were a statue of Our Lady of Grace, two vases of flowers and two candles. The rosary with invocation and prayer to the Holy Ghost were recited, followed by spiritual reading. Plans for the work were drawn up; officers were elected; a weekly meeting was arranged; and the meeting ended with prayer.

The following Wednesday evening the second meeting was held. Reports of their hospital visits were submitted by members.

Soon the Legion grew in numbers and in scope. In 1927 it had thirteen units in the city of Dublin itself and had extended its operations to Waterford, Ireland. From then on its expansion was phenomenal: 1928, Scotland; 1929, England; 1931, United States and India; 1932, Canada and Australia; 1933, New Zealand, Africa, West Indies; 1937, China and Burma; 1938, Costa Rica; 1939, Malta; 1940, France; 1941, Philippines. There is hardly any type of work for souls that does not pertain to the Legion of Mary. And the work has proved adaptable to men as well as to women.

What precisely is the Legion of Mary? It is an answer to the appeal of Pope Pius XI for Catholic Action. For some years there had been a movement on foot in the Church to quicken the failing pulse of the lax Catholic through the lay apostolate. The Legion is an organization whose sole aim is to bring back the lost sheep into the fold. Men and women the world over, of staunch faith and unshakable principle, realize they can share in the work of saving souls by personal contact, by sympathetic interest and by Catholic devotion.

They pledge themselves to the service of Christ in a manner that requires a love for those who have strayed, a spirit of prayer and some small portion of their time and energy. Once each week they meet under the supervision of a priest: they recite the rosary to gather strength and grace for a visit to the home of a man who does not receive the sacraments, a woman who attempted marriage outside her Church, a mother who neglected to have her child baptized. Such visits require tact and prudence on the part of the legionaries as well as lips sealed with a promise of secrecy. Occasionally they are turned away, though they must never be discouraged or disheartened. Generally, they are courteously, even joyfully, received.

The nomenclature of the Legion comes from ancient Roman military practice. In olden times the Roman Legion symbolized the acme of courage, discipline, honor, endurance, success and loyalty. So, these men and women who would enroll under the standard of the Blessed Mother, must show these virtues or traits in a supernatural way.

A local branch of the Legion is called a Praesidium; in Roman times this meant a fortified post or garrison, a detachment of Legionaries on special duty. In a district where two or more Praesidia exist, a Curia is formed. Each Praesidium is called after a title of the Blessed Mother, e. g., "Queen of Apostles." The Curia assembles at least once a month, and to every meeting each Praesidium sends its spiritual director and four delegates. The governing body for a country or a region is styled a Senatus. The supreme governing body of the Legion of Mary for the whole world is called the Concilium, and is permanently resident in Dublin.

The Legion of Mary is open to all Catholics who (a) are at least eighteen years of age (this condition applies to active Legionaries only), (b) lead edifying lives, (c) are animated with the spirit of the Legion, (d) are prepared to do every duty which membership in the Legion involves. There are, in all, four degrees or types of Legion membership these enabling every type of Catholic to lend some worthwhile aid to the work of the Legion, which is truly the work of Christ. There are in the United States about 10,000 members in 70 dioceses. A quarterly, "Maria Legionis," is published.

The following is a sample of the results obtained during the course of a single year by a mere handful of Legionaries in a large city parish in Washington, D. C.: fifty persons returned to the sacraments; fifteen infants were baptized; fourteen marriages were validated; several persons were instructed in the Faith and embraced the Church; many were persuaded to join the different parish organizations for the benefit of their souls. These figures might be multiplied a thousand times to gain a bare estimate of the work of Mary's Legion throughout the United States and the world.

The argument, therefore, that laymen and laywomen are unfit for such a mission has become outmoded. An organization is judged by the results that it produces. While people expect a fatherly interest on the part of their priests, they can be trained to look for a brotherly interest on the part of their fellow parishioners. The careless Catholic knows the priest is a shepherd: he is amazed to learn that lay people are likewise shepherds. Amazement quickly turns to admiration, admiration to respect, and respect to imitation. There is no power in the world so effective as the power of example.

CATHOLIC THEATRE

National Catholic Theatre Conference—Established in 1937 for the advancement of common standards and the development of common action in the theatre beyond Broadway, the National Catholic Theatre Conference is the clearing-house for forty major producing groups in as many cities.

From 1937 to 1941 the Conference headquarters was located at the Catholic University of America, where the first annual convention was held. Since 1941 the Conference has been established at 316 West 57th Street in the same building which has housed the very successful Blackfriars Theatre under the direction of Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P., and Rev. Thomas Carey, O. P.

During the year 1941 the work of Conference members throughout the country has reflected a growing emphasis on the professional quality of the work, without in any degree sacrificing the non-professional or community quality which is such a vital part of the tributary theatre.

Parish, college and community theatres work out in the Conference a truly democratic pattern in theatre. Each group preserves its own identity: national planning is accomplished through the sharing of common experience. The Conference follows no one school of thought in stage technique or economic belief. It has no special subsidy or endowment: it is financed solely by the fees of its members.

The chief accomplishments of the Conference to date are: a national service bureau which handles inquiries from all over the country; regional play festivals in which neighboring college and community theatres have come together on successive evenings to do great plays from the Catholic tradition; encouragement of college touring such as was undertaken several seasons ago by the Catholic University's production of Walter Kerr's "God's Stage"; increasing use of guest stars from the professional stage; new emphasis on summer departments of drama in the larger colleges; increasing use of new plays; collaboration with Longmans, Green & Co. on "Theatre for Tomorrow," first modern volume to give the historic and contemporary perspective of the Catholic tradition in drama.

A monthly production calendar now replaces the "Quarterly," which was the first official publication of the Conference. Special services to members include a reading service for play scripts at a nominal fee; royalty reductions for members on a selective list of good plays each season; special technical advice on production where this is at all feasible.

Present officers of the Conference are: chairman, Emmet Lavery; vice-chairman, Jo Mielziner; secretary-treasurer, Helen Purcell; assistant treasurer, Florence McBride. Members of the executive committee are: Rev. John L. Bonn, S. J.; Sister Camillus, I. H. M.; Walter Kerr; Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P.; Rev. Karl G. Schroeder; Mrs. Christopher Wyatt. The present chairman is resident playwright at Smith College on a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation; the vice-chairman is a noted scene designer from the professional theatre.

The future objectives of the Conference are: simultaneous production of new plays, both regionally and nationally; new balance of interest between professional and non-professional stage by diversion of fine talent to service with parish, college, community theatres; new realization of play production as a community experience by enabling more and more people, under trained guidance, to participate in the creation of good theatre.

Blackfriars Guild — An older and highly specialized group in the Conference is the Blackfriars Guild. Its purpose is to sponsor and unify Catholic Dramatic Chapters of superior quality. The Guild was founded by the Dominican Fathers of the Province of St. Joseph. Although founded by the Dominicans, diocesan priests and priests of other religious orders also act as moderators.

There is a national organization made up of a director general and an executive board composed of the moderator and one lay delegate from each chapter. Members of each chapter must meet and maintain high standards. This usually demands a city-wide organization. Parish groups seldom supply enough talented actors and workers. Each chapter is autonomous being able to make its own by-laws. Aspirants to each chapter must first become associate members and serve until proven worthy. They then may be voted active members. In addition to a board of governors each chapter has a moderator who gives the viewpoint of the Church. The moderator presides at meetings, is spiritual leader, has an overrideable veto on plays and members.

Discipline plays a prominent part. Waiting lists and trial periods of work give desirability. And suspension for minor infractions together with resignation for major infractions keep members alert.

When possible, roles are rotated. Hiring of professional directors, scenery and costumes is discouraged. The writing of their own plays is the ideal aimed at. In plays religion and social reform are not overemphasized at the cost of entertainment value.

Full-fledged organizations are operating in Lowell, Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Washington, Rochester, Madison, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Dayton and New Orleans. During the past year new chapters have been opened in New York City, New Haven, Conn., and Troy, N. Y. Affiliated groups are functioning in Chicago, Columbus, Altoona and San Antonio. Several others are in the process of formation.

In New York, at 316 W. 57th Street, the Guild has established an experimental theatre for the production of new plays under Fr. Urban Nagle, O. P. New York is undoubtedly the most dangerous place to launch a Little Theatre, but the Blackfriars' Theatre has been a success notwithstanding this obstacle. To overcome it they have worked with professional casts and original plays. In the 1941-42 season "Song out of Sorrow" by Felix Doherty and "Savanarola" by Rev. Urban Nagle, O. P., were outstanding in their appeal to the public.

Blackfriars Recordings is sponsored by the Washington chapter. This endeavor is concerned with the preparation of recordings of the lives of founders of religious orders and congregations and of conspicuous saints. One on Mother Seton was released in 1940.

Catholic University School of Drama—Blackfriars, in 1937, started the School of Drama at the Catholic University in Washington and since that time have been intimately connected with it through the teaching and production staffs.

Courses are offered in all phases of speech, radio and drama work including costuming, make-up, stage designing, lighting, direction, oral reading, playwrighting, methods of rehearsing, drama history, and organization of dramatic recitals. A Master's Degree in Drama is also possible. Besides the curriculum of the school year there is also a program for summer school.

Connected with the department is a theatre whereby the practical aspects of theory are carried out. The success of this theatre within the past few years has proven the worth of the School of Drama. To incite the students to a fuller appreciation in this work it is the custom, where it is possible, to have a prominent professional player take a leading role in the theatre productions. In the 1941-42 season the theatre group staged "Art and Prudence," which is due to be shown on Broadway, and "Count Me In," a musical revue by Walter Kerr and Leo Brady of the staff, shown on the professional stage in 1942. It was through this group that "Brother Orchid," an original play by Leo Brady, staff member, made its appearance.

Catholic Dramatic Movement — In the Middle West the leading organization is the Catholic Dramatic Movement. In its first form it was known as the Catholic Dramatic Publishing Company. It began with a few plays written by its founder and a handful of authors. The task of interesting the clergy and laity began. Early friends generously responded and the scope of the Movement widened. New and better plays were added until today it has a catalogue of 150 plays.

In 1927 the Catholic Dramatic Guild was formed to increase interest in good drama and aid Little Theatre groups to stage better productions. The Guild membership comes from the United States for the greater portion; however, Canada, Australia, Ireland and England are also represented. There are about 300 Guilds, with an individual membership of approximately 9,000. Members receive from ten to twenty free copies of plays, reductions in royalties, a subscription to "Practical Stage Work," a free year book, and other privileges. There is an Information Bureau for stage and technical problems. "Practical Stage Work," is the first illustrated stage magazine for parish and school stage.

The Production Department was founded in 1937 to counteract the lowliness and Communism of the professional theatre. A Training School for young Catholic men and women was established at Oconomowoc, Wis. The course was for four months. This school, now known as the School of Dramatics, gives a full nine-months series of courses in directing, acting, stage craft, designing, literature, speech, music appreciation, apologetics, religious educational methods, recreational activities, and study clubs. Students wishing to enroll must have at least a high school education or its equivalent. A Catholic Summer Theatre was inaugurated in 1942 and met with great success. Six plays were given in six weeks, with three performances each week. In 1942 also a Children's Summer Theatre was organized in Milwaukee. The children gave a performance every Wednesday during the vacation months. A new idea in the Children's Theatre was the production of a children's Passion Play. All characters of this play are true children's characters and are portrayed by children. The Children's Theatre continues during the school years. Most of the work is done on Saturdays. Special training is given after school hours at the School of Dramatics and at the parochial schools throughout the city. The children are also being trained in radio work and give radio programs.

In response to the demand for Catholic plays of Little Theatre, College and University Theatre caliber, the Catholic Little Theatre Guild was formed in 1940. It is a branch of the Catholic Dramatic Movement and has for its purpose the propagation of a more potent, more vital Catholic Theatre, by means of greater, more artistic, and more dramatic plays. It intends to do this, first of all, through a discriminating selection of plays that have a theatrical value and that are not opposed in any way to the Catholic philosophy of life.

Membership is open to all theatrical groups with a semi-professional status, or a status equal to that of a semi-professional group. Many special privileges are offered to members of this group.

An attempt has been made to maintain a group of professional Catholic actors with the purpose of staging good Catholic plays in a dramatically and technically perfect way and so to create a professional Catholic Theatre. Religious and modern plays of a Christian character have been staged in Milwaukee and Chicago, and in other cities throughout Wisconsin and Illinois. The great event of the year is the annual production of the Milwaukee Passion Play given by "The Players Guild" of the production department of the Catholic Dramatic Movement. It uses a cast of from 75 to 100 players. The play, written by Father Helfen and published by the Catholic Dramatic Movement, is a tremendous soul-stirring production.

The overgrowing activities of the C. D. M. prove the power and potentialities of the Catholic Theatre, from the Children's Theatre to the trained and experienced actors. The war has taken the young men of the Little Theatre groups and the older ones of the parish dramatic clubs. But at the same time the growing elimination of traveling facilities has increased the necessity of decent entertainment and of making the theatre a cultural factor. The war of ideologies proves the importance of ideas in every phase of life, and theatre is life. This has been the leading principle of the C. D. M. since its founding by Father Helfen about twenty years ago.

A Catholic Motion Picture Industry, Radio and Television are all a part of the program of the Movement. Radio programs are already being given in Milwaukee and additional programs will be organized throughout the country as facilities increase. All the varied groups of activities in the Catholic Dramatic Movement follow the slogan: "Catholic Action in Action."

The national headquarters of the Catholic Dramatic Movement and its School of Dramatics is located at 325 Kilbourn Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

The Catholic Actors Guild of America, Inc.—Among professional actors the Catholic Actors Guild of America plays a vital part. Founded in March, 1914, by the Rev. John Talbot Smith and a small group of enthusiasts, the Actors Guild has grown and developed into the leading organization of its kind in the country. Its first president, Jerry J. Cohan, was the head of a group of twenty-five members. His son, George M. Cohan, who died in November, 1942, was the president of more than twelve hundred members.

The reasons for the existence of the Guild are definite and enduring. It exists for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the people of the theatrical profession; it gives to its members an opportunity to know something of the problems and life of the theatre and encourage them to bring to their work the inspiring ideals and high principles of their faith.

The ecclesiastical authorities of the Archdiocese of New York granted permission for the establishment of the Guild and they have always manifested a sympathetic interest and regard for the work of the Guild. Cardinal Farley approved the plan of the Rev. John Talbot Smith to found the Guild, and later Cardinal Hayes lost no opportunity to speak with pride and confidence of its efforts and accomplishments. Bishop Stephen J. Donahue commended the Guild and its members for their splendid work and adherence to fine and worthy principles displayed during the twenty-eight years of its existence. The Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York, as well as other prominent members of the Catholic hierarchy throughout the United States, have approved its work and aims.

The work among the actors has many phases. Young and inexperienced amateurs come in large numbers to the offices of the Guild for counsel and a helping hand. To these the Guild has been most useful, both by advice and by financial assistance, and has often been their only resource in hours of direst need. The Guild's efforts are not confined to Catholics alone. Other races and creeds find its ready and willing assistance.

The activities of the Guild are numerous. During the winter months tea is served several afternoons a week in the Guild Reception room, at the Hotel Astor, and all members are invited to attend. In October the social year begins with an entertainment and dance to which members are invited and urged to bring guests. Regular meetings are held at which the business of the Guild is discussed. These meetings are followed by entertainment. Members are kept in constant touch with the activities of the Guild by means of its official magazine, "The Call Board," which is mailed to every member each month.

Once a year, in order to raise funds to carry on the policy of giving financial aid to members when necessary, the Guild sponsors a public benefit. Until 1937, this was in the form of a theatre benefit. These affairs were outstanding in their entertainment value and good taste. In 1937, the Guild inaugurated a new type of benefit, with a testimonial dinner in honor of its vice-president, Gene Buck, who has been of inestimable value in his untiring efforts in behalf of the Guild. In 1938, its president, George M. Cohan, was guest of honor. In 1939, the Guild celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, with a silver jubilee dinner attended by over a thousand people of prominence in the world of business, government, and all branches of the theatrical profession. Since then, and for the duration of the war, they are discontinuing these large social affairs, substituting a special issue of its magazine to raise the funds needed for work.

The Rev. John F. White, of St. Clare Academy, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, is the chaplain-treasurer of the Guild, and the Actors Chapel is located at St. Malachy's Church in New York City.

Besides the regular system of providing clothing, lodging and food to the needy, a bed is maintained in St. Vincent's Hospital for the use of members, free of charge. Contracts are had with other hospitals throughout the city where members are given every care and attention. At Calvary Cemetery, the Catholic Actors Guild maintains a burial plot. It is marked with a beautiful granite monument, donated by Gene Buck, on which are inscribed the names of more than 160 Catholic actors and actresses who are interred there.

The Catholic Actors Guild is an organization working unceasingly for the good of the individual member, the theatre as a whole, and the greater glory of God and His Church.

THE CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT

In his encyclical, "Reconstructing the Social Order," Pope Pius XI implicitly advocates the founding of co-operatives. For the spirit of mutual co-operation is Christian, and is a reaction against economic domination effected by the selfish individualism of the past.

The chief purpose of the co-operative movement, which is one of the most important movements of our time, is to eliminate the excessive profit-maker in the various departments of economic activity. The method is to enable the workers and consumers to assume control of their own economic activities and to perform the services of producing and buying for themselves, so that they become the masters rather than the servants or slaves of the economic system. By co-operative organization a system of self-service is substituted for the present capitalistic profit-system.

In the "Catholic World," June, 1936, the Rev. Edgar Schmiedeler, O. S. B., gives the following general definition of co-operation as used in economic phraseology: "A co-operative society or organization is a group of people who band themselves together to produce something, to sell something, to buy something for themselves, or to pool their financial resources for credit or loan purposes." Thus, a producers' co-operative is formed by those who unite to produce something; a marketing co-operative, by those who organize to sell something; a consumers' co-operative, by those who band themselves together to purchase something; and a credit co-operative, by those who pool their savings for loan purposes. One organization, such as the English Co-operative Wholesale Society, or the Belgian Peasant League, may combine to some extent all four forms of co-operation. Likewise, the spirit of co-operation may be practised in almost any field of economic or social endeavor. Banking, insurance, medicine, housing, oil refining, baking, education, electrification and telephone service, burial service, mercantile business, processing, transportation, agriculture are only a few of the fields in which co-operatives are now flourishing successfully.

Having considered co-operation in general we will now examine briefly the development and principles of the three distinct, principal phases of the co-operative movement: the consumers', the producers', and the credit co-operatives.

Consumers' Co-operation

The consumers' or distributors' co-operative is the most successful of the co-operative societies. It aims to supplant the middleman or retail merchant by an organized association of consumers who arrange to supply themselves with goods instead of buying them from the retailer. By doing so the consumers reduce the cost of the goods and gain for themselves the profit that would ordinarily be received by the merchant. John Daniels defines a consumers' co-operative as follows: "A true consumers' co-operative is an association of consumers, organized, conducted and controlled by and for consumers; whose members have only one vote each; whose purpose is not to sell things at a profit but to provide its members with goods or services at a saving in cost and quality; which pays only a fixed interest on its capital shares and distributes its savings to the members in proportion to their patronage" ("Commonweal," June 24, 1938).

A consumers' co-operative may have its inception in a neighborhood group who organize to buy goods collectively, and later contribute enough capital to open a store of their own. When several such stores have been founded, they may organize into a federation of co-operative stores, which, in turn, may establish its own wholesale business. The wholesale project may develop to such an extent that it may own and operate its own factories, farms, transportation facilities, and its members may do their banking through the banking department of the co-operative. Such is the state of development attained by the English Co-operative Wholesale Society founded in 1864, and by the Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society founded in 1868. Most of the retail stores in Great Britain belong to either of these two extensive societies.

Development of Consumers' Co-operation — A century before the Rochdale Pioneers began their co-operative movement, a form of co-operation was developed among a group of American farmers who adopted a plan of co-operative fire insurance. Today this same system still survives and comprises 3,000 groups with a total membership of 3,000,000, and an insurance of $11,000,000.

Though Robert Owen in Great Britain, and the New England Association of Farmers and Mechanics in America, attempted to found consumers' co-operative stores early in the nineteenth century, the first successful venture was that of the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers' Society, founded in 1844, in the small English manufacturing town of Rochdale. This society, which began with a capital of $140 and a membership of 28 indigent workmen, is now functioning successfully in every large town in Great Britain. In 1935 it could boast of a capital of £579,253 and a membership of 43,712.

Co-operative associations, following the Rochdale principles, soon developed in other countries. In 1934 there were 465,000 co-operative societies with a total membership of over 139,000,000 persons in 45 countries. More than half of these co-operative associations were agricultural, about one-fifth were credit unions, one-twelfth were consumers' organizations, and the remainder were producers', housing, and various types of co-operatives. The number of people who are now associated with co-operatives is startling, and is an evident indication of their success. In 1938 in Sweden one-third of the families were served by co-operatives; in England 45% of the families; in Scotland 55% of the families; in Denmark one-third of the population; in Finland over 50% of the population; in Norway 20% of the population; and in Switzerland one-fourth of the population.

Outstanding in the Western Hemisphere is the development of the co-operative movement in Antigonish, Nova Scotia, sponsored by St. Francis Xavier University. The Extension Department began adult education as an experiment in 1921, and there are now in Nova Scotia 1,100 study clubs with a membership of 10,000. Industrial workers, farmers, miners and fishermen have learned to meet problems that arise, and to solve them with satisfactory results. They have come to appreciate the values of life and to enjoy its benefits by means of co-operation. In 1941 there were 10,695 members of co-operative organizations in Nova Scotia. There are associations for the marketing of fish, livestock, milk and pulpwood, co-operative stores, sawmills and lobster factories. In 1941 there were over 160 credit unions with 35,000 members and a share capital of $1,000,000. Canada's first co-operative village, Tompkinsville, founded in 1938, broadened its scope to include manufacturing. For co-operation to achieve its best ends the support of religion is needed and this it has in Antigonish.

Only recently has the United States made much advancement in the promotion of co-operative enterprises. From 1900 to 1914 co-operative retail stores began to develop about the chief industrial centers. One of the first successful ventures was the Central Co-operative Wholesale, founded by Finns, in Superior, Wisconsin, in 1917. The success of the Finnish organization led farmers to found other co-operatives, especially in the field of gasoline and oil distribution, for the large oil concerns, financed by money from the East, drained the West of millions of dollars. The first co-operative filling station appeared in 1921, and five years later the first co-operative wholesale was formed in Minnesota with the coalition of a few retail co-ops. Today there are 2,000 gas and oil co-operatives in the United States.

Consumer's co-ops in the United States today are characterized by considerable variety. The best known, and presumably the largest group, consists of stores for handling groceries and general merchandise. Gas and oil stations have very rapidly grown in numbers, too. The following items can also be bought now through co-op channels: clothing, bakery goods, meats, shoes, furniture, hardware, paints, electric current and appliances, radios, refrigerators, tires and auto accessories. Nor is this list complete. Indeed, it is suggested that one can go through the whole of life from birth to burial, using only co-operative goods and services. There is, for instance, a co-op hospital that handles maternity cases, and a variety of groups that provide medical aid on a co-op basis. There are co-operative associations that provide burial services for their members. New developments are showing themselves constantly. Fairly recent additions to the list are, for example, housing projects, restaurants, printing, and recreational facilities.

This is not to suggest, of course, that all, or even a majority, of these services are commonly found throughout the United States. The truth is that a number of them are still found only in a very limited way. Nevertheless, there are occasional districts in which co-operation is highly organized, and in which a great variety of services are available on a co-operative basis. An example is St. Louis County, Minnesota. In that area, the following items are available through co-operative channels: telephone service, petroleum products, auto accessories, food, and practically all articles of household and farm equipment. Through a federated association the co-operators also produce their own butter and sausage. In some of the towns of the County, virtually every family in the area belong to a co-operative.

A promising growth has taken place in recent years in the co-operative wholesale field. There are at present 20 co-operative wholesale units, the majority of them faithfully observing Rochdale principles and apparently established on a firm basis. These have greatly strengthened the locals. The trading area of most of them extends into a number of states, and the annual turnover of several of them runs beyond the $5,000,000 mark.

There are today 2,000,000 members purchasing an estimated $600,000,000 worth of goods a year through consumer co-operatives. The past year or two has also witnessed a rapid extension into the field of production, thereby increasing the amounts of goods that come from their own wholesales' mills, refineries and factories.

Development of Agricultural Marketing Co-ops—This type of co-ops somewhat paralleled the development of co-operative consumer societies. However, it early outstripped the growth of the latter. Fully half the farmers of the United States are members of marketing associations today. The 1940 Report of the Farm Credit Administration shows that there are 10,700 farmers' marketing and purchasing associations, with a membership of about 3,200,000, and doing an estimated business of $2,087,000,000.

Of the 10,700 associations listed, 8,051 are marketing co-ops. These had a membership of 2,300,000, and did a business of $1,729,000,000. That left 2,649 purchasing associations, accounting for a membership of 900,000, and doing an estimated business of $358,000,000. Some marketing associations also served as purchasing agencies. The purchasing business of these was estimated at $172,900,000. Vice versa, the purchasing co-ops did some marketing. The marketing business of the latter was estimated at $82,698,000.

Principles of Consumers' Co-operation — The principles of the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers' Society, which have been adopted by other similar co-operatives, are the following:

(1) A consumers' co-operative society shall be democratically controlled.

(2) Money invested in a co-operative society, if it receives interest, shall receive a fixed percentage which shall not be more than the prevailing current rate.

Producers' Co-operation in Cincinnati in 1848; and of tailors in Boston in the following year. More definite evidence of a producers' co-operative is had in the Leclair house-painting establishment in 1833, and in the Godin stove works in 1830, since the workers eventually became the owners of both enterprises. At the turn of the century the movement had a re-birth in this country, but most of the attempts were unsuccessful. Some of them survived only by sacrificing their essential principles. In 1933 there were only twenty successfully functioning enterprises of this kind in America, as compared with about eighty in England. Producers' co-ops thrive better in the field of agriculture than in that of industry. They have had their highest development in Denmark where in 1939 there were organizations for processing, domestic marketing, and export. These Danish associations controlled 85% of the export of bacon, and 49% of the export of butter. They operated slaughterhouses, dairies and processing plants. In Finland in 1939 co-operative federations produced 95% of the country's butter supply, and exported 38% of Finnish eggs. Ireland too has had success with agricultural co-operation.

Development of Producers' Co-operation — Indefinite beginnings of this form of co-operation can be found in an organization of tailors in England, in 1777, composed of men on strike; in an association of cabinet-makers in Philadelphia in 1833; and in a society of jewelers in France also in 1833; of molders

(3) If a co-operative makes a net profit, that profit shall be returned to the consumers who patronize the society on the basis of the amount of purchase.

(4) Membership is voluntary and unlimited.

(5) Business shall be done in cash.

(6) A portion of the profits shall be used for educational purposes in the field of co-operation. (A college in Kansas City, and St. Francis Xavier University in Nova Scotia train students for co-operative work.)

(7) Goods and services shall be sold at prevailing market prices, if these are not too high.

(8) Co-operative societies shall co-operate with one another.

Credit Co-operation

The credit or bankers' union is an association of individuals who pool their savings to form a fund, which is lent to members at a small rate of interest, usually 1% a month and 6% a year. A credit co-operative is somewhat like a small bank. It receives deposits, issues loans, and may invest its surplus in approved securities. Profits are distributed among the members in proportion to their savings; sometimes in proportion to their borrowings. The purpose of this form of co-operation is to eliminate the banker or loan shark, just as other co-ops purpose to eliminate the mercantile retailer or the agricultural middleman.

A credit co-operative is usually formed among a group that is united by occupational, professional, territorial or religious interests. Thus, all the members of a unit are factory workers, or teachers, or members of the same community or parish. More than 300 parish credit unions now in the United States are doing excellent work, and the founding of new units, which is comparatively simple, should be promoted. (The services of the Parish Credit Union National Committee in the Social Action Department of the N. C. W. C. are always at the disposal of the pastors and parishioners who may wish to establish parish credit unions.)

Development of Credit Co-operation—Credit banking can be traced to the "Monti di Pieta" or Banks of Charity, founded in Italy by two Franciscans, Barnabas of Terni and Blessed Bernardine of Feltre, who desired to rescue the poor from the extortionate usury of the Jews and Lombards. Money was collected from the rich and lent to the poor at interest rates sufficient to defray the costs of administration. Co-operative banking, as we know it today with its two systems, however, had its beginning in Germany. The Schulze-Delitsch system, founded in 1850, by Mr. Schulze in his small native town of Delitsch, embraces the small shopkeepers, business men, artisans, and other middle class town dwellers. The Raiffeisen system, established by Mayor Raiffeisen of Flammersfeld in 1849, consists of rural banks supplying credit to small landowners or tenant farmers. Both systems have practically the same principles. They are composed of men in need of credit, and credit is given only to members.

Co-operative banks soon appeared in other countries. Lazzanti introduced them into Italy in 1866; Austria had its first co-operative bank in 1885; France in 1892. The co-operative banking system introduced into Belgium by Abbe Mellaerts, the chief organizer of the Belgian Peasant League, or the Boerenbond, in 1890, has developed enormously, as have the systems in Germany, and Italy.

To a Catholic French-Canadian, Alphonse Desjardins, is due the credit for the founding of the Co-operative People's Bank at Levis, Quebec, in 1901. From this establishment developed an extensive and highly successful system in Canada.

M. Desjardins was also responsible for the organizing of the first credit bank in the United States in 1909, founded in St. Mary's Parish, Manchester, N. H., and authorized by a special act of the state legislature. In 1921, with the establishment of the Credit Union National Extension Bureau by Edward A. Filene, there was a rapid development of credit co-operatives in this country. Today there are about 10,000 credit unions in the United States, with a total membership of about 3,000,000. One-third are under federal supervision, and two-thirds under state supervision.

In co-operative banking recourse to the loan shark is prevented. Loans, ranging from small amounts to $1,000 according to federal law, or $200 according to some state laws, are issued to individuals for constructive, productive, or provident purposes. Profits are distributed in dividends ranging from 3% to 6%. Its government is democratic.

THE NATIONAL CATHOLIC RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE

The National Catholic Rural Life Conference was founded in 1922 through the efforts of Fr. Edwin V. O'Hara, the present Bishop of Kansas City, for the purpose of strengthening the Church in the rural sections of the United States. The Conference sees one of the greatest threats to the Church in the decreasing birth rate of the cities, where the Church has 80 per cent of her membership. Country life, on the other hand, favors large families, and in fact, rural America supplies a large part of the population of our cities. Although Catholic city families are, on the average, larger than non-Catholic families, they are however too small to maintain even a static Catholic population. At the present birth rate, for every 10 adults in the city there will be 7 in the next generation, 5 in the third generation, and 3.5 in the fourth, a decline of two-thirds in a century. But for the country people the rate runs: 10, 13, 17, 22, giving an increase of 100 per cent in a century. The city parishes were formerly augmented constantly by immigrants from Catholic countries, but this growth is no longer possible.

The best hope of the Church therefore is to strengthen herself in rural America, where she has up to now been weak in numbers. It is reported that of the 2,952 counties in the United States, 1,022 do not have a resident Catholic priest, and 500 more have no priest at all for the faithful.

Four working aims are proposed by the N. C. R. L. C. to help the Church in the rural sections of America:

(1) To care for the underprivileged Catholics now living on the land. This can be done by providing more priests; by building chapels and schools; by having religious vacation schools; by providing bus service to Catholic schools.

(2) To keep on the land the Catholics who now live on the land. They must be taught the Catholic philosophy of life and work, to which farm life is very conformable. On this point Pope Pius XII expressed himself at Pentecost, 1941, as follows: "Of all the goods that can be the object of private property none is more conformable to nature than the land, the holding in which the family lives and from the products of which it draws all or a part of its subsistence.... Only the stability which is rooted in one's own holding makes of the family the vital and most perfect and fecund cell of society."

(3) To settle more Catholics on the land. By doing this the economic, social and religious situation of many maladjusted families of rural origin can be improved, and also the depressed condition of families of urban origin which have become the victims of industrialism. A plan of subsidizing might be devised.

(4) To convert the non-Catholics on the land. Many of them belong to no Church at all. Regardless of this, rural people as well as city dwellers should have the opportunity to hear the voice of the one Church.

Vacation Schools — During the past three summers vacation schools for rural priests have been conducted by the N. C. R. L. C. In 1942 they were held at Bay St. Louis, Miss., Atchison, Kans., St. Louis, Mo., and Collegeville, Minn. About 200 priests attended.

The 20th National Convention was held at Peoria, Ill., Oct. 3 to 7, 1942, under the patronage of Bishop Schlarman. Bishop Muench was re-elected president of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference.

Quarterly — The N. C. R. L. C. publishes a quarterly magazine, "Land and Home."

Headquarters and information center is at 3801 Grand Ave., Des Moines, Iowa, in care of Msgr. L. G. Ligutti, executive secretary of the National Catholic Rural Life Conference.

CATHOLIC COMMITTEE OF THE SOUTH

The objective of the Catholic Committee of the South, originally called the Catholic Conference of the South, is to unify and coordinate Catholic endeavor in the Southland so as to restore all things in Christ. Urgent problems in five fields—Industrial, Rural, Education, Negro, and Youth—challenge the South. Dr. O. E. Baker, of the United States Department of Agriculture, an authority on population problems, has stated that, since nearly one-half of the nation's increase in population is being produced by the South although only one quarter of the population lives there, "most of the citizens of the nation a century hence seem very likely to be the descendants of the rural people of the South today." Realizing this destiny the Committee has adopted the following program, based on the fact that Christianity does and professes to insert something into our sheer humanity which will bring it to perfection, natural and supernatural alike.

(1) To bring to Catholics in the Southland and in other sections of the country a knowledge of the Church's promise in the Southland.

(2) To intensify Catholic activity in the South through means supplemented by other sections of the country, enjoying a greater measure of material prosperity.

(3) To establish a social order that will be favorable to a Christian family life.

(4) To sponsor sound programs that look to the improvement of the worker in agriculture and industry to oppose all exploitation of the agricultural and industrial worker and to seek for him a just return of the fruits of his labor.

(5) To foster a better understanding between Southern capital and labor, according to the principles defined in the social encyclicals of Pope Leo XIII and Pope Pius XI.

(6) To train leadership, white and Negro, in order to bring the force of Christian teaching to labor in industry and their organizations.

(7) To develop special programs for the youth of the South so as to insure a trained leadership for the future.

(8) To bring about a friendlier understanding between Southerners, irrespective of race and creed.

(9) To insist on the historic fact that Christian principle is basic to the American conception of citizenship and government.

The Committee's organization consists in: (1) a Board of Governors, the Ordinaries of the Archdiocese of New Orleans and of the Dioceses of Richmond, Raleigh, Charleston, Savannah-Atlanta, St. Augustine, Mobile, Nashville, Natchez, Alexandria, Lafayette and Little Rock; (2) Diocesan Committees consisting of three priests, three laymen and three laywomen appointed by their respective Ordinaries; (3) an Executive Committee consisting of a priest, a layman and a laywoman from each of the diocesan committees.

Leaders are being trained to carry to all Catholic organizations now existing the program of the C. C. S. To this end five departments have been set up by the C. C. S., namely Education, Labor and Industry, Rural, Youth, and Race. The leaders' training is both intellectual and spiritual. The former includes study and discussion of pontifical and episcopal documents, fact-finding in the five fields mentioned above, and preparation of tentative practical projects; the spiritual training includes efforts to further the C. C. S.'s objective of making the Church more articulate in our Southland, and a pledge to make a retreat at least annually.

Through the annual convention of the committee held at Atlanta, Ga. (1940), Birmingham, Ala. (1941), and Richmond, Va. (1942), in widely separated areas of the South, the prestige of the Church has been greatly enhanced in quarters where previously she was scarcely known, and even when known greatly misunderstood. Though the task is a large one, the work proceeds apace.

COMMISSION ON AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

The Commission on American Citizenship sponsored by the Catholic University of America is a group of representative Americans, organized for the purpose of fostering good citizenship. It is composed of more than a hundred men and women—Catholics, Protestants and Jews—joined in the common purpose of maintaining the American nation as an effective agent of democracy. The immediate aim of the Commission is to prepare a civic education program for the Catholic schools of America which will broaden the scope and enrich the spirit of their existing curriculum.

This program, made necessary to fortify the new generation against false and subversive theories of government, will correlate religious teaching with civic living. It will further develop in the Catholic children of the nation a deep and abiding consciousness of their moral obligation to live as good Americans and good Catholics.

Since it is good Catholic doctrine as well as good American doctrine that all men are created free and equal and therefore entitled to certain fundamental civil rights, the Catholics of the nation have consistently labored to uphold the standard of an honest, responsible, moral citizenship consonant with basic American principles.

In the consciousness of the need of moral affirmation of civil attitudes the late Pope Pius XI in September, 1938, a few months before his death, addressed a letter to the American bishops, in which he condemned "any civic philosophy which would degrade man to the position of a soulless pawn in a sordid game of power and prestige, or would seek to banish him from the human family or set him at the throats of his fellows in a blind, brutish class struggle for existence." Warning of the errors of totalitarianism and the immorality of the doctrine of race supremacy, the Pope urged American Catholics to formulate "a constructive program of social action, fitted in detail to local needs, which will command the admiration and acceptance of all right-thinking men."

The American hierarchy in response to the Pope's appeal instructed the Catholic University of America to prepare a program of civic education based on ethical principles; for ethical principles alone, the bishops held, "would make men respect their own rights and the rights of their fellow-citizens."

To sponsor this program of good citizenship the Commission on American Citizenship was organized by the Catholic University under the presidency of the late Bishop Joseph M. Corrigan. Among those invited to join the Commission were citizens of many different racial, religious and social groups, whose otherwise diversified interests were united in a common desire to improve our American democracy. The Commission has offices on the campus of the Catholic University of America. Direct supervision of the program rests with Msgr. Francis J. Haas and Dr. George Johnson. Mary Synon is editorial consultant.

Diocesan superintendents of schools, religious community supervisors of teachers, and Catholic college faculties have been consulted on the proper scope of the program in terms of educational needs. With their suggestions the program of the Commission has taken shape and is in the process of being disseminated. Courses of study and text materials have been completed for primer and seventh and eighth grades. The intermediary courses are now in preparation. In its larger sense the program will deal with different phases of education and should be of direct value to the whole educational system in the United States.

INTER-AMERICAN SEMINAR

In August, 1942, a party of distinguished Latin-Americans, both clergy and laymen, arrived in Washington to attend the first Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies. The Seminar was held under the auspices of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and marked the first time that a representative group of Catholics from North and South America sat down to discuss their social aims. The general theme of the gathering was "The Americas and the Crisis of Civilization." The sessions were conducted in Spanish, Portuguese, French and English.

There were delegates from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Mexico, Venezuela and Canada. Among the prominent Americans who took part were: Archbishop Edward Mooney of Detroit; Archbishop Robert E. Lucey of San Antonio; Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch of Chicago; Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York; Bishop John F. Noll of Ft. Wayne; Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara of Kansas City; Bishop John F. O'Hara, Military Delegate of the Armed Forces; Bishop James H. Ryan of Omaha; Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary, National Catholic Welfare Conference; Very Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, Notre Dame University; Jacques Maritain, philosopher and author, professor at Columbia University; Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture; Matthew Woll, of the American Federation of Labor; David McDonald and James B. Carey, of the Congress of Industrial Organizations; Theodore Kreps, Board of Economic Warfare; Dr. Max Jordan, National Broadcasting Company.

Sessions were held for six days in Washington, one day at Notre Dame University, three days in Chicago, one day in Detroit, one day in Buffalo, five days in New York and a final two days again in Washington.

Much valuable information on the problems common and special to North and South America was gathered during the various sessions. The importance of these meetings was emphasized through the interest displayed by the newspapers of the two continents, both in the news and editorial columns, and through the many short wave and national radio programs and international newsreel releases.

The final statement issued by the members of the Seminar on the crisis facing civilization summarizes the spirit and the conclusions reached by the group. They pointed out that the guides stated in Pope Pius XII's Allocution of Christmas, 1939, show the way to a true and lasting peace. In addition to world governmental organization, national and world economic organization is necessary. It is necessary to make economic life serve the general good of all mankind. The form of organization should be one that embraces the free organizations of business, of labor, of farmers and of the professions, assisted and supervised by government. They further insisted that the crisis cannot be resolved without a close and effective cooperation between governments and spiritual forces. As they stated, until this generation the peoples of the Americas, even when they had gained their political independence, felt themselves and, in fact, were to a large degree, dependent upon Europe. While Americans do not wish to lessen their ties with Europe, in the post-war world we must help Europe, Asia and indeed all mankind. The Seminar concluded that it is plain that upon the Americas rests the enormous burden of sharing the leadership of a good post-war world; and upon the Catholics of the Americas rests a burden of immeasurable magnitude.

In the Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies called together by the National Catholic Welfare Conference, there was an auspicious beginning of the collaboration of all Catholics in the New World for the making of a New World Order.

NATIONAL CATHOLIC COMMUNITY SERVICE

The National Catholic Community Service is the official agency designated by the Catholic Church in the United States to care for the welfare of men and women engaged in the solemn work of the defense of the nation.

Thirty-three years before our entrance into the First World War, the American Bishops, assembled in Baltimore, Md., for the Third Plenary Council of the Catholic Church in the United States, solemnly declared:

"We believe that our country's heroes were the instruments of the God of nations in establishing this home of freedom; to both the Almighty and to His instruments in the work, we look, with grateful reverence; and to maintain the inheritance of freedom which they have left us, should it ever—which God forbid—be imperiled, our Catholic citizens will be found to stand forward, as one man, ready to pledge anew their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor."

The First World War saw the fulfillment of this prediction made possible by the National Catholic War Council, which coordinated all Catholic war work activities.

When the Archbishops and Bishops of the Catholic Church in the United States met in 1940 for their annual meeting, they recognized the community needs growing out of the military and industrial mobilization for national defense. They then appointed the N. C. C. S. as the official Catholic agency for war time emergency. Working on a national scale, the N. C. C. S., as it is generally known, is associated with similar agencies representing other faiths and other groups of citizens in the United States. It is a member agency of United Service Organizations.

Through the N. C. C. S. the Catholic resources of the United States are mobilized; and under its direction, every Catholic organization—national, diocesan and parochial —has put its shoulder to the wheel in a common cause.

In broad outline, the N. C. C. S. is establishing and maintaining "a home away from home" for those in the service of their country, women defense workers, as well as soldiers and sailors. Clubs, home-like in atmosphere, are in operation in communities near camps and naval bases. Through its Women's Division, centers, comparable in facilities and program to those provided for the men, are maintained in large industrial centers to care for the needs of the young women, who have been displaced from normal home environments as a result of their joining the large army of industrial workers contributing to the country's total defense.

At the close of 1942, the N.C.C.S. had begun work on 26 new U. S. O. club assignments in the United States, in addition to the 291 service clubs already under its management. Of these 209 are maintained for servicemen and 82 for industrial workers at war production centers; included are 22 operations serving members of the Colored race.

Objectives — Briefly, these are the objectives of the National Catholic Community Service:

1. To bring to bear upon civilian and military defense forces in communities throughout the country, the morale-building processes of spiritual and religious leadership.
2. To offer our Catholic soldiers, sailors and defense workers every encouragement in the faithful practice of their religion, and every proper facility for reaching and enjoying opportunities for rest, recreation and amusement while on leave.
3. To bring to their relatives and friends the comfort and assurance of knowing that the inspiration and consolations of the Catholic faith are being provided for our Catholic men and women in their patriotic devotion to the defense of their country.

4. To enlist the support and active participation of laity and clergy in the planning and operation of the work.

5. To serve faithfully as an agency of the United Service Organizations and to cooperate with public and private agencies in meeting the community spiritual, recreational and welfare needs growing out of military and industrial mobilization for national defense.

Organization—In its role of official Catholic war work agency, the N. C. C. S. operates directly under a Board of Trustees of which the Most Rev. Edward Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, is president. An Executive Committee composed of five members is responsible to the Board of Trustees for the interpretation and execution of the Board's general policies. Mr. Francis P. Matthews, Omaha, Neb., Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus, is Chairman of this committee. There is also a Committee on Participating Organizations, which is national in scope and representative of Catholic organizations throughout the country. An Executive Director, and his assistants, are responsible for the carrying out of the planned projects embracing religious, social, educational and recreational activities in the nearly 300 units, which are operated by professional workers.

Religious Activities—In regard to religious activities, the close relationship existing between the club directors, the camp chaplains and the parish priests insures that every opportunity will be offered the man in camp and the industrial worker for observance of his religious duties. Adequate provision is made for attendance at Mass, confession, spiritual guidance, informal religious talks and study clubs. Arrangements are made to distribute religious articles and to provide Catholic literature. There have been distributed through the N.C.C.S., 687,600 missals and prayer-books, 1,159,000 religious pamphlets, 687,000 pocket crucifixes, rosaries and medals, and 35,100 Catholic books and magazines.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CATHOLIC NURSES

The National Council of Catholic Nurses of the United States of America is the American nurses' answer to the request of the late Holy Father, Pius XI, that the nurses of the United States be organized "in order to carry out spiritually and scientifically their apostolic work in behalf of the sick." The Council has the grateful approval of Pope Pius XII, who also requested an organization of Catholic nurses the world over. The present Holy Father wrote:

"Organization, dear daughters, is indispensable. We see in our day that everything organizes itself; and, unhappily, also evil. It is necessary that good, and good works, should organize themselves. The Catholic nurse must be trained for the apostolate, that is to say, in the body which she nurses there is an immortal soul, bought by the most precious Blood of the Son of God, of which she cannot lose sight. Never in the history of the Church has heathen naturalism been so powerful and so threatening in its battle with the supernatural. It is necessary that all Catholics should be fully conscious of this menace. The Catholic nurse must be helped to carry on her professional activity in the light of the Church's doctrines and Christian morality."

Origin—The Council was formally organized in Chicago on June 10, 1940, at a meeting presided over by the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans, episcopal chairman of the Lay Organizations Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference. It was the wish of the late Holy Father that the National Council be under the direction of the respective Ordinaries and of the hierarchy. At this meeting a Constitution was adopted and officers were elected. The Council now is an affiliate of the National Council of Catholic Women, but is sponsored by the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Purposes—The purposes of the Council as stated in the Constitution are:

1. To protect, encourage and advance the spiritual, professional, material welfare and social contacts of Catholic nurses.

2. To encourage and assist in the formation of an association of Catholic nurses in every diocese of the United States.

3. To foster and encourage among all nurses the spirit of charity in the care of the sick by emphasizing spiritual and social values and opportunities in the exercise of the profession of nursing.

4. To provide an agency through which Catholic nurses will be able to speak and act corporately in matters of common interest to their profession.

5. To promote, under control of affiliated organizations, a program by which Catholic nurses may dedicate a portion of free service to the indigent poor.

Membership—Membership in the National Council is mainly through affiliated diocesan organizations of nurses, but provision has been made in the National Council for accepting also individual members, who reside in dioceses where no diocesan organization exists. Only graduate, registered, professional nurses are eligible for membership in either the National Council or any diocesan organization affiliated with it.

Any Diocesan Association of Catholic, graduate, registered, professional nurses, approved by the Ordinary of the diocese in which it has its headquarters, is eligible to apply for diocesan membership. Such application is to be made on a form procured from the Secretary of the National Council and is to be accompanied by a copy of the Constitution and By-Laws of the diocesan association, and any other literature concerning the organization. The diocesan association becomes a diocesan member of the Council when its application for membership is approved by the Executive Committee.

The ambition of the officers to make the Council truly national by having units formed in every diocese, and affiliated with the National Council is well on its way to realization.

National Convention—At the first biennial convention of the National Council of Catholic Nurses, held at Detroit on May 25-27, 1942, 800 delegates from 65 dioceses in 33 states and two Canadian provinces were present—despite the decimation of the nurses' ranks by thousands entering military service. The character of this convention was entirely spiritual. Nurses were urged to sanctify themselves through their profession, to supernaturalize the service they render to the sick, the afflicted, and the war-wounded—by ministering in the name of Christ. It was pointed out that their efforts at the promotion of Catholic action should be particularly successful because people have confidence in the nurse, and are never more serious-minded than when they are ill. It was the consensus of every bishop and priest in attendance at the convention that a truly National Council of Catholic Nurses is one of the great needs of the day.

THE APOSTLESHIP OF THE SEA

With the world at war, the number of men served by the Apostleship of the Sea is beyond calculation. New Zealand, alone, reported that during the past year 21,000 seamen visited the clubs in Auckland and Wellington, and in other ports contacts were made with the men through ship-visiting.

In 1939 there were at sea 1,200,000 men, of whom about 800,000 were Catholics. With no home or parish for most of the year, seamen are in need of spiritual aid. Even in ports, ignorance of land and language are often insurmountable obstacles in frequenting the sacraments. To reach these men (and women also) the Catholic Church organized the Apostleship of the Sea.

Its seed was in the visit of a Catholic bluejacket to a priest of South Queensferry, England, in 1889, with a passionate plea for aid for Catholic sailors. This priest, Fr. Archibald Douglas, publicized the need, the Catholic neglect and the great Protestant works. The Apostleship of Prayer began praying for the intention, and gathering books. With the spiritual and practical basis laid, the work expanded steadily.

By 1922, the Apostleship had grown to a size that demanded international headquarters. In this year the first International Council was founded in Glasgow. In 1922, only 10 ports of the world held Catholic services for seamen. Due to the zealous efforts of clergy and laity, in 1939 there were 317 such ports where Catholic seamen were given every opportunity and encouragement to practise their religion regularly. Expansion led to the transfer of the headquarters to London in 1928, but war emergency required return to Glasgow in 1940. The work was allied to the St. Vincent de Paul Society to form a Joint Council of the Apostleship of the Sea. In 1931, this Council adopted the title, Apostolatus Maris Internationale Concilium (A. M. I. C.).

The 317 ports with service centers in 1939 were in 40 countries. Of these, 59 had institutes, chaplains and councils; 52 had only chaplains and councils; and 206 had chaplains and lay workers, but no councils. Whole-time chaplains worked in 22 ports. All the others were part-time. At the International Congress held in Glasgow in September, 1938, representatives were present from the 60 maritime countries of the world. The report of the executive committee to the Congress stated: "In Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Canada, France, Great Britain, Germany, Holland, India, Ireland, Italy, New Zealand, Poland, South Africa, Spain, and the United States — 16 of the 60 maritime countries—Apostolatus Maris is so founded as to secure its continuance nationally no matter what disaster may overtake international relations in the political sphere."

The first wartime meeting of the Apostleship of the Sea International Council was held in Glasgow in April, 1942, and assembled delegates from Australia, Belgium, Canada, Great Britain, New Zealand, Portugal, Spain, South Africa, the United States, the West Indies and Yugoslavia. Provision was made for the maintenance of work of the organization for the duration of the war.

Since the war began Apostleship of the Sea service centers have been established in several countries, notable among them being the Apostolado do Mar Centre in Lisbon, under the patronage of Cardinal Goncalves Cerejeira, Patriarch of Lisbon. Other centers have been opened in Australasia, Canada, India, South Africa, South America, Spain, the United States and the West Indies.

The establishment of over 50 Sea Apostolate clubs and more than 200 service centers throughout the world, through the A. M. I. C. organizing effort, has vastly improved the spiritual and social services to Catholic merchant seamen as compared with the previous World War. Port chaplains and lay auxiliaries give service to the seamen. Remailing and knitting services meet war-time needs, and thousands of knitted garments have been distributed. In Great Britain a grant from King George's Fund for Sailors has enabled A. M. I. C. to spend substantial sums of money for relief of distress among seamen and their dependents arising from the war.

There are different types of membership in the Apostleship but with all the most important duty of each is the daily recitation of the following brief prayers:

Sacred Heart of Jesus, have mercy upon all Seafarers.

Our Lady, Star of the Sea, pray for us.

St. Peter, pray for us.

St. Andrew, pray for us.

Members also go, if possible, to Mass and Communion on certain special feasts of the Apostleship, such as St. Francis of Assisi, St. Francis Xavier, etc. There were in 1939, 80,000 sailor members, 30,000 associate members and 1,500 active port workers enrolled.

Throughout the world, 5,700 religious communities and Catholic schools pray for the advancement of this work in general, and they also "adopt" particular ports or ships which they aid by their prayers and gifts of Catholic literature.

The work of the Apostleship at sea and ashore is most varied. As a branch of Catholic Action, it has for its main object, the extension of the Kingdom of God on earth by drawing seafarers to Our Lord. The late Pope Pius XI expressed the desire that soon there would be "no port in the whole world where the Apostleship of the Sea should not be firmly established." Priests and laymen visit the ships and tell the Catholic sailors of the local church and the local Apostleship headquarters. At the headquarters, regimentation is avoided. In the home-like atmosphere of the club rooms, recreational facilities are provided. Libraries of worthwhile books and magazines are at the disposal of the sailors and opportunities are given for religious instruction. Every effort is made to encourage the seamen to live a normal Catholic life under the guidance of priests who are particularly fitted to understand their background and sympathize with them in their problems.

To each ship and port go copies of the "Apostleship of the Sea Quarterly," which has a yearly circulation of over 14,000. The magazine is newsy, instructive and aids in combating Communism. There is the unique A. M. I. C. International News Service which sends 700 copies to 100 news agencies and newspapers in maritime nations. At intervals, thousands of copies of organizing directions go into the world in six languages to key-workers such as chaplains, secretaries, prelates, religious superiors, etc. In England, the Catholic Truth Society publishes a "Prayer Book for Catholic Seafarers" and a pamphlet, "The Sea and Its Apostolate," both of which are written by Rev. C. C. Martindale, S.J., the most active English publicizer of the movement.

During the war Apostleship of the Sea has greatly increased its services to Catholics in Great Britain's Navy. In July, 1942, adoption and remailing services covered 658 warships and shore establishments to which literature and other gifts were sent regularly by more than 750 Sea Apostolate Associates, the Legion of Mary, Children of Mary, Scouts and other groups, and by 380 schools. Almost 300 schools have an annual Mass, and some have weekly and monthly Masses, offered up for the seamen on their adopted ships, and prayers are said daily. Requiem Masses and special prayers are said for seamen who have died in action. Catholic officers and men in all classes of ships in all parts of the world receive magazines and newspapers regularly and hundreds of letters are exchanged between seamen and their adopting school.

In the United States, the work is well established in several ports.

In New York, Fr. John J. O'Donnell, port chaplain and pastor of Guardian Angels Church (known as the Shrine Church of the Sea), is famous for his work among seamen. He has established a seamen's house with full recreational facilities where all in the Maritime Industries are able to congregate on a common ground of Catholicity. Fr. O'Donnell, with his staff of assistants, visits the ships and informs the sailors of the whereabouts of the church and recreational center. Ships are supplied free of charge with all the requisites for the celebration of Mass. In Brooklyn, Fr. Rickert has established the Catholic Seamen's Institute. This group, known as the Rudder Club, purchased an Apostleship car for delivering books, magazines and periodicals to the large number of freighters using Brooklyn docks. In Mobile, Ala., Fr. Keyes is port chaplain. A St. Vincent de Paul group aids him in ship visiting. In Pensacola, Fla., the Brothers of the Most Holy Trinity established the Stella Maris Missionary Cenacle in order to give aid to the deep-sea fishermen. Fr. James Howard is port chaplain. In San Francisco, Fr. Edward Lenane, port chaplain, established a monthly bulletin for seamen in order to spread a knowledge of the work which is being done. In San Pedro, Calif., Fr. McLaughlin has established a recreational center, visits the ships and distributes Catholic magazines to the sailors. In Seattle, Wash., Fr. H. A. Reinhold organized the work of the Apostleship in the ports of Seattle, Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham, Olympia and Grays Harbor.

A chain of Apostleship of the Sea Clubs on both coasts now brings aid to thousands of Catholic seamen who, until a few years ago, were almost entirely without the helps of their religion.

THE CATHOLIC INTERRACIAL MOVEMENT

The Negro in America

Certain factors of the Negro's background are important:

(1) The Negro was freed from the bonds of slavery barely seventy-five years ago, was hastily turned from a life of complete dependence upon others for the necessities of life to the status of freedom, without education, training, land, property or money.

(2) The early days of his emancipation were marked by the evolution of innumerable discriminations and barriers to his progress.

(3) During this period, there also developed a deep-seated American tradition which regarded the Negro as essentially inferior. A color line has thus been established.

(4) Yet despite these obstructions, Catholic authorities have stated, the progress made by the American Negro in the seventy-five years since the Emancipation is unparalleled in history.

(5) It is important to record that the prejudice of the average white man based upon his feeling of superiority is deeply resented by the victim of his discrimination.

(6) The Negro is still met by denials and discriminations to an extent little realized by the indifferent white man. He can be lynched with impunity in many sections of the country. He is denied the vote in many states. The Jim Crow laws still are in effect throughout the South. Residential segregation prevails throughout America. Even in the North, he is denied many of the essential rights and opportunities of life. He is excluded from many restaurants and certain theaters. He is excluded from every first-class hotel. He is excluded from the majority of unions on one pretext or another; he has been the principal victim of differentials in the wage scale.

The Interracial Lay Apostolate

In the last few years, several groups of Catholics, clergy and laity, who are interested in the conversion of the Negro and in the program of interracial justice, have been zealously seeking to remove the prejudices and apathies that prevent Americans from rendering support to the missions and to create an atmosphere for conversion, and furthermore to bring about such a change of attitude on the part of American Catholics as to convince the Negro of the just and charitable spirit of the Catholic Church. Engaged in the work is the Clergy Conference on Negro Welfare, a group of priests, secular and religious, nationally known through their teaching, preaching, writing and lecturing. Among the lay group is the Catholic Interracial Council of New York, made up of educated white and colored Catholics, laymen of both races. This organization publishes the monthly magazine, "Interracial Review," and its office serves as a clearing-house of information and a source of inspiration for interracial activity. Other Catholic interracial committees are established in other large cities, and several are found in the Catholic colleges.

In the year 1939 the De Porres Interracial Center, at 20 Vesey Street, New York City, was established by the Clergy Conference on Negro Welfare. Here are located the headquarters of the Catholic Interracial Council, the editorial offices of "The Interracial Review," and a large Catholic Interracial Library and reading-room. This is used for meetings and interracial conferences, and has a permanent exhibit of the racial situation in the United States and the church work for the Negro. Visitors and students are welcomed on business days from nine to five-thirty.

Today there are many indications that the white Catholic laity is becoming interested in the Catholic interracial movement:

- (1) A growing interest in the work and tasks of the Catholic colored missionary priests and sisters.

- (2) An ever-increasing number of Catholic interracial activities wherein both white and colored Catholics are participating.

- (3) An ever-increasing number of churches in the North which contain a substantial number of Negro communicants, and their interest to Catholic writers, speakers and social action groups is clearly apparent from scanning the pages of the Catholic press, both magazines and diocesan weeklies. The space coverage in the Catholic press devoted to the Negro and the interracial program has increased nearly 1000% in the last ten years.

- (4) The great success of the Catholic intercollegiate interracial conferences. The interest of the Catholic college student is the most hopeful sign on the entire horizon.

- (5) The fact that each year more and more of our Catholic colleges are opening their doors to admit the duly qualified Negro student, and frequently intelligent Negroes are invited to address student bodies as well as meetings of other Catholic parish and organization groups. An encouraging response in the Negro press to this growing interest of the American Catholic.

The James A. Hoey Award for Interracial Justice was founded in 1942, in honor of the first president of the Catholic Interracial Council, to be given annually to the two Catholic laymen—one white and one colored—who have made the most outstanding contributions during the year to the cause of interracial justice. The recipients for 1942 were: (white) Frank A. Hall, director of the N. C. W. C. News Service; (colored) Edward La Salle, president of the Catholic Interracial Council of Kansas City, Kans.

The interracial problem presents a challenging opportunity for the interest and support of the Catholic laity throughout the country, and calls for the active co-operation of the Catholic college men and women of America. The reason for this interest was very well put in the Providence Pronouncement which was adopted by the Catholic intercollegiate interracial conference held there in 1938, "We believe that no action can truly be called Catholic that excludes interracial justice from its program of justice and charity in human relations."

CATHOLIC NEGRO MISSIONS

According to the latest report of the Commission for Catholic Missions among the Colored People and the Indians, there are 300,447 Catholic Negroes in the United States. The following statistics will prove enlightening:

Negroes in U. S. ....	12,865,518
Protestant Negroes ....	5,660,618
Catholic Negroes .....	300,447
Unchurched Negroes (est.) .....	6,904,453
Catholic Negro Churches	312
Priests in Colored Mis- sions .....	435
Sisters in Colored Mis- sions .....	1,600
Catholic Negro Parochial Schools .....	244
Enrollment in Parochial Schools .....	47,138
Negro Eccles. College and Seminary .....	1
Catholic Negro Colleges	3
Catholic Negro Boarding Academies and Voca- tional Schools .....	12
Catholic Negro High Schools .....	50
Negro Students in These Institutions .....	5,000

In its work among the Negroes the Church has these two main objectives in view: first, the religious welfare of the Catholics; secondly, the propagation of the Faith among the non-Catholics. At the present time, adequate church facilities, priests dedicated to their service, and efficient schools have been provided for Negro Catholics where large groups of them make special churches and schools feasible and social circumstances render them advisable. In this manner more than two-thirds of them receive devoted and excellent pastoral care. However, in many places the number of Catholic Negroes is quite small or else they are widely scattered. This is the condition in many large cities of the North, whither Negroes have migrated from the South in recent years.

Here efforts have been made to incorporate them into the white parishes where they happen to have settled. Not only may it be said that the Negro Catholics in this country have on the whole ample opportunities for the practice of their religion and for the education of their children, but it may be said that most of them are availing themselves of these opportunities. They have proven themselves faithful Catholics and show their appreciation of church and school by what are for them generous contributions to their support.

The second objective of the Negro apostolate is the propagation of the Faith among the 12,500,000 non-Catholic Negroes in the United States. Whilst a majority of the adults are affiliated to the Negro branches of the Protestant sects, millions of others have very meagre religious beliefs. These spiritually ignorant multitudes offer unquestionably a vast field for missionary enterprise. Parts of it hold out tempting promises, and these opportunities are by no means neglected. The larger number of Catholic religious centers for Negroes in the Southern States, approximately one hundred of them, are predominantly missionary in character. That is to say, they are striving to build up congregations in places where there were few, if any, Catholics before. Most of the 75 Negro parishes in the North, although occupied chiefly in ministering to Catholic Negroes, are at the same time carrying on active and successful missionary work. The harvest of Negro converts is considerable. During the past ten years it numbered 50,000 souls. Moreover the yield grows from year to year. Last year 6,326 Negro converts were reported.

Despite the successful efforts already made, the field yet to be tilled is immense. Of the 12,865,518 Negroes in this country, 5,660,618 are reported to be members of various Protestant churches, according to the latest statistics of the U. S. Bureau of Census, which counts only adult members. Their children should of course be taken into account. Many others would also call themselves Christians. Yet there are multitudes with little knowledge of religion in any form.

Unquestionably many non-Catholic Negroes are sincere, upright men and women, who would gladly embrace the true Faith when it is presented to them. However, the making of converts is not usually an easy or a simple matter. The initial difficulty is the attitude of very many Negroes toward the Catholic Church. It is an attitude of unfriendliness, if not of violent antipathy, due both to ignorance of the Church and to deep prejudices, bred by the hostile public opinion of the communities in which they live. Besides this, most church members are attached to and satisfied with their own churches. In the case of others, indifference to any religion is found, or irregular marital relations, or deep-rooted sins.

The main avenue of approach to the non-Catholic Negro is the Catholic mission schools. The helpful interest in their children shown by the Sisters and their efficient teaching appeal to the parents. The friendly contacts thus made break down prejudice against the Church and often result in the conversion of parents and other relatives and prepare the more mature pupils for conversion.

The social welfare activities sponsored by the Negro parish or mission extend also to non-Catholic Negroes. The facilities of the community halls, hospitals, clinics, libraries, athletic and other social and recreational organizations, although intended chiefly for Catholic parishioners, are also available to their non-Catholic friends and acquaintances. The priest is thus enabled to establish friendly contacts with prospective converts, to show them his genuine interest in their welfare, and to explain Catholic beliefs and practices to them.

Interracial relations between the Negro and his white neighbors, which on the whole are far from satisfactory, not only constitute a sore in the body politic of the nation, but they also even impede to some extent the approach of the Church to the non-Catholic Negro. In the minds of some of them she is regarded as only another unfriendly white institution, an impression that Protestant bigotry is glad to confirm. But to say that Catholics have ignored the Negro and his wrongs is only a half truth. The other half of the truth is that the Negro is an unknown quantity to the vast majority of Catholics. The bulk of them live in the Northern States where until recently Negroes penetrated in only small numbers; in the Southern States, where the majority of the Negro population lives, Catholics are insignificant numerically.

As a matter of fact, Catholics are showing sincere interest in the welfare of the Negro, temporal as well as spiritual. Notable is the attitude of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, the Catholic Interracial Council, and many local groups and Catholic organizations. Two Catholic monthlies, "The Colored Harvest" and "Our Colored Missions," which specialize in religious activities among the Negroes, are active in promoting better race relations. The Catholic press generally publishes frequent articles calculated to give a better understanding of the Negroes' problems and to show Catholics how they may aid in their solution.

This interest in the Negro is not strange to a Catholic, for the Church has always demanded respect for basic human rights irrespective of race or condition and has always manifested a deep sympathy for the downtrodden. Catholics in this country have demonstrated their interest in the Negro by deeds as well as by words. They have supported the growing religious and charitable work for the colored people, which is actually carried on by their own sons and daughters. This was in fact one of the first missionary activities of the Church in the United States.

All this has been inspired and encouraged by their pastors and bishops. The Sovereign Pontiff himself has frequently urged them to even greater efforts. In one of his first public pronouncements to the world the present Pope declared: "We confess that we feel a special paternal affection, which is certainly inspired of heaven, for the Negro people dwelling among you; for in the field of religion and education we know that they need especial care and comfort and are very deserving of it. We therefore invoke an abundance of heavenly blessings and we pray fruitful success for those whose generous zeal is devoted to their welfare."

------------------------------	--------

The Catholic Church entered the New World immediately after its discovery to spread the Faith among the Indians and to act as their protector and civilizer. But later on, warfare among the Colonial powers, Britain, France and Spain, as well as warfare among the Indian tribes, blighted or destroyed extensive and promising missions in the Southeastern and Southwestern parts of the United States, and along the Great Lakes and in the Mississippi Valley. After the War of Independence the infant American Church struggled with its feeble resources to revive and continue this work. Her original inheritance of a few hundred Indians in a few scattered missions God has increased through the self-sacrificing labors of her missionaries into a multitude of a hundred thousand souls. Today Indian Missions flourish in twenty-one states and in the Territory of Alaska.

Converted tribes have clung tenaciously to their Faith, despite the lure of their tribal life and customs. With the white man's invasion of the land which the red man believed to be his own, came the greatest dangers to the religious and the temporal welfare of the Indians. The Federal government assumed the direction of Indian Affairs, but its influence has been often feeble and often inimical to the interests and the rights of its wards. But the Church has never ceased to be their friend and advocate. Her chief instrumentality has been the Bureau of Catholic Indian Missions, created in 1874 to represent at Washington the interests both of the Missions and of the Indians, and to secure support of the religious, charitable and educational work of the Catholic Missions.

Pioneers and still leaders in the Indian Mission work are the Franciscans, Jesuits and Benedictines. The Franciscan Fathers of the Sacred Heart Province are laboring at present among the Ottawas in Michigan, and the Menominees, Chippewas and Stockbridges in Wisconsin. The Province of St. John the Baptist has missionaries among the Pueblos of New Mexico, the Navajos of New Mexico and Arizona, the Hopis of Arizona and the Utes in Colorado. The Santa Barbara Province has charge of the Pima, Papago, Apache and Maricopa Reservations in Southern Arizona; the Mescalero Apache Reservation in New Mexico; the Yuma Reservation and several Mission Indian Rancheries in California. The Capuchin Fathers of the Province of St. Joseph are working among the Northern Cheyenne Indians of Montana, and the Fathers of the Irish Province among the Pomo Indians of California.

The Jesuit Fathers have Missions among the Eskimos and Tinnah Indians in Alaska; the Yakima, Colville and Spokanes in Washington; the Umatillas in Oregon; the Coeur d'Alenes and Nez Perces of Idaho; the Flatheads, Crows, Assiniboin, Gros Ventres and Blackfeet in Montana; the Sioux in South Dakota; the Pottawatomi in Kansas; and the Arapahos and Shoshoni in Wyoming.

The Benedictines conduct Missions among the Chippewas of Minnesota, the Sioux in North and South Dakota; the Turtle Mountain Crees and Chippewas, the Mandans, Arickaree and Hidatsa of North Dakota; the Pottawatomi, Kiowa, Caddos and Comanches of Oklahoma. The Fathers of the Sacred Heart are represented among the South Dakota Sioux; the Society of the Divine Saviour are at Grande Ronde, Oregon; the Theatine Fathers attend the Southern Utes of Colorado. Diocesan priests carry on work among the Indians of Maine, New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington and Montana.

Missionary work has been confronted by serious difficulties. The people we call Indians belong to almost two hundred different tribes, with different customs and even languages. Few of them cultivate the land or live in fixed settlements. Dependent upon hunting and the wild fruits of nature, they lead a nomadic life. This has made it hard for the missionary to reach them and to train them to regular practice of religious duties. Even today many Indians find it hard to settle down. They have not yet conceived a strong attachment to land or property. The missionary gains converts one by one, and much pastoral visitation is often necessary to keep his flock up to the observance of a Catholic standard of life.

Much effective work has been done and is still being done by the mission schools. The future and the hope of every race lie in its young people. The missionaries have accordingly made great efforts to reach and to train the children. Their purpose is, first of all, to teach the children their religion, then habits of industry and orderliness, the use of the English language, and the other elements of education. In the case of the older pupils, attention is given to training that will equip them to make a livelihood and to maintain better homes. In this way the rising generation is being fitted to lead useful, self-respecting and Christian lives on their own reservation. Poor as it may be, most Indians have neither the inclination nor the opportunity to make a livelihood elsewhere.

The larger number of mission schools, 36 of them, are now day schools. In places where the Indians are widely scattered or unsettled, or where there are broken or poor homes, boarding schools are rendering good service. There are 31 of these with 4,130 pupils.

Some of the Indian tribes are now entirely Catholic. In these cases the work of the priest and of the Sisters in the school is much the same as it would be in a poor rural parish. Many of the larger tribes, however, are either partly pagan or Protestant. Here the work is predominantly missionary in character, to win these to the true Faith. One-third of the Indians are now Catholics, and the work of the Missions may be said to be well begun but by no means finished.

THE CATHOLIC MATERNITY GUILD APOSTOLATE

Catholic maternity guilds are associations of Christian charity, in which the faithful of both sexes, married and single, cooperate for the promotion of the primary end of marriage, the procreation and education of children. In the encyclical on Christian Marriage, Pope Pius XI declared: "Quite fittingly...do those pastors of souls act who, to prevent married people from failing in the observance of God's law, urge them to perform their duty and exercise their religion so that they should give themselves to God, continually ask for His divine assistance, frequent the sacraments and always nourish and preserve a loyal and thoroughly sincere devotion to God." But the Holy Father added: "Since it is no rare thing to find that the perfect observance of God's commands and conjugal integrity encounter difficulties by reason of the fact that the man and wife are in straightened circumstances, their necessities must be relieved as far as possible." As secondary means, Pius XI then recommended "public and private guilds."

Genesis of the Crusade—The Redemptorist missionary, Rev. Joseph J. Schagemann, C. Ss. R., of Annapolis, Md., conceived the plan of parochial guilds, founded and canonically erected as "Piae Uniones," subject entirely to the jurisdiction of the Ordinary, to inspire reverence for parenthood, to counteract the evil of contraception, and to build up the Mystical Body of Christ. On March 11, 1931, shortly after the promulgation of the encyclical, the plan was offered as "A Suggestion for Catholic Action," after a retreat to nurses at Providence Hospital, Sandusky, Ohio. In January, 1932, the lecture was published under the title, "Why Not A Maternity Guild?" in the official Bulletin of the National Catholic Women's Union.

The movement was inaugurated in August, 1932, at the National Convention of the N. C. W. U. in St. Louis, Mo. Since that time this organization has pioneered in the founding of guilds, which have also been established by other associations of the faithful in various dioceses. In one diocese a priest was appointed by the Bishop to direct the Apostolate, and in 27 parishes the start has been made.

Reports of guilds in operation can be obtained from the Rev. Joseph Schagemann, C. Ss. R., P. O. Box 746, Annapolis, Md.

The Means—Means of the natural and supernatural order are employed to attain the objectives.

Financial aid is given on the self-help and the mutual-aid plan of co-operative guilds, to lessen the allurements of the temptation to contraception, by helping parents to defray the costs of maternity care, by providing aid to meet current school expenses, and by an initial contribution to encourage parents and later on the children in building up a fund which will enable them to make a successful start in life. As the maternity guild is a national asset, both financially and culturally, the suggestion was made by the founder at the 1942 convention of the N.C.W.U. that U. S. war stamps and war bonds be contributed by the members for present needs and for investment in long-range planning.

Cultural activity, the more important feature of the guild plan, requires lectures and discussions on the physical care of mother and child, together with the careful perusal of the pamphlet literature of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. For the promotion of virtuous married life, the guilds are co-ordinated with the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

Authentic Information—The brochure, "The Catholic Maternity Guild Apostolate," distributed gratis by the Central Bureau of the Catholic Central Verein, 3835 Westminster Place, St. Louis, Mo., is the authentic treatise. Copies of the specific suggestions offered at the 1942 Convention may be obtained from Father Schagemann.

Catholicism and Literature

Literature is an art which expresses truth, goodness and beauty in an artistic fashion. Yet these three metaphysical objects of the literary art are so bound up with nature that literature becomes a vivid interpretation of nature and human nature in terms of truth and beauty. It is only from the Author of nature that the secrets of nature and the complexities of the human soul can be learned: hence literature finally rests in its perfect form upon an exact and worthy interpretation of truth, goodness and beauty in creation, which is a reflection of the eternal blueprint in the mind of God, obtained through Divine Revelation wherein are divulged the secrets of the Creator, and through the Church of God which He has appointed custodian of that same Revelation.

The Church has always encouraged literature and the fine arts when they have been untainted with pagan sensuality. The Church has always denounced and repressed all literature tainted with moral evil.

THE IMPRIMATUR

Some books are required by Church Law to have ecclesiastical censorship prior to publication. When these books have been censored and approved they bear the Imprimatur of the Ordinary. The Imprimatur, or permission to have the book published, is not an approval of the contents but is only the judgment of the respective authority that the book may, under present circumstances, be read without detriment to faith or morals.

Among the classes of books or publications that require ecclesiastical censorship prior to publication are the following:

- (1) Books of Holy Writ; annotations or commentaries on the books of Holy Writ.
- (2) Books treating of Holy Scripture, sacred theology, church history, canon law, natural theology, and ethics.
- (3) Prayer-books; devotional, catechetical, moral, ascetical, and mystical books and pamphlets.
- (4) All writings which contain anything that particularly concerns religion and morals.
- (5) Sacred images when printed, whether or not a prayer is printed with them.

BOOKS PROSCRIBED BY CANON LAW

In order to preserve faith and morals and in an effort to make clear the mind of the Church regarding the prohibition of harmful books the Code of Canon Law explicitly states what type of book is forbidden.

The following books or publications because of their nature or because of their lack of approval by competent authority are, in general, prohibited by the Code of Canon Law:

- (1) Editions of the original text and of ancient Catholic versions of Holy Scripture, even those of the Oriental Church, which are published by non-Catholics; translations of the same texts made or edited by non-Catholics.
- (2) Books of any writers which defend heresy or schism or which tend in any way to overthrow the very foundations of religion.

- (3) Books which avowedly attack religion or good morals.
- (4) Books of any non-Catholics which treat professedly of religion, unless it is evident that they contain nothing contrary to the Catholic Faith.
- (5) Books of Sacred Scripture, commentaries and notes concerning them, and translations published without the permission required. Canon Law demands that certain books, mentioned above, be subject to ecclesiastical approval. Also books and booklets which tell of new apparitions, revelations, visions, prophecies and miracles, or which introduce new devotions, even under the pretext that they are private, unless they were edited in accordance with the precepts of Canon Law.
- (6) Books which impugn or deride any Catholic dogmas, which defend errors proscribed by the Apostolic See, which detract from divine worship, which attempt to overthrow ecclesiastical discipline, or which avowedly aim to defame the hierarchy or the clerical or religious state.
- (7) Books which teach or approve any kind of superstition, fortune-telling, divination, magic, evoking of spirits and the like.
- (8) Books which declare that duelling, suicide or divorce is licit; which, treating of the Masonic or similar sects, contend that these are useful and not dangerous to the Church and civil society.
- (9) Books which of set purpose treat of, tell or teach obscene or impure topics.
- (10) Editions of liturgical books approved by the Apostolic See in which something has been so changed that it does not agree with the authentic and approved editions.
- (11) Books in which indulgences are recorded which are apocryphal or proscribed and recalled by the Holy See.
- (12) Printed images of Our Lord, the Blessed Virgin Mother, the angels and saints and other servants of God, not in accord with the spirit and decrees of the Church.

THE INDEX OF PROHIBITED BOOKS

During the Middle Ages the prohibitions of books were more numerous than in ancient times due to the necessity of suppressing heresy and the fact that writings were more widely disseminated through the invention of printing. To prevent the faithful from reading books that might ruin either their faith or morals various catalogues of prohibited books were printed by private enterprise until Pope Paul IV commissioned the Holy Office to prepare a general index. This first Roman "Index of Prohibited Books" was published in 1559. Later appeared the Tridentine Index ordered by the Council of Trent and published in 1564 with the approval of Pope Pius IV. It has been often reprinted and, as modified and corrected by Leo XIII, is now followed. The last edition, published in 1938, reproduces the previous edition of 1929, and includes all additions made to it up to the end of February, 1938.

A special Congregation for the Reform of the Index and Correction of Books was created by Pius V in 1571. This Congregation had universal jurisdiction. It sought out pernicious publications, which if it deemed suitable after mature examination, it condemned and proscribed.

In 1917 Pope Benedict XV, by a "Motu Proprio," turned over this office of censoring publications to the Congregation of the Holy Office. This "Motu Proprio" was confirmed in Canon 247 of the Code.

It is to be noted that books forbidden by the Holy See are forbidden everywhere and in whatsoever language they may be translated. The term, "books," applies in the Index legislation to published volumes and to booklets, pamphlets and leaflets as well.

GROUND PLAN FOR CATHOLIC READING

(Excerpts from a booklet of the name, with permission of the author, F. J. Sheed.)

A man in his twenties cannot possibly graduate from college educated; the college will have done its work nobly if he leaves it educable. A reading-habit man must have, and if he has never had a proper formal education as a youth he may still, by reading, arrive at the maturity proper to his own mind.

The plan of reading here suggested is offered to all those who for any reason feel they need some such guide. There are certain books in it for which there is no possible substitute. They must be read. There are others for which quite satisfactory substitutes might well be found: their importance is that they cover a certain piece of ground.

A. Preliminary (To Clear Mind's Atmosphere)

1. To Tone up the Mind — Insensibly every Catholic has acquired certain sympathies which his judgment tells him to be wrong but which from daily habit come automatically into operation. Before he can set about the serious study of life, his mind needs certain corrective exercises. It must pass some time in company of minds fully emancipated and thus fully Catholic. The following four books will be useful here.

Orthodoxy, by G. K. Chesterton.

Now I See, by Arnold Lunn.

The Path to Rome, by Hilaire Belloc.

Secret of the Cure D'Ars, by Henri Gheon.

2. God-Made-Man — Any course of Catholic study must begin with a study of Christ Who is the key to all understanding. The Gospels are indispensable. Yet, life has changed so immensely in the two thousand years that have elapsed since Christ lived on earth that the Gospels will not yield all their fruit to one who comes to them unprepared. A good life of our Lord is an excellent aid to Gospel reading. The following is a practical scheme:

The Gospel of St. Luke.

A Life of Our Lord, by Fr. Vincent McNabb, O.P.

The Gospel of St. John.

3. Man and God — Having thus come to a clearer knowledge of Christ in Himself, the reader should get some notion of what is meant by the statement that Christ is the key to the understanding of history. Read:

The Everlasting Man, by G. K. Chesterton.

4. Summary — For a first rough notion of what is meant by synthesis or total view, read:

A Map of Life, by F. J. Sheed.

B. Reading for the Total View

This course will of necessity be stiffer. Reading is thinking — thinking with someone else. It is not simply listening. Above all, it is not letting someone else cultivate your mind. No one else can. Others can provide the seeds and the fertilizer; you must do the actual cultivating. For concurrent reading:

The Gospels.

The Acts of the Apostles.

The Epistles.

The Psalms.

The Imitation of Christ.

1. God — Begin by coming to a clearer notion of what is meant by God, and what reasons we have for our certainty of His existence. Read:
Natural Theology, by G. H. Joyce, S. J.
2. God-Made-Man — For man, the most fruitful study of God is God in our nature, and this is one prime value of the Incarnation, that it enables us to study God acting in our nature, doing and suffering the things we do and suffer. Read:
Whom Do You Say? by J. P. Arendzen.
The Son of God, by Karl Adam.
3. Man — The mind has now a fuller and clearer idea of God. What of man? What kind of creature is he? Read:
The Human Soul, by Abbot Vonier.
4. Man's Need for God — Human history testifies to man's essential incompleteness and consequent need for God. Consciously or unconsciously, man has always been reaching out for God. Read:
Progress and Religion, by Christopher Dawson.
The Unknown God, by Alfred Noyes.
5. God's Response to Man's Need — The complete answer given by God to this irrepressible human urge for communion with Him is the Church, not thought of simply as an institution for teaching truth and administering sacraments but as the Mystical Body of Christ. Read:
Christ in the Church, by Robert Hugh Benson.
The Spirit of Catholicism, by Karl Adam.
6. More about Man — From what we have seen of God's plan for humanity, it is time to look more closely at man. Read:
Psychology, by Michael Maher, S. J.
The Pursuit of Happiness, by Walter Farrell, O. P.
Christian Marriage (the encyclical, Casti Connubii).
In Defense of Purity, by Dietrich von Hildebrand.
Quadragesimo Anno, encyclical of Pius XI.
Religion and the Modern State, by Christopher Dawson.
7. The Saints — The Christian life, the sum total of the relations between man and God, may seem a little remote simply as a set of principles. To see it as it has actually been lived will not only make the principles more vivid but take us far deeper into them. Read:
A Saint in the Slave Trade, by Arnold Lunn.
St. John of the Cross, by Fr. Bruno.
The Autobiography of St. Therese of Lisieux.
St. Francis of Assisi, by G. K. Chesterton.
8. The Great Dogmas — This study is the crown upon the edifice of Christian thinking, the supreme object of human thought. Read:
The Holy Trinity, by J. P. Arendzen.
The Holy Ghost, by Edward Leen, C. S. Sp.
Life in Christ, by Julius Tyciak.
Our Lady of Sorrows, by Charles Journet.
The Mysteries of Faith (Mass), by M. de la Taille.
What Becomes of the Dead, by J. P. Arendzen.
The Church and the Catholic, by Romano Guardini.
An Essay on Development, by Cardinal Newman.
9. Summary — Catholic doctrines are parts of a living system. Until the system in its totality has come to be the mind's inseparable possession, the study of individual dogmas may be accompanied by an obscuratization of this total view. It might be well at this stage to glance once more through:
A Map of Life, by F. J. Sheed.

C. Sectional Reading

The reading so far suggested should suffice to equip the mind with that view of being in its totality which is the indispensable element in education and in relation to which the parts may be seen in their proper significance. While the totality is held clear, every new thing learned is an advance for the mind, and that equilibrium is reached in which parts and whole illuminate each other. The following reading is suggested:

1. Philosophy:

St. Thomas Aquinas, by G. K. Chesterton.
Introduction to Philosophy, by Jacques Maritain.
Natural Theology, by G. H. Joyce, S.J.
Modern Thomistic Philosophy, by R. P. Phillips.

2. Psychology:

General Psychology, by R. E. Brennan, O.P.
New Psychologies, by Rudolf Allers.
The Psychology of Character, by Rudolf Allers.

3. History:

The Life of the Church, by Pere Rousselot.
A History of the Church, by Philip Hughes.
The Making of Europe, by Christopher Dawson.
Characters of the Reformation, by Hilaire Belloc.
Life of Newman, by Wilfrid Ward.
The Catholic Church and History, by Hilaire Belloc.

4. Comparative Religion:

The Age of the Gods, by Christopher Dawson.
The Religions of Mankind, by Otto Karrer.

5. Scripture:

The Holy Bible.

6. Spirituality:

Ways of Christian Life, by Abbot Butler.
The Mystical Doctrine of St. John of the Cross.
Christ the Life of the Soul, by Abbot Marmion.
In the Likeness of Christ, by Edward Leen, C. S. Sp.
Prayer for all Times, by Pere Charles, S.J.

7. General Catholic Reading:

The Confessions of St. Augustine.
The City of God, by St. Augustine.
The Introduction to the Devout Life, by St. Francis de Sales.
The Apologia, by Cardinal Newman.
Idea of a University, by Cardinal Newman.
The Satin Slipper, by Paul Claudel.
Hymns to the Church, by Gertrud von le Fort.

Conclusion

One who has read these books carefully is on the way to being a reasonably well-read Catholic; there is no serious gap in what may be called his background equipment; he knows what the debate is about between the Church and the world; he is coming to see the whole of life as the Church sees it, to have the mind of the Church which is the mind of Christ; he knows the relations of things to God and to each other; he is equipped for the widest reading, for he has the context of life and every new item of knowledge can be put in its place in the context; he is in a state to verify Belloc's definition of the educated man — one who never confuses categories — for he knows where things come in the totality. All this, of course, is not everything. In comparison with what the mind thus equipped will later make of the immeasurable wonder of God and the universe, it will seem a trifle. But it is a beginning.

THE GALLERY OF LIVING CATHOLIC AUTHORS

To promote the apostolate of Catholic letters, the Gallery of Living Catholic Authors was founded by Sister Mary Joseph, S. L., in 1932 at Webster Groves, Mo. It has primarily for objective the recognition of living Catholic writers, the leaders of Catholic thought both here and abroad; and secondly the creation or the building up of a Catholic reading public, an intelligent and enthusiastic Catholic laity who know the Catholic authors, read their books, talk about them, demand their books at public libraries and consult the many guides and reviews in order to keep abreast of the output of Catholic literature. The Gallery functions through a Board of Governors composed of twenty national and international literary authorities, the St. Louis Consultative Committee, and the Committee on Juvenile Literature. Membership in the Gallery is unlimited: names of authors may be submitted by anyone and if approved by the Board the author is asked for an autographed photograph, a letter and a page or more of original manuscript. Originals are rephotographed and prints made and used for exhibition purposes, the originals being placed in safety files for preservation. Lantern slides are also made and used for the illustrated lectures given by the Director of the Gallery, Sister Mary Joseph, S. L., in schools and colleges, and before clubs, conferences and literary circles, throughout the United States, in order to build up a wide knowledge of Catholic writers. Such presentation of Catholic literary personalities serves to stimulate interest in their works and proves beyond doubt that Catholic authors are comparable in every phase of literature with the best of the un-Christian or the pagan writers who have captured the literary field. After ten years, membership in the Gallery numbers nearly 400 Catholic contemporary writers. Of these more than 300 are living and some 60 authors are now deceased.

When the Gallery reached the 200 mark, the Board decided to erect the greatest of the authors into an Academy, a Permanent Gallery, based in some points on the French Academy, membership in this Academy of forty contemporary immortals, twenty-five non-Americans and fifteen Americans, to be decided by the combined electoral and popular vote, vacancies to be filled by the Board. A national plebiscite was conducted by Rev. Francis X. Talbot, S. J., chairman of the Board and editor of "America," and over 1,500 votes were submitted. Partial results were published in "America," October 10, 1936. The list of contemporary immortals then included twenty non-American and eleven American authors; until the selection of forty is completed one American and one foreign author is to be chosen each year; no election has been held since 1939. G. K. Chesterton was elected to the Academy but died before the formal opening. Death claimed another member in 1939, when Archbishop Goodier died in London. The list as of January, 1943, includes the following:

Non-American Members of the Academy

In 1940 it was decided by the Board of Governors that a Catholic Literary Award be given annually for the outstanding book of the year by a member of the Gallery. The first Award was given posthumously to Eric Gill for his "Autobiography," published just after his death in 1940. The second Award was made to the Rev. Walter Farrell, O. P., for "A Companion to the Summa."

The Gallery plans to be not only a collection of autographed photographs, letters and pages of manuscripts, but a place of research for scholars and students working on the history of contemporary Catholic literature, a research library complete as to books, pamphlets, booklets and magazine articles written by these twentieth-century authors, an information service offering biographical and bibliographical data on these writers; in fine, a Catholic clearing-house of information and suggestions, international in scope, authority and function. There are now in Gallery Hall at Webster College, Webster Groves, Mo., 30,000 pages of manuscript and over 300 letters and autographed photographs of authors. There is also a card catalogue giving biographical and bibliographical data on 5,000 authors, which is constantly being enlarged and brought up to date. Books of Gallery authors are solicited from publishers, in order to build up a complete library of modern Catholic literature.

Eventually the Gallery of Living Catholic Authors will be housed in a building of its own. Were this in New York, the literary center of the world, it could function as a club for authors and those interested in literature. One was specially designed for it by the great non-Catholic architect, Ralph Adams Cram. The completion of his plans and the realization of the above objectives depend upon those who desire to assist in the work of making Catholic authors better known.

In order to assist the Gallery in its work, the Friends of the Gallery were formed in Dec., 1941, in anticipation of its tenth anniversary year. They aid financially by annual membership dues, and in return receive not only the spiritual benefits of participation in a vital form of Catholic Action, but keep in touch with Catholic literary activities by means of a monthly "News Bulletin" sent to the Friends of the Gallery. The "Bulletin" is issued from the office of the Eastern Representative of the Gallery (45 Prospect Place, New York City), whence publicity also is sent out. This covers a wide field, as Gallery membership embraces authors from all over the world.

Catholics have much to give. Spiritual standards make the books written by the greater number of Catholic writers not less literary and certainly richer in content than they would otherwise be. And if the rising generation can be stimulated to create a greater Catholic literature they will have achieved a necessary work of Catholic Action. The highest ecclesiastical approval and the special blessing of the Holy Father have been given the Gallery of Living Catholic Authors.

RECOMMENDED BOOKS

Published September, 1941 — August, 1942 (inclusive)

In the Archdiocese of New York a committee makes a survey of all books published in English, and selects from them a list of those recommended to Catholic readers. This Cardinal Hayes Literature Committee publishes quarterly about a hundred titles of recommended books. These catalogues are called "The Book Survey." The work is done by highly qualified readers who are governed in their judgment by an enlightened Catholic sense. Qualifications for listing in the "Survey" are three: (1) the book must be worthy of a mature intelligence; (2) it must not offend the Christian sense of truth or decency; (3) it must bear the marks of good literary craftsmanship.

To quote from the "Survey": "It is no exaggeration to say that many of the evils from which we are at present suffering were produced by books, books which have weakened faith, corrupted taste, undermined morals and left most of the world floundering in despair. Today even Catholics read with equanimity books that not only picture but create these conditions, but it is high time that Catholics ceased to regard these conditions as natural phenomena for which they have no responsibility and which they are powerless to change, high time they realized that unless they exert themselves in some positive fashion to offset them they are indeed morally responsible for them.

"The duty of the Catholic is clear. . . . We have lain too long under the literary dictatorship of the powers of darkness. It is time we declared our independence, first, by refusing to read immoral books; second, by refusing to apologize for that refusal; third, by reading the good books which are being published in sufficient number and variety to keep readers of every taste continuously occupied and pleased."

The following is a list of recommended books published during the year from September, 1941, to August, 1942, inclusive.

THE CATHOLIC BOOK CLUB

The Catholic Book Club was founded in 1928 to encourage the writing and publication of books that mirror the Catholic philosophy of life. It sends each month to members of the Club a book chosen as the best publication of that date according to standards of literary merit and which is in no way offensive to Catholic morals and beliefs. The Board of Editors who make the selections is composed of clergy and laity especially concerned with present-day American letters. A "Newsletter" accompanies each book, and a Quarterly Supplement has reviews of current fiction which are especially valuable to librarians. Over 250,000 books have been distributed to members of the Club in each of the 48 states and in 16 foreign countries. It is estimated that over 1,000,000 persons have read the Book Club selections. An attractive book shop is maintained at the Club headquarters at 140 East 45th Street, New York City. Books and magazines may be purchased there, and information on books obtained.

The Catholic Book Club selections for 1942 were as follows:

Canton Captain, by James B. Connolly (Doubleday, Doran).
Fast by the Road, by John Moody (Macmillan).
I, Too, Have Lived in Arcadia, by Marie Belloc-Lowndes (Dodd, Mead).
And Down the Days, by John L. Bonn, S. J. (Macmillan).
Seventeenth Summer, by Maureen Daly (Dodd, Mead).
Faith the Root, by Barbara F. Fleury (Dutton).
Living Upstairs, by Francis Meehan (Dutton).

The Reed and the Rock, by Theodore Maynard (Longmans, Green).
The Judgment of the Nations, by Christopher Dawson (Sheed & Ward).
Across a World, by John J. Conside, M. M. (Longmans).
Great Modern Catholic Short Stories, compiled by Sister Mariella Gable, O. P. (Sheed & Ward).
Second Sowing, by Mother Margaret Williams, R. S. C. J. (Sheed & Ward).

THE SPIRITUAL BOOK ASSOCIATES

The aim of the Spiritual Book Associates is to popularize books of high calibre that have not merely a secular literary value, but the charm and inspiration of literature that is spiritual. The organization was initiated in September, 1934, and distributes to each subscribing Associate ten outstanding books of the year, a book each month except July and August. The Spiritual Book Associates have headquarters in New York City, at 381 Fourth Avenue.

The books selected by the Spiritual Book Associates for 1942 were:

Things that Matter, by Rev. A. Roche (Spiritual Book Associates).
We Would See Jesus, by M. Egan, S. J. (Spiritual Book Associates).
Jeremias, Man of Tears, by Rev. H. Van Zeller (Spiritual Book Associates).
Father John Sullivan, S. J., by Fergal McGrath, S. J. (Longmans, Green).
In No Strange Land, by Katherine Burton (Longmans, Green).
Rig for Church, by Capt. William A. McGuire, U. S. N. (Macmillan).

House of Peace, by M. Egan, S. J. (Spiritual Book Associates).
Addresses and Sermons, by Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani (St. Anthony Guild).
School of Mary, by Rev. John Kane (St. Anthony Guild).
We Wish to See Jesus, by Paul Blakely, S. J. (America Press).
Book of Simple Words, by Sister Julie (Kenedy).
The Way of the Blessed Christ, by Vincent Kienberger, O. P. (Longmans, Green).
Shining in Darkness, by F. X. Talbot, S. J. (America Press).

CATHOLIC CHILDREN'S BOOK CLUB

Pro Parvulis is a national book club for Catholic youth. Its members are divided into four age-groups: children under ten; boys ten to fifteen; girls ten to fifteen; boys and girls of high-school age. Members receive six carefully chosen new books during the year, together with a critical book-review magazine, the "Herald." The "Herald" reviews, suggests, and lists new and old books for children and also serves high-school young people. It is issued six times a year and may be obtained by subscription independently of book-club membership. The Board of Directors of Pro Parvulis is headed by the Most Rev. Francis P. Keough, Bishop of Providence, as Honorary President. The Rev. Francis X. Downey, S.J., the founder, was Director of the Club until his death, in April, 1942. The Rev. J. Gerard Mears, S.J., succeeded him as Director, in the following September. The Editorial Secretary is a trained, experienced children's librarian. This apostolate of reading for children has been blessed by Pope Pius XII. Pro Parvulis has a catalogue of books, entitled "New Worlds to Live," listing 1,000 books graded pre-school through high school. It has also a handbook of guiding principles for Catholics in selection of children's literature, entitled "Traffic Lights: Safe Cross-ways into Modern Children's Literature from the Catholic Point of View." Each is 50c a copy. In 1941 the senior group of Pro Parvulis had grown so that it was decided to give this group its own identity. It was named the Talbot Club, in honor of Fr. Francis Talbot, S.J., founder of the modern Catholic literature movement in the United States. A separate Board of Editors for the Talbot Club comprises the Rev. Harold Gardiner, S.J., the Rev. Joseph Cantillon, S.J., Teresa S. Fitzpatrick, Richard J. Hurley and Thomas Reiners. The beautiful rooms of the Book Club are in the Empire State Building, New York City, and are a national center. There one may browse, talk over problems, purchase lovely children's books and see the original paintings of many of our fine Catholic illustrators.

The following books were chosen for club members during 1942:

Younger Children

The Emperor's Nephew, by Marian W. Magoon (Farrar & Rinehart).
Bibi, the Baker's Horse, by Anna B. Stewart (Lippincott).

Some Famous Catholic Men of Achievement

STATESMEN AND LEADERS

Albert or Albrecht (died 1229)—Bishop of Riga, Apostle of Livonia. Founded Riga 1201 and by 1206 had re-Christianized Livonia. In 1202 he established Knights of the Sword.

Albornoz, Gil Alvarez Carillo de (1310-1367)—Archbishop of Toledo, cardinal, general and statesman. Regained the Papal States for the Pope in 1354, and his "Egidian Constitutions" for them prevailed until 1816. Founded college at Bologna.

Alfred the Great (849-899)—First Saxon King of England; noted for wise laws, and the spread of religion; he inspired the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle.

Barry, John (1745-1803)—Captain when that rank was highest in the U. S. Navy; he captured many British vessels during the Revolution, and is called the Father of the American Navy.

Beaton, David (1494-1546)—Cardinal Archbishop of St. Andrews and statesman. He opposed Henry VIII in separating Scotland from its loyalty to the Holy See, and as Regent for Mary was assassinated by Henry's agents.

Benson, William S. (1855-1933)—Admiral, United States Navy. Chief of Naval Operations in First World War. Elected first president of the National Council of Catholic Men.

Burnett, Peter Hardeman (1807-1895)—First Governor of California after its admission to Union. Wrote "The Path Which Led a Protestant Lawyer to the Catholic Church."

Calvert, Cecil (1605-1675)—Second Lord Baltimore. His policy of religious toleration was carried out by his brother Leonard, who led the expedition, which settled at St. Mary's, 1634, and was first proprietary Governor of Maryland.

Calvert, George (1580-1632)—First Lord Baltimore. Held important posts under James I. Had to resign when converted. Established a colony in Newfoundland. Obtained land in northern Virginia (Maryland); died before charter was granted.

Carroll, Charles, of Carrollton

(1737-1832)—Member of Maryland Convention of 1775, one of delegation of four to Canada, 1776, member of the Continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence. Assisted in drawing up the Maryland Constitution, was member of State and U. S. Senates.

Carroll, John (1735-1815)—Born in Maryland. First Bishop of the hierarchy of the U. S., first Bishop of Baltimore, his diocese reaching from Georgia to Maine, and west to the Mississippi.

Charlemagne (742-814)—First ruler of the Holy Roman Empire. He defended the Papacy against the Lombards, developed agriculture, codified the Frankish law, began educational reform, encouraged church music, and was zealous for church discipline.

Charles Martel (c. 688-741)—Duke of Austria, son of Pepin. Re-established the authority of the Frankish monarchy. Drove the Saracens out of Europe in 732 A. D. at the battle of Tours and was thereafter called Martel (the Hammer).

Constantine the Great (275-337)—Roman emperor. Granted liberty of worship to Christians in Edict of Milan. Promoted welfare of empire and bestowed many favors on the Church. His capital Constantinople was renamed for him, 330.

Creighton, John (1831-1907)—Born, Ohio. He and his brother Edward founded Creighton University and took heroic part in 1861 in laying the first telegraph line that bound California to the rest of the nation. John was made a Knight of St. Gregory and a Roman Count by Leo XIII, and in 1900 received the Laetare Medal.

Doria, Andrea (1468-1560)—He served in the guards of Pope Innocent VIII; reorganized the Genoese fleet and directed the war against the Turks and Barbary pirates.

Ethelbert, Saint (560-616)—Confessor, King of Kent. His baptism by St. Augustine led to that of 10,000 of his countrymen. Issued first written laws to the English, built Canterbury and other churches.

Fisher, John, Saint (1459-1535) — Martyr. Cardinal and Bishop of Rochester, he steadfastly resisted Henry VIII in his attempt to secure a divorce from Catherine, and was beheaded when he refused to take the oath of succession acknowledging the issue of Henry and Anne as legitimate heirs to the English throne.

Fitz-Simmons, Thomas (1741-1811) — First Catholic to fill public office in Pennsylvania; a member of the Continental Congress, and of the first Congress of the United States; supposed to have been the first to suggest a protective tariff to aid American industry; one of the founders of Georgetown College.

Freppel, Charles Emile (1827-1891) — Bishop of Angers. He was the most attentively heard orator of the French Chamber of Deputies for eleven years. His works deal with the religious, political and social questions of his time.

Frontenac, Louis De Buade, Count (1622-1698) — Governor of New France; promoted the discoveries of Joliet and La Salle; left Canada enlarged, respected and in peace.

Garcia, Moreno Gabriel (1821-1875) — Great patriot. President of Ecuador: alone of all the rulers of the world protested against the despoilation of the Holy See in 1870.

Gaston, William (1778-1884) — North Carolina state senator, federalist congressman and judge of the North Carolina Supreme Court. In 1835, was responsible for repeal of constitutional provision which practically disenfranchised Catholics in his native state.

Gibbons, James (1834-1921) — Cardinal Archbishop of Baltimore. He occupied a conspicuous place in American public life as priest, prelate, patriot, controversialist, writer and apologete. Apostolic Delegate to the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. He championed the rights of labor. His widely read book, "Faith of Our Fathers," is a remarkably clear, simple exposition of the Catholic Faith.

Godfrey of Bouillon (1060-1100) — Duke of Lower Lorraine, "Defender of the Holy Sepulchre." On First Crusade, entered Jerusalem, of which he accepted the sovereignty.

Gregory the Illuminator, Saint (257-337) — Martyr, Bishop, apostle and national saint of Armenia. Helped free Armenia from the Persians, converted it so that Armenia became the first Christian state.

Hill, James J. (1838-1916) — The greatest of railroad builders in the United States. His railroad activities were chiefly responsible for the development of the western states.

Hunyady, Janos (1400-1456) — Hungarian defender of Christendom against the Turks. Defeated them at Belgrade, 1456. The Franciscan saint, John Capistran, led the left wing of the army joining Hunyady.

John of Austria, Don (1547-1578) — Catholic hero. As Admiral of the Austrian and Spanish fleets, he won the great victory of Lepanto over the Turks.

Kosciusko, Tadeusz (1746-1817) — Polish patriot. Served in Washington's army during the American Revolution. Headed the Revolution of Poland in 1794, but was captured and imprisoned by the Russians.

Ladislaus, Saint (1040-1095) — King of Hungary. Enlarged his kingdom and made Christianity the national religion.

Langton, Stephen (died 1228) — Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury, England, who led the English barons against King John. He is the author of the Magna Charta.

Laurier, Sir Wilfred (1841-1919) — Statesman. First French Canadian to become Premier of Canada.

Longstreet, James (1821-1904) — Major General in the Confederate Army. Became a Catholic after the Civil War.

Louis IX, Saint (1215-1270) — Confessor, King of France. A model Christian sovereign and religious ascetic. Made two Crusades.

MacMahon, Marie Edme Patrice Maurice de (1808-1893) — Great soldier. Created Marshal of France and Duke of Magenta for his victory of Magenta (1859), and Governor General of Algeria. In 1873, was elected President of France.

Mallinckrodt, Hermann von (1821-1874) — German statesman. Entering Prussian Parliament in 1852, assisted in founding the Center Party to defend Catholic rights.

Mallory, Stephen Russell (1813-1873) — Took part in the Seminole War and represented Florida in the United States Senate. In the Civil War he organized the Confederate navy.

Maximilian I, the Great (1573-1651) — Duke and Elector of Bavaria and Steward of the Holy Roman Empire. Made Catholicism the only religion in Bavaria.

Mazarin, Jules (1602-1661) — Cardinal. Prime Minister of France, under Louis XIII and Louis XIV; he concluded the Thirty Years' War by the Treaty of Westphalia.

McGivney Michael Joseph (1852-1890) — Priest of the Diocese of Hartford, Conn.; founded the Knights of Columbus in 1882.

McLoughlin, John (1784-1857) — Canadian physician and pioneer, known as the "Father of Oregon." Partner of the Hudsons Bay Co. Founder of Oregon City. Protected missionaries and because of aid to settlers from the United States was forced out of office and died in poverty.

Mercier, Desire Joseph (1851-1926) — Cardinal Archbishop of Malines. Outstanding figure in Belgian public and intellectual life and hero of the World War, an intrepid leader against the demands of German invaders. Restored Louvain after the war. In 1924, he began the "Malines Conversations," an attempt to unify the Anglican and Roman Churches.

Montcalm, Louis Joseph Gozon, Marquis de (1712-1759) — As Commander of the French army in Canada, was heroically faithful to duty against great odds.

Newman, John Henry (1801-1890) — Cardinal, famous English convert.

Had profound influence and induced many hundreds to follow him.

O'Connell, Daniel (1775-1847) — Called the "Liberator" of Ireland. Through his efforts Catholic Emancipation was granted in 1829.

Olaf Haroldson, Saint (995-1030) — Martyr. Converted Viking, elected to the throne of Norway, he endeavored to establish the Church on Anglo-Saxon lines. Was exiled and on his return fell in battle.

Pazmany, Peter (d. 1637) — Cardinal Primate of Hungary. Restored Catholicism in Hungary, translated Bible into Hungarian, founded the Hungarian University of Sciences.

Pepin the Short (714-768) — King of the Franks, son of Charles Martel and father of Charlemagne. Elected King and crowned with religious ceremonies, the first instance among the Franks. Forced the Lombards to restore central Italy to the Holy See.

Pole, Reginald (1500-1558) — Cardinal Archbishop of Canterbury. Opposed the divorce of Henry VIII and went into voluntary exile. Returning to England in Mary's reign, 1553, he became a considerable power in state affairs, but, uninterested in material promotion, his piety, learning and asceticism were the admiration of all.

Richelieu, Armand Jean du Plessis, Duke of (1585-1642) — Cardinal and famous statesman. Founder of the French Academy, 1634. Zealous as a churchman, as a statesman he was strong, eloquent, astute and vindictive.

Rochambeau, Jean Baptiste Donatien de Vimeur, Count de (1725-1807) — French Marshal who aided Washington in the Revolution.

Serra, Junipero (1713-1784) — Great Franciscan missionary to California, where he established numerous Missions.

Shea, Sir Ambrose (1815-1905) — Member of House assembly of Newfoundland almost continuously for 28 years. As Governor of the Bahamas, 1887-95, he introduced the sisal fibre in industry, organized a public bank and laid the Bahamas-Florida cable.

Sobieski, John (1629-1696)—Great Polish soldier. Rescued Vienna from the Turks and caused their expulsion from Poland and Hungary.

Stephen, Saint (975-1038) — Confessor, first King and apostle of Hungary.

Tancred (1073-1112) — Prince of Antioch, joined in the Crusade of 1096 and took Jerusalem in 1099.

Taney, Roger Brooke (1777-1864) — Born, Calvert Co., Maryland. Great jurist, fifth Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Responsible for the Dred Scott Decision.

Thomas Becket, Saint (1118-1170) Martyr, Archbishop of Canterbury, Chancellor of England, statesman and soldier. Was murdered for protecting the Church against the encroachments of the State under Henry II.

Vladimir, Saint (956-1015)—Called "the Great." Grand Duke of Kiev and all Russia and its first Christian ruler. Established schools, churches and the ecclesiastical court, zealously spreading the faith.

William the Conqueror (1027-1087) —Duke of Normandy. Invaded England 1066, defeated Harold at Hastings and was crowned King of England.

Windthorst, Ludwig (1812-1891) —Advanced Catholic rights in Germany. Established school known as "People's Union for Catholic Germany."

Wiseman, Nicholas Patrick (1802-1865)—Cardinal, first Archbishop of Westminster. Influential in Catholic revival in England.

Ximenez de Cisneros, Francisco (1436-1517)—Franciscan statesman. Archbishop of Toledo, Viceroy of Burgundy, Chancellor, then Grand Inquisitor of Castile and Leon, and Cardinal. In 1509 he defeated the Moors at Oran. As regent on the death of Ferdinand he moved the seat of government to Madrid, reformed tax laws, and became interested in the welfare of the natives of the Spanish-American possessions.

Zumarraga, Juan de (1468-1548)—Franciscan, first Bishop of Mexico. Saved Mexico from a bloody civil struggle by securing modification of the "Nuevas Leyes." Founded hospitals in Mexico and Vera Cruz, the famous Colegio Tlaltelolco, and introduced the printing press into the New World. Gave impetus to industries, agriculture and manufacture.

DISCOVERERS AND EXPLORERS

Henry the Navigator (1394-1460) Son of King John I of Portugal. Discovered the Azores, the Madeira and Cape Verde Islands, and traced African coast as far as Sierra Leone.

Joliet, Louis (1645-1700) — French Canadian explorer of the Mississippi with Marquette in 1673.

La Salle, Rene Robert Cavelier, Sieur de (1643-1687) — Discovered the Ohio River and explored the valley of the Mississippi River for France.

Magellan, Ferdinand (1480-1521) — Portuguese navigator. Charles I of Spain sponsored his attempt to circumnavigate the globe. He sailed westward and discovered the Strait of Magellan, the Ladrones and the Philippines, where he was slain. His companions, continuing westward, returned to Spain, proving the world's rotundity.

Marquette, Jacques (1636-1675) — Jesuit, discoverer of upper course of the Mississippi in 1673. He left a valuable diary of his voyage, with maps. His statue was placed by Wisconsin in the Hall of Fame, Washington, D. C.

Ocampo, Sebastian (1466-1521) — Circumnavigated Cuba and proved its insular character.

Orellana, Francisco de (1500-1546) — Spanish navigator who explored the course of the Amazon River.

Perez, Juan (d. before 1513) — Franciscan, aided Columbus in his plans for discovery, accompanied him on second voyage and said first Mass in New World.

Pizarro, Francisco (1471-1541) — Spanish explorer and conqueror of Peru.

Polo, Marco (1251-1324) — Greatest of travelers; blessed by the Pope before his departure to China, where he was highly esteemed at court. The remarkable account of his travels is called the "Book of Marco Polo."

Ponce de Leon (1460-1521) — Spanish discoverer of Florida.

Rubruck, William (1200-1256) — Franciscan traveler in the East, especially China. His account of his travels is a geographical masterpiece.

Verrazano, Giovanni da (1485-1527) — Explored the coast of North America for Francis I of France; claimed by his Italian countrymen as discoverer of the Hudson River.

SCIENTISTS

Agricola, George (Bauer) (1494-1555) — Described contemporary melting and smelting methods. Is called the "Father of Mineralogy." His chief work is "De Re Metallica."

Albertus Magnus, Saint (1206-1280) — A Dominican friar, philosopher and scientist. Compiled an encyclopedia. His study of the natural sciences was in advance of his time.

Algue, Jose (born 1856) — Spanish Jesuit. Invented the barocyclonometer used to detect the approach of cyclones.

Ampere, Andre Marie (1775-1836) — Has the practical unit of electrical current named after him; is the founder of the science of electrodynamics.

Bacon, Roger (1214-1294) — Franciscan. Is called the Father of Experimental Science. "Opus Majus," "Opus Minus" and "Tertium" are the most important of his more than 80 works. He writes of optical and astronomical laws now generally accepted, discusses the possibility of invention of the steamship, balloon, airplane, microscope and telescope, explains the composition and effects of gunpowder, and predicts railways and the use of electricity.

Bartholomeus Anglicus (13th century) — English Franciscan, who wrote the first great medieval encyclopedia of science.

Bayma, Joseph (1816-1892) — Italian Jesuit, mathematician and scientist. Wrote "Molecular Mechanics," dealing with the constitution of matter.

Beccaria, Giovanni Battista (1716-1781)—Famous for his original researches in electricity.

Becquerel, Antoine Cesar (1788-1878)—French physicist, who invented the constant cell, a differential galvanometer, and an electric thermometer.

Becquerel, Antoine Henri (1852-1908)—Son of Antoine Cesar. The founder of radioactivity; discoverer of "Becquerel's Rays."

Behaim, Martin (1459-1507)—Made the geographical globe, the oldest in existence, in 1492.

Bernard, Claude (1813-1878)—Physiologist, who discovered the glycogenic function of the liver, and the vasomotor system.

Binet, Jacques Philippe Marie (1786-1856)—French mathematician and astronomer. Enumerated the principle known as Binet's Theorem.

Blondo, Flavio (1388-1463)—Called the founder of the science of archeology and Christian topography. Author of three encyclopedias on which all subsequent dictionaries of Roman antiquities are based.

Blot, Jean Baptiste (1774-1862)—Discovered the laws of rotary polarization by crystalline bodies.

Bolzani, Bernard (1781-1848)—Bohemian mathematician and philosopher. Proved the binomial theorem.

Borrichius, Christopher (1583-1632)—Drew up first chart of the Atlantic and Indian oceans showing the spot where the magnetic needle makes the same angle with the meridian.

Boscovich, Ruggiero Guiseppi (1711-1787)—Jesuit astronomer, engineer and inventor of micrometer which requires no artificial illumination of the field of the telescope.

Bosio, Antonio (1575-1629)—Known as the "Columbus of the Catacombs" and called the Father of Christian Archeology.

Bourgeois, Louis (1819-1878)—Rector of the Seminary of Pontlevoy, Loinet-Cher, was the first to present and develop the problem of the eoliths in 1863.

Braille, Louis (1809-1852)—Blind educator of the blind, invented the Braille system (used today in revised form).

Branly, Edouard (born 1846)—Physicist, discoverer of the coherer, which made wireless telegraphy possible.

Caldani, Leopold Marco Antonio (1725-1813)—Anatomist and physiologist. Wrote an anatomical atlas. Also noted for anatomical studies on the function of the spinal cord and for the introduction of electricity in the physiology of the nerves.

Cambou, Paul (1849-1909)—French geologist and Jesuit missionary to Madagascar. Discovered the silk thread spun by large native spiders, devised a contrivance on which to roll these webs so that spinning and weaving could be done at Tananarivo.

Camel, George Joseph (1661-1706)—Botanist and Jesuit missionary to the Philippines. Wrote of his valuable investigations of plants and natural history of the islands. Evergreen shrub Camellia named for him.

Cardan, Girolamo (1501-1576)—Physician and mathematician. His treatise on algebra contains the solution of the cubic equation, since named after him.

Carnoy, Jean Baptiste (1839-1899)—Priest, founder of the science of cytology. Performed noted experiments on cellular segmentation.

Cassini, Giovanni Dominico (1625-1712)—Determined the rotation periods of Venus, Jupiter and Mars, discovered four satellites and suggested oval paths, later named Cassianians, in place of the ellipses of Kepler. First director of Paris Observatory.

Cauchy, Augustin Louis (1789-1857)—An important contributor to mathematics. The Calculus of Residues was his invention.

Caxton, William (1422-1491)—First English printer, translated and wrote original prologues and epilogues for some of the many books he printed at Westminster.

Cavallere, Bonaventura (1598-1647)—Hieronymite and mathematician. Renowned for "Methods of Indivisibles," the forerunner of integral calculus, and his efforts in popularizing use of logarithms in Italy.

Cesalpino, Andrea (1519-1603)—Physician, philosopher and botanist. His "De Plantis Libre XVI" contains the foundation of plant morphology and physiology.

Champollion, Jean Francois (1790-1832)—Egyptologist. Discovered through the Rosetta Stone a system for deciphering hieroglyphics.

Chauliac, Guy de (d. about 1370)—Distinguished anatomist and father of modern surgery. Gave a complete and authoritative description of the terrible bubonic plague or "Black Death" of the fourteenth century.

Chevreul, Michel Eugene (1786-1889)—Chemist, physicist and philosopher. His studies of animal fats led to the manufacture of candles and glycerine and his researches in color harmony resulted in great increase in variety of dyes.

Clavius, Christopher (1538-1612)—Jesuit mathematician and astronomer. Wrote innumerable scientific works. Reformed the Gregorian calendar.

Colombo, Matteo Realdo (1516-1559)—Pioneer medieval anatomist. Discovered pulmonary circulation.

Copernicus, Nicolaus (1473-1543)—Dominican cleric and astronomer. He wrote on the heliocentric planetary theory as opposed to the Ptolemaic, and it was named after him.

Coulomb, Charles Augustine (1736-1806)—Invented the "torsion balance," an instrument to detect and measure electricity. The Coulomb, the practical unit of quantity of electricity, is named in his honor.

De Rossi, Giovanni Battista (1822-1894)—Archeologist, who aroused a world-wide interest in Christian antiquities. Master of epigraphy and typography.

Descartes, Rene (1596-1650)—Founder of analytical geometry.

Divisch, Procopius (1698-1765)—A Premonstratensian, who erected a lightning rod at Premnitz in 1754, before Franklin's work was known; he was also among the first to use electricity in the treatment of disease.

Dulong, Pierre Louis (1785-1838)—Author with Petit of the formula for determining the specific heat of solids.

Dumas, Jean Baptiste (1800-1884)—One of the foremost chemists of the nineteenth century. He introduced a method of ascertaining vapor densities.

Dwight, Thomas (1843-1911)—Won for himself an international reputation as an anatomist; wrote "Thoughts of a Catholic Anatomist."

Eckhel, Joseph Hilarius (1737-1798)—A Jesuit, founder of the scientific numismatics of classical antiquity.

Epee, Charles Michel de L' (1712-1789)—Priest inventor of the sign alphabet, which is the basis of all systematic instruction of the deaf and dumb.

Eustachius, Bartolomeo (1500-1574)—Famous for contributions to the science of anatomy. The Eustachian Tube, connecting the ear and pharynx, is named after him.

Fabre, Jean Henri (1823-1915)—Famous entomologist. His "Souvenirs Entomologiques" merited for him the title of "The Homer of the Insect World."

Fabri, Honore (1607-1688)—Jesuit who discovered the circulation of the blood independently of Harvey.

Fabricius, Hieronymus (1537-1619)—Discovered the valvular system of the veins; was the teacher of Harvey.

Fallopio, Gabriello (1523-1562)—Anatomist. The tube leading from the ovary to the uterus, and the canal through which the facial nerve passes from the auditory, are both called by his name.

Faye, Herve Auguste Etienne Albans (1814-1902)—Astronomer, discovered the comet named for him. Invented the zenithal collimator and applied photography and electricity to astronomy.

Ferrari, Ludovico (born 1522)—Discovered the method of resolving equations of the fourth degree.

Fizeau, Armand Hippolyte Louis (1819-1896) — First determined experimentally the velocity of light.

Foucault, Jean Bernard Leon (1819-1868) — Made electric light practicable. Gave the first practical electric arc light to the world in 1844. Invented the gyroscope.

Fraunhofer, Joseph von (1787-1826)—Initiated spectrum analysis, discovered the Fraunhofer lines in the solar spectrum and established the laws of diffraction.

Fresnel, Augustin Jean (1788-1827)—Made great contributions to the science of optics. Developed a theory bearing his name and by his system of lenses revolutionized lighthouse illumination.

Galilei, Galileo (1564-1642)—Great natural philosopher and astronomer. Discovered the isochronism of the pendulum and, from his construction of a telescope which magnified 32 times, the physical features of the moon and the satellites of Jupiter. Discovered the laws of projectiles, the principles of virtual velocities and gave an exposition of the true principles of flotation. For his bold support of the Copernican theory he was condemned by the Inquisition; but he received the special blessing of Urban VIII before his death.

Galvani, Luigi (1737-1798)—Manifestations of current electricity have been named "Galvanism" in his honor. He was buried in the habit of the Third Order of St. Francis.

Gassendi, Pierre (1592-1655) — A priest who was called "the Bacon of France." He first observed the transit of Mercury across the sun's disc.

Gay-Lussac, Joseph Louis (1778-1850) — French chemist and physicist. Conducted important research work in gaseous combinations and fermentation; improved methods of organic analysis.

Gordon, Andrew (1712-1751) — Benedictine monk, who first used a cylinder of glass to produce frictional electricity; invented electrical chimes.

Grimaldi, Francesco Maria (1613-1663)—Jesuit, who discovered the diffraction, interference and dispersion of light passing through a prism.

Gutenberg, Johann (1400-1467) — Inventor of printing.

Hauy, René Just (1743-1822) — A priest and mineralogist. Called the "Father of Crystallography."

Heis, Eduard (1806-1877) — First ascertained the point of departure of meteors, drew a chart of 5,421 stars, with first authentic map of the milky way.

Helmont, Jan Baptista van (1577-1644) — Introduced chemical methods in biological studies, explained digestion and introduced the word "gas" as it is now used.

Hengler, Lawrence (1806-1858)—A priest, inventor of the horizontal pendulum used in seismographs.

Heude, Pierre (1836-1902)—Jesuit zoologist whose writings on the land mollusks of China are the standard authority.

Hilgard, Eugene Waldemar (1833-1916) — Geologist, chemist. Responsible for putting agriculture on a scientific basis and for making it a subject of university curricula. Became Assistant State Geologist of Mississippi in 1856.

Holland, John Philip (1844-1914) — American inventor of the first submarine, successful from a practical viewpoint.

Jussieu, Bernard de (1699-1777)—Introduced a natural system of the classification of plants.

Kelly, William (1811-1888) — American inventor. Was first to convert cast iron into malleable steel, though he did not get the credit, it being known as Bessemer's process.

Kircher, Athanasius (1601-1680) — Jesuit. He studied volcanoes; deciphered hieroglyphics; perfected the speaking tube and the aeolian harp; invented the magic lantern; first definitely stated the germ theory of disease.

Laennec, René Theophile Hyacinthe (1781-1826) — Physician, discoverer of auscultation, father of modern knowledge of pulmonary diseases, inventor of the stethoscope.

Lamarck, Jean Baptiste de Monet, Chevalier de (1744-1829)—Botanist, zoologist and natural philosopher. Author of several works and originator of the evolutionary theory called Lamarckism.

Laplace, Pierre Simon (1749-1827)—Well-known mathematical and physical astronomer and member of the principal Academies of Europe.

Latreille, Pierre Andre (1762-1833)—French zoologist, pioneer in the field of entomology.

Lavoisier, Antoine Laurent (1743-1794)—French scientist, called the "Father of Modern Chemistry."

Le Verrier, Urbain Jean Joseph (1811-1877)—Astronomer. Made the mathematical discovery of the planet Neptune. Founded the International Meteorological Institute and organized the French weather bureau service.

Linacre, Thomas (1460-1524)—Physician, priest. Founder of the Royal College of Physicians, London.

Malpighi, Marcello (1628-1694)—Founder of comparative physiology and microscopic anatomy, noted for works regarding the skin, spleen and liver.

Malus, Etienne Louis (1775-1812)—Discovered polarization of light; invented the polariscope.

Marconi, Marchese Guglielmo (1874-1937)—Italian inventor and engineer. To his genius is due the scientific triumph of wireless telegraphy or radio.

Mariotte, Edme (1620-1684)—French churchman who established the law of gases which bears his name.

Mendel, Gregor Johann (1822-1884)—Augustinian priest and biologist, author of Mendel's Law of Heredity, one of the greatest discoveries in biology.

Mersenne, Marin (1588-1648)—Author of numerous works on mathematical sciences, encouraged scientists of his time, friend of Galileo and Descartes.

Monge, Gaspard (1746-1818)—Founder of descriptive geometry, conducted search for Egyptian antiquities on Napoleon's campaign in Egypt, the specimens becoming the nucleus of the Egyptian department of the British Museum.

Morgagni, Giovanni Battista (1682-1771)—Founder of modern pathology. Important studies in aneurisms and pulmonary disease.

Muller, Johann (1436-1476)—Astronomer. Settled the reform of the calendar.

Muller, Johann (1801-1858)—Founder of modern physiology.

Murphy, John B. (1857-1916)—Noted American surgeon, celebrated for the "Murphy Button," called the "greatest clinical teacher of the day"; awarded the Laetare Medal in 1902; sought by President Roosevelt when he was shot by a maniac.

Murray, Thomas Edward (1860-1929)—Inventor. Knight of St. Gregory and Knight of Malta. Designed electric plants and obtained patents for 1,100 inventions, among them safety appliances and an electric welding process for the manufacture of 94-inch mortar shells. Effected the combinations of electrical companies in Brooklyn and New York.

Nelaton, Auguste (1807-1873)—French surgeon who suggested the ligature of both ends of the arteries in hemorrhages; invented the Nelaton probe with the porcelain knob.

Nieuwland, Julius Arthur, C.S.C. (1876-1936)—Chemist and botanist. A contributor to the invention of Lewisite Gas, a deadly poison. Discovered a method for production, at low cost, of synthetic rubber.

Nobili, Leopold (1784-1835)—Italian inventor of the thermophile.

Nollet, Jean-Antoine (1700-1770)—Physicist, made valuable experiments in electricity and was first observer of electric sparks drawn from the human body.

Ortelius, Abraham (1527-1598)—Geographer, cartographer and archaeologist. In 1570 he published the first great modern atlas, and in 1587 a still useful dictionary of old geography.

Ozanam, Jacques (1640-1717) — Author of numerous mathematical works. His "Recreations" is still popular.

Pascal, Blaise (1623-1662)—Demonstrated that a column of air has weight.

Pasteur, Louis (1822-1895) — Father of bacteriology, and founder of the Pasteur Institute. Famed for his vaccine against hydrophobia, for successfully combating the silk-worm disease and Pasteurization.

Pelouze, Theophile Jules (1807-1867) — Chemist. Was the first to synthesize a fatty substance from glycerine, to isolate tannic acid and to make gun-cotton in France.

Piazzi, Giuseppe (1746-1826) — Theatine monk and astronomer, discoverer of the first planetoid, Ceres.

Picard, Jean (1620-1682)—French priest who first accurately measured a degree of the meridian.

Pitra, Jean Baptiste Francois (1812-1889)—Cardinal, author, theologian and archeologist; discovered the "Inscription of Autun."

Provancher, Leon Abel (1820-1892) — Called the "Father of Natural History in Canada."

Regnault, Henri Victor (1810-1878) — Chemist and physicist, authority in thermometry.

Riccioli, Giovanni Battista (1598-1671) — Italian Jesuit who introduced the lunar nomenclature in use today.

Roentgen, Wilhelm Konrad (1845-1923) — German physicist, discoverer of the X-ray. He designated it by the sign of the unknown quantity "X," because the mechanism of the ray was unknown to him.

Sahagun, Bernardino de (1500-1590)—Franciscan missionary and Aztec archeologist. Compiled an Aztec history, grammar and dictionary.

Santorini, Giovanni Domenico (1681-1737)—Anatomist, discovered emissary veins leading out of sinuses, risory muscles, fissures in external ear.

Scheiner, Christopher (1575-1650) — Jesuit astronomer. Invented the pantograph, or copying instrument, and constructed a telescope which permitted him to make the first systematic investigation of sun spots.

Schwann, Theodor (1810-1882) — Physiologist, founder of the theory of the cellular structure of animal organisms, discoverer of pepsin as digestive agent and the organic nature of the yeast plant.

Schwarz, Berthold—German friar of the thirteenth century. Inventor of firearms.

Secchi, Angelo (1818-1878) — Jesuit Italian astronomer and professor at Georgetown University. Laid the foundations of the unique "Sun Records"; discovered the "flash spectrum" and the five Secchi types of stars and invented new instruments for studying the fixed stars. He invented the meteorograph and also acquired fame as a physicist.

Semelweis, Ignaz Philipp (1818-1865) — Hungarian physician. The pioneer of antiseptic treatment. Discoverer of causes of puerperal fever.

Spallanzani, Lazzaro (1729-1794) — Priest, gave the first correct explanation of the nature of spermatazoa and of the physiologic process of digestion. Proved the falsity of the doctrine of spontaneous generation and proved the regeneration of matter.

Steensen, Niels (1638-1686) — Danish bishop, anatomist and "father of geology." First to conceive the possibility of reading the history of the earth from its geological strata. Discoverer of the excretory duct of the parotid glands.

Takamine, Jokichi (1853-1922) — Japanese-American convert to Catholicism. Discovered adrenalin.

Tieffentaller, Joseph (1710-1785) — Jesuit missionary and noted geographer. Wrote "Descriptio Indiae."

Torricelli, Evangelista (1608-1647) — Italian mathematician and physicist, invented the barometer.

Toscanelli, Paolo dal Pozzo (1397-1482) — Mathematician, astronomer and geographer. To his cosmographical knowledge Columbus largely owed the discovery of America.

Tulasne, Louis Rene (1815-1885) — Mycologist, widely known for his microscopic study of fungi.

Valentine, Basil (born 1394) — Benedictine monk, founder of analytical chemistry, called the last alchemist and the first chemist.

Vesalius, Andreas (1514-1564) — Founder of modern anatomical science.

Vico, Francesco de (1805-1848) — Jesuit priest who discovered six comets.

Vieta, Francois, Seigneur de La Bigottiere (1540-1603) — Father of modern algebra, which he applied to geometry and trigonometry.

THEOLOGIANS AND PHILOSOPHERS

Abelard, Peter (1079-1142) — French philosopher and theologian, though more brilliant than solid. Important contributor to Scholastic method.

Albertus Magnus, Saint (1206-1280) — "Universal Doctor," Dominican theologian and eminent representative of Scholasticism. Teacher of Thomas Aquinas.

Alcuin Albinus (735-804) — Promoted education and contributed to the establishment of the Roman Rite in the Carolingian Empire. Revised the Vulgate text and compiled a Missal.

Alexander of Hales (died 1245) — First Franciscan teacher at Paris; part author of a "Summa Theologica" which had much influence in the thirteenth century. Gave doctrinal direction to the Franciscan School in general and to St. Bonaventure in particular.

Alphonsus Ligouri, Saint (1696-1787) — Confessor, Doctor of the Church and master of moral theology.

Ambrose, Saint (340-397) — Bishop of Milan, one of the four great Latin Doctors of the Church. One of the first writers to attempt a synthesis of Christian morality in his "De Officiis Ministrorum."

Vinci, Leonardo da (1452-1519) — Made intelligent investigation of the principle of flying and innovations in bridges and war machines, and constructed canals.

Volta, Alessandro (1745-1827) — Italian physicist. The volt, unit of electromotive force, is named after him; he also invented the first galvanic battery.

Waldseemüller, Martin (1475-1522) — Made first modern atlas of the world, and used the name America.

Winckelmann, Johann Joachim (1717-1768) — German art historian and the founder of scientific archeology.

Windle, Sir Bertram (1858-1929) — Scientist, apologist, did original work in anatomy, archeology and teratology and also wrote on ethnology, anthropology and spiritism.

Anselm, Saint (1033-1109) — Confessor, Doctor of the Church. Born in Italy, died in England. Deeply influenced Catholic philosophy and theology.

Athanasius, Saint (c. 295-373) — Confessor of the Church and one of the four great Greek Doctors. Champion of orthodoxy in the Church's contest against Arianism.

Augustine of Canterbury, Saint (died 604) — Confessor. Born Rome, died Canterbury, England. Apostle of the English and first Archbishop of Canterbury.

Augustine of Hippo, Saint (354-430) — Confessor and one of the four great Latin Doctors of the Church. Bishop of Hippo. Author of "Confessions" and "City of God."

Bacon, Roger (1214-1294) — Franciscan theologian and philosopher as well as scientist. Ardent promoter of practical theology and severe critic of scholastic abuses.

Balmes, Jaime Luciano (1810-1848) — Wrote "Protestantism Compared with Catholicism in Their Relations with European Civilizations," a philosophy of Christianity in reply to Guizot's "History of Civilization in Europe."

Banez, Domingo (1528-1604) — Exponent and defender of Thomistic teaching. Entered into controversy with Molina on free will and grace.

Basil, Saint (330-379) — Confessor of the Church and one of the four great Greek Doctors, Defended the Faith against Apollinaris.

Billuart, Charles Rene (1685-1757) — Belgian Dominican theologian and controversialist.

Bonaventure, Saint (1221-1274) — "Seraphic Doctor," Franciscan theologian and eminent representative of Scholasticism. His writings combine ardent piety and most profound learning, to move the reader as well as to teach.

Busenbaum, Hermann (1600-1668) — Jesuit whose moral theology, "Medulla," is a classic.

Cajetan, Tommaso De Vio Gae-tano (1469-1534) — Dominican cardinal, philosopher, theologian and exegete. One of the greatest defenders of the Thomistic School.

Cano, Melchior (1509-1560) — Dominican bishop and theologian. Considered the Father of Fundamental Theology due to his celebrated work in twelve books, "De Locis Theologicis."

Descartes, Rene (1596-1650) — Called the Father of Intellectualism. Though a staunch Catholic, his philosophy featuring universal methodic doubt, through errors of judgment, led to views which make faith and morality unreasonable.

Eck, Johann (1486-1543) — Became Luther's most able opponent, possessing a clear understanding of Lutheranism and its errors.

Erasmus, Desiderius (1466-1536) — Priest and great German humanist leader.

Francis of Vittoria (1480-1546) — Dominican theological writer and teacher at Salamanca. His treatise on international relations merited him title of Father of International Law.

Frassen, Claudius (1620-1711) — Franciscan. Author of "Scotus Academicus" in 20 volumes, important presentation of the theology of Duns Scotus.

Gregory of Nazianzus, Saint (325-389) — One of the four great Greek Doctors of the Church, orator and literary genius.

Gregory of Valencia (1550-1603) — Jesuit, theologian and controversialist, called "Doctor Doctorum," played an important part in forming the Church's attitude in the dispute concerning interests.

Gregory the Great, Saint (540-604) — Pope, and one of the four great Latin Doctors of the Church. Father of the medieval papacy; introduced Gregorian chant; summed up in his writings the teachings of the earlier Fathers and presented them as a related whole.

Hugh of St. Victor (1096-1141) — Writer on philosophy, theology and mysticism, a founder of Scholasticism. Became head of the famous School of St. Victor, Paris.

Jerome, Saint (340-420) — Confessor, one of the four great Latin Doctors of the Church. Author of the Vulgate edition of the Bible.

John Chrysostom, Saint (347-407) — Confessor of the Church and one of the four great Greek Doctors. Famous and eloquent orator, whence his name "the Golden-mouthed."

John Damascene, Saint (c. 676-749) — Last great theologian of the East. His work, "The Source of Knowledge," can be compared with the medieval theological classics of the West.

John of the Cross, Saint (1542-1591) — Doctor of mystic theology. Mystic writings: "The Ascent of Mt. Carmel," "The Dark Night of the Soul," "Spiritual Canticle" and "The Living Flame of Love."

Lainez, James (1512-1565) — Second General of the Society of Jesus. As papal theologian to the Council of Trent, he defended the papal origin of episcopal jurisdiction.

Leo I, the Great, Saint (died 461) — Pope and Doctor of the Church. In his letters he exposed all the dogmatic errors of his day and gave exact expression to the dogma of the Incarnation.

Lombard, Peter (died 1160) — Called the "Magister Sententiarum" or simply the "Magister," because of his "Four Books of Sentences." This work synthesized almost the whole of Catholic theological doctrine, and was used and commented upon by all the great medieval theologians.

Lugo, John de (1583-1660)—Spanish Jesuit and cardinal. Equally famous for his moral and dogmatic theology. Exhibited critical acumen and sound judgment.

Mercier, Desire Joseph (1851-1926) — Cardinal, Archbishop of Malines. Appointed professor at Louvain by Leo XIII, he revived Scholastic philosophy, and wrote many philosophical works.

Mohler, Johann Adam (1796-1838) Introduced among Catholics the science of "Symbolism" or "Comparative Symbolism," i. e., the comparison of dogmas or beliefs held by different denominations.

Molina, Luis de (1535-1600) — Jesuit theologian and author of "Concordia," expounding a system for the reconciliation of grace and free will, called Molinism.

Nicholas of Lyra (1270-1340) — Franciscan exegete. Author of "Postillae," placing emphasis on literal sense of Bible, the first scriptural commentary printed.

Origen (185-254) — Probably the most prolific Christian writer on things theological. His "De Principiis" systematized the whole of Christian doctrine and is considered the first "Summa Theologica."

Petau (Petavius), Denis (1583-1652)—Jesuit theologian, called the Father of the History of Dogma. Did important work in patrology and the history of dogma.

Peter Canisius, Saint (1521-1597) — Jesuit preacher and theologian. Most prominent figure of the "counter-Reformation" in Germany. His triple "Catechism" is a masterpiece.

Quinones, Francis (1482-1540) — Cardinal. Franciscan liturgist, best known for reform of the Breviary.

Allard, Paul (1841-1916)—French historian of the persecutions.

Ambrose, Saint (340-397)—Bishop of Milan, Father and Doctor of the Church. One of the Founders of Christian hymnology. The Ambro-Reiffenstuhl, Anacleto (1641-1703) — Franciscan canonist, whose works are standard even to the present day.

Robert Bellarmine, Saint (1542-1621) — Theologian, cardinal and Doctor of the Church. Dealt a severe blow to Protestantism with his work, "Disputationes de controversiis fidei." An authority on the subject of Church and State. Helped revise the Vulgate text.

Ruysbroeck, John, Blessed (1293-1381)—Confessor, greatest Flemish mystic. Was called the "Admirable Doctor" and the "Divine Doctor."

Scotus, John Duns (1266-1308) — Franciscan. Leader of Scotist School of Philosophy. Born in Scotland; buried in Cologne. Called "Doctor subtilis" and "Doctor Marianus." Championed the Immaculate Conception of Mary and gave first correct exposition of this dogma. Built his theology around the Christocentric idea, sealed with her approval by the Church when she instituted the feast of Christ the King. Poussin; Nicolas (1594-1666) — Subjects from mythology and the Old Testament and his landscapes are notable. Among his paintings are "The Finding of Moses" and "The Rape of the Sabinas."

Puvis de Chavannes, Pierre (1824-1898) — His frescoes, distinctly flat and light in color, are now appreciated for their striking originality. Notable are his frescoes of St. Genevieve in the Pantheon and the staircase frescoes in the Boston Public Library.

Raphael Santi (1483-1520) — Greatest painter of the Renaissance. He decorated the Stanze or rooms of the Vatican with beautiful frescoes. Among favorite Madonnas are the "Madonna of the Chair," now in the Pitti Gallery, and the supremely beautiful "Sistine Madonna," now in the Dresden Gallery.

Reni, Guido (1575-1642) — Decorated Farnese Palace, Quirinal Palace and ceiling in Palazzo Rospi-giosi.

Ribera, Josef or Jusippe de (1586-1656) — Called "the little Spaniard." The "Immaculate Conception," done for the Ursulines of Salamanca is a painting of great beauty, but he preferred to depict scenes of suffering or horror, as "The Flaying of St. Bartholomew."

Rubens, Peter Paul (1577-1640) — Flemish artist. In France he was commissioned to decorate the Luxembourg Palace, in Spain to paint a portrait of Philip IV, and in London, where he was knighted, to paint "Peace and War." Was made court painter in Antwerp. His masterpiece, "The Descent from the Cross," is in the Antwerp cathedral.

Sarto, Andrea del (1486-1531) — Great colorist and draughtsman, is called the "Faultless Painter," but is criticized for the monotony of his types. "Madonna of the Harpies," in the Uffizi Gallery, "Madonna of the Sack," in the cloister of S. Annunziata in Florence, and "St. John the Baptist," in the Pitti Gallery, are some of his works.

Tintoretto, Jacopo Robusti (1518-1594) — He was nicknamed "Il furioso" because of the rapidity and impetuosity with which he produced paintings. His masterpiece is "The Miracle of St. Mark," of the Academy of Venice. The "Paradiso" of the Doge's Palace is the largest painting in the world.

Titian or Tiziano Vecelli (1477-1576) — Greatest of the Venetian painters, he shows mastery of technique, marvelous color and vigorous treatment in his prolific works. "Sacred and Profane Love," the "Assumption," the "Presentation," "Bacchus and Ariadne," "The Rape of Europa," are some of his masterpieces, as well as many portraits, notably the "Man with the Glove," in the Louvre.

Vasari, Giorgio (1511-1574) —

Painter, architect and writer famed for his "Lives of Eminent Painters, Sculptors and Architects." Decorated Sala Regia at Rome.

Velasquez, Diego Rodriguez de Silva y (1599-1660) — Famous Spanish painter, master of naturalism, excelling in portraiture. Friend of Philip IV, he left many portraits of the royal family. "The Forge of Vulcan" and "Innocent X" are in Rome. "Christ on the Cross" and "The Lances" are in the Prado.

Verrocchio, Andrea Del (1435-1488) — Master of Leonardo da Vinci and Lorenzo di Credi. Painted "The Baptism of Christ."

Veronese, Paolo (1528-1588) — Glorifies Venice in his paintings. Famous for great banqueting scenes, as "The Marriage at Cana" in the Louvre, which display his love of color, pageantry and spacious architectural background.

Vinci, Leonardo di Ser Piero da (1452-1519) — Painter, sculptor, architect, engineer and scholar. Combined exact scientific knowledge with fine idealism. Painted the "Virgin of the Rocks," "St. Anne and the Virgin" and the "Mona Lisa."

Zurbaran, Francisco (1598-1662) — Some of his works are his masterpiece, in Seville, the "Apotheosis of St. Thomas Aquinas," scenes depicting the lives of St. Bonaventure, St. Jerome and St. Bruno, and "A Kneeling Monk," in the National Gallery.

MUSICIANS

Beethoven, Ludwig van (1770-1827) — Famous German composer, first of the Romantics. Generally considered the greatest of symphonic composers, with nine immortal works in that form. Wrote Mass in D, concertos of symphonic proportions and other music of various forms. Composed even after deafness in 1802.

Bruckner, Anton (1824-1896) — Excellent composer in Romantic style, court organist in Vienna and professor at the conservatory. Composed nine symphonies, two Masses, a requiem and a "Te Deum."

Byrd, William (1543-1623) — Composer and organist excelling in liturgical compositions. Also founded the English Madrigal School.

Cherubini, Maria Luigi C. Z. S. (1760-1842) — Composer of operatic and ecclesiastical music. His Masses in F and A and two requiems are master works.

Couperin, Francois (1668-1733) — Greatest of family of French musicians. Court cymbalist, teacher of princes and organist of St. Gervais. His works for the harpsichord introduced a new style of piano music, distinctive from the organ style of his predecessors. Influenced Handel and Bach.

Donizetti, Gaetano (1797-1848) — Famous composer of Italian opera.

Acclaimed in Paris and Vienna. "Lucia di Lammermoor," "La Fille du Regiment" and "Don Pasquale" are his best-known works.

Franck, Cesar Auguste (1822-1890) — Belgium's greatest composer, a pioneer in the modern French school. In his lifetime musicians formed a cult of his admirers. Among his works are the oratorio "Ruth," a symphony in D, two operas, a Mass and excellent chamber music.

Gluck, Christoph Willibald (1714-1787) — German composer and operatic reformer. Conductor of the opera at Vienna. Gave fixed composition to the orchestra. Composed "Orfeo ed Euridice" and other operas, which are forerunners to the musical drama.

Gounod, Charles Francois (1818-1893) — Wrote the operas "Faust" and "Romeo et Juliette," several Masses, and the oratorio "Redemption."

Guido d'Arezzo (995-1050) — Reformer of musical notation. "Guidonian" system favored employment and improvement of the four-line stave.

Haydn, Franz Joseph (1732-1809) — One of the most prolific and widely significant composers in the history of music. Founder of the Viennese School of composition, and called the "inventor of the symphony." His masterpiece is the oratorio "Creation." He always inscribed his compositions "Laus Deo."

Lassus, Orlandus de (1532-1594) — Last and greatest of the Netherland School of composers. His works number 2,400.

Liszt, Franz (1811-1886) — Extraordinary pianist and clever composer, chiefly noted for his technical feats. His best known works are "Hungarian Rhapsodies" and "Symphonic Poems."

Martini, Giambattista (1706-1804) — Achieved fame as a composer of church music. He was a theorist and a teacher in the field of music. He also wrote a history of ancient music and many treatises on the subject of music.

Mozart, J. C. Wolfgang Amadeus (1756-1791) — Child genius, concert master in Salzburg, removed to Vienna. Composed numerous works classic for all time. "Don Juan" and "The Magic Flute" are among his operas. His symphonies and concertos are superior to his church music, which includes his great Requiem.

Paderewski, Ignace (1859-1941) — First Premier of Poland after the World War, in 1918. Eminent pianist and composer, he toured Europe and America, where he died. Founded the Paderewski Fund to aid American composers.

Paganini, Niccolo (1782-1840) — Prominent violin virtuoso. At an early age he composed violin sonatas and achieved brilliant success in public auditions. He composed "Symphonie Fantastique" and numerous violin sonatas.

Palestrina, Giovanni Pierluigi da (1526-1594) — Eminent composer of church music in the polyphonic style.

Rameau, Jean-Philippe (1683-1764) — Organist, wrote several theoretical works, highly developed symphonic part of opera, composed about thirty operas and many pieces for piano. He is considered the typical representative of French dramatic opera.

Rossini, Gioacchino Antonio (1792-1868) — Composer and great innovator in orchestration. The epoch of modern opera began with him. "Guillaume Tell" is his masterpiece. Some other works are a "Stabat Mater," "Messe Solennelle," "Barbiere di Siviglia" and "Otello."

Scarlatti, Alessandro (1659-1725) — Composer and creator of the 18th century classical style in music. He taught many celebrated musicians.

Schubert, Franz Peter (1797-1828) — Viennese composer of Romantic School. Wrote excellent works in a wide range of forms. Of his 500 songs perhaps the "Erl King" and "Ave Maria" are best known. His "Unfinished Symphony" is the most popular of his nine symphonies.

Stradivari, Antonio (1644-1737) — Famous violin maker.

Tallis, Thomas (1514-1585)—English composer whose contrapuntal work has been compared to Palestrina's. He shared with Byrd the monopoly of music printing for 21 years.

Taverner, John (1475-1536)—Composer during the Reformation in England. Released from prison because of the excellence of his music.

Thomas, Charles Louis Ambrose (1811-1896) — Born in Alsace Lorraine. Composer of the operas "Mignon" and "Hamlet," "Messe Solennelle" and a "Marche Religieuse." Particularly skilful in orchestral effects.

Verdi, Giuseppe (1813-1901) — Greatest master of Italian opera. "Ernani," "Rigoletto," "Aida" and "Otello" are some of his operas, each representative of one of the four phases of his musical development. Also wrote "Messa Requiem" and "Pater Noster."

Weber, Karl Maria von (1786-1826)—Founder of romantic school of music in Germany, influenced Wagner. Composed "Der Freischutz," "Oberon" and other operas, and several instrumental works, chiefly for piano. Royal director of music in Dresden.

THE MENDEL MEDAL

The Mendel Medal was founded by Villanova College in 1928 in honor of Gregor Mendel, Abbot of the Augustinian Monastery, Bruna, Austria, whose scientific researches have given to the world the now celebrated Mendelian Laws of Heredity.

The Mendel Medal is awarded to outstanding scientists who, by their work to advance the cause of science and by the Catholicity of their lives, have given practical demonstration of the fact that between true religion and true science there is no real conflict. It is conferred not oftener than once yearly, but it need not be conferred annually.

It has been awarded to the following men:

- |   |   |
| 1929—Dr. John A. Kolmer, professor of medicine of Temple University Medical School, and director of the Research Institute of Cutaneous Medicine, Philadelphia. 1930—Dr. Albert F. Zahm, pioneer in aeronautics, director of Aeronautical Research in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C. 1931—Dr. Karl F. Herzfeld, professor of physics at Catholic University of America. 1932—Dr. Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation of America, New York. 1933—Dr. Hugh Stott Taylor, F. R. S. L., chairman of the chemistry department, Princeton University. 1934—Abbe Georges Lemaitre, Ph. D., D. Sc., professor of astro-physics at the Catholic University of Louvain. | 1935—Dr. Francis Owen Rice, associate professor of chemistry at Johns Hopkins University. 1936—Rev. ### THE CATHOLIC ACTION MEDAL

When Pope Pius XI announced his program of Catholic Action, the faculty of St. Bonaventure's College and Seminary organized the same movement among the students on the campus as well as among the alumni far and near. Since Benedict XV declared St. Francis of Assisi the patron of Catholic Action, it was felt that the institution, which is under Franciscan auspices, should do something in a public way to stimulate this movement. As a result, the faculty proposed that a Catholic Action medal be conferred annually upon the lay person outstanding in Catholic Action.

A document stating the purpose of this award and describing the design of the medal was presented to Pope Pius XI who heartily approved the plan at a private audience, Oct. 30, 1931.

He was deeply interested in the symbolism of the medal. The bar bears the coat-of-arms of the Franciscan Order and, entwined in branches of pine, the name "St. Bonaventure College." The pine is symbolic of the Cattaraugus Hills. The central inscription of the medal contains the words of Paul to Timothy, "Bonus Miles Christi Jesus" — "A good soldier of Jesus Christ" — with the emblem of the Holy Name. The inscription is set in a wreath of oak which symbolizes manly strength, courage and conviction. At the top there is the royal crown of Christ the King between the two Greek letters, Alpha and Omega, indicating Christ's universal kingdom. This corresponds to the symbol at the bottom, namely the Keys of Peter. The bands on either side bear the words of St. James, "Estote Autem Factores Verbi": "But be ye doers of the word."

The Holy Father made it very definite that the candidate must be selected upon the approval of his ecclesiastical superiors.

The medal has been awarded to the following men:

1934—Hon. Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State.

1935—Dr. Michael Williams, editor of "The Commonweal", author of outstanding works on the Catholic Church.

1936—Hon. Joseph Scott, philanthropist, lawyer and lecturer; alumnus and former professor of St. Bonaventure's College.

1937—Mr. Patrick Scanlan, managing editor of the Brooklyn "Tablet", serving the Church with a fearless and vigorous pen.

1938—Mr. George J. Gillespie, national head of the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

1939—Mr. William F. Montavon, director of the Legal Department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

1940—Mr. John J. Craig, national director of the Catholic Evidence Conference and national secretary of the Laymen's Retreat Movement.

1941—Mr. John S. Burke, New York City merchant, leader in charitable and educational activities of Church.

1942—Dr. George Sperti, scientist, author and director of the Institutum Divi Thomae.

PONTIFICAL DECORATIONS

The Holy See confers various titles of nobility, orders of Christian knighthood and other honors upon men and women, who have in an outstanding manner furthered the well-being of society, the Church and the Holy See. The titles are bestowed by the Pope as temporal sovereign and range from prince to baron. That most usually given is the title of count prefixed to the family name; it may be personal or transferable by right of primogeniture in the male line. The various orders of knighthood are as follows: Supreme Order of Christ; Order of the Golden Spur; Order of Pius IX; Order of St. Gregory the Great; Order of St. Sylvester; Order of the Holy Sepulchre; and Knights of Malta. Other pontifical decorations include the medals "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice," "Benemerenti" and of the Holy Land.

Supreme Order of Christ

or

Militia of Our Lord Jesus Christ

This order was instituted by Pope John XXII on March 14, 1319, in Portugal, as a survival of the Portuguese Templars declared innocent in the trial which led to the suppression of the Knights Templars everywhere. Expeditions to Africa to conquer Islam kept alive the military spirit but religious discipline declined, the grand mastership became the prerogative of the king, and in the nineteenth century properties of the order were confiscated. The Pope had reserved to himself and his successors in the bull of approval the right to create knights of the order, and today the order survives only as a papal decoration, with one class of knights.

Order of the Golden Spur

or

The Golden Militia

It is doubtful who was the original founder of this order, but it is the oldest and for a long time was the most prized of papal decorations. Lavish bestowal of it by the Sforza family and bishops assistant at the throne, who had been granted that privilege, resulted in diminished prestige and in 1841 Gregory XVI placed the order under the patronage of St. Sylvester. As a souvenir of the golden jubilee of the dogmatic definition of the Immaculate Conception, Pius X restored this Golden Militia and on Feb. 7, 1905, re-established it under the patronage of the Immaculate Conception. It has one class of 100 knights. Only those are admitted who, by feat of arms, or writings, or outstanding deeds, have spread the Faith, and have safeguarded and championed the Church.

Order of Pius IX

Pope Pius IX founded this order on June 17, 1847. Its purpose is to reward outstanding deeds in favor of the Church and society. The order is divided into three classes: (1) Knights of the Grand Cross; (2) Commanders; and (3) Knights.

Order of St. Gregory the Great

This order was established by Pope Gregory XVI, Sept. 1, 1831, to reward the civic and military virtues of the subjects of the Papal States. The order has two main divisions, civil and military, each being divided into three classes: (1) Knights of the Grand Cross; (2) Commanders; and (3) Knights.

Order of St. Sylvester

This order had two periods. It was instituted by Pope Gregory XVI, Oct. 31, 1841, to absorb the Order of the Golden Spur, fallen into abuse, and by Motu Proprio of Pope Pius X, Feb. 7, 1905, it was divided into two orders of knighthood, one retaining the name of St. Sylvester, and the other taking the old name of the Golden Militia. Since the regulations of Pius X the Order of St. Sylvester has three classes: (1) Knights of the Grand Cross; (2) Commanders; and (3) Knights.

Order of the Holy Sepulchre

There are many reputed founders of this order, among them St. James, first Bishop of Jerusalem, the Empress St. Helena, Charlemagne, Godfrey of Bouillon and Baldwin I. Critical historians claim that the order is a branch of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, approved by Pope Pascal II in 1113. It is, however, generally accepted that it was founded by Godfrey of Bouillon during the First Crusade, in July, 1099. The Latin Kings of Jerusalem instituted a guard of honor of this order around the Sepulchre of Christ. When the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem fell, the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre were driven out of the Holy Land, and in time the order lost some of its prestige. In 1489 it was united to the Knights Hospitallers by Pope Innocent VIII and in 1496 was restored by Alexander VI who empowered the Franciscan Custodian of the Holy Land to confer the Knighthood of the Holy Sepulchre upon worthy persons. Upon the restoration of the Latin Patriarchate of Jerusalem in 1847 Pope Pius IX withdrew the Alexandrine faculty and gave it to the new patriarch and his successors, who have since retained it. In 1932 new regulations were written. The Pope is Grand Master of the Order and the Patriarch of Jerusalem is its rector and administrator.

The order enjoys the highest standing in Europe where it has been bestowed upon royalty, nobility, heads of republics, and others distinguished in their service to the Church, or in the arts, sciences and literature. Members are first designated by the bishop of the diocese in which they reside and then by the Patriarch of Jerusalem and are finally approved by the Holy See. There are three classes: (1) Knights of the Grand Cross; (2) Commanders; (3) Knights. There are also Ladies of the Holy Sepulchre, divided into three classes. In various countries lieutenants of the order are appointed. There are about 60 members in the United States. Michael Francis Doyle, of Philadelphia, was designated Lieutenant of the Grand Master in 1938; he is also President of the American chapter. Cardinal Dougherty is Bailie of the Order.

Knights of Malta

This is the oldest order of laymen and prelates in the Church. Founded in the middle of the eleventh century, their history can be traced to the Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, and then through the Knights of Rhodes. The order has gone by the name of Knights of Malta since 1530. The schisms in the order which came as a result of the Reformation, and from the assumed leadership of self-appointed persons, were brought to an end in 1797 when the Pope refused to recognize the election of Czar Paul of Russia as grand master. Since that time, the grand master has been named by the Pope. The conditions for admission to the order are nobility of sixteen quarterings, the Catholic faith, attainment of full legal age, integrity of character, and corresponding social position. There are in existence four great priories. The membership comprises commanders and several classes of knights.

Medal "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice"

This decoration had its origin as a memorial or souvenir of the golden sacerdotal jubilee of Pope Leo XIII, who bestowed it upon those men and women who had aided in making his jubilee and the Vatican Exposition successful. It has been conserved by his successors, with his effigy, and is given in recognition of outstanding service to the Pope and the Church.

Medal "Benemerenti"

Pope Gregory XVI in 1832 instituted two merit medals, civil and military, to reward daring and courage. The decoration has been conserved by his successors and bears their effigy.

Medal of the Holy Land

Pope Leo XIII designed this medal, to be bestowed upon pilgrims to the Holy Land who have a genuinely religious intention in making the pilgrimage and who can present a certificate of moral Christian life from their parish priest. The decoration is bestowed by the Custodian of the Holy Land.

THE FRANCISCAN ORDER

St. Francis was the originator and founder of three orders in the Church of God: the Friars of the First Order, the nuns of the Second Order, and the members of the Third Order, both secular and regular, including both men and women.

The First Order

The First Order dates back to the year 1207. Francis, the Poor Man of Assisi, attracted to himself a number of companions desirous of leading a more perfect life. He called his band the "Friars Minor," or the "Lesser Brethren." He drew up for them a Rule of life consisting for the most part of texts from Holy Writ. On April 16, 1209, Pope Innocent III gave a verbal approval to this rule in the presence of Francis and his companions.

After the Saint's death a tendency to division manifested itself among the friars. Some of them favored certain dispensations in regard to corporate poverty. The two parties did not become autonomous, however, until the year 1517, when Pope Leo X formally separated the First Order of St. Francis into two branches: the Friars Minor of the Observants, and the Friars Minor Conventual. In 1525, Friar Matteo da Bassi of the Observants obtained permission from Pope Clement VII to introduce a third branch of the order, the members of which soon became known as the Capuchins.

Today we still find the First Order divided into three great and independent bodies; the Friars Minor, simply so called, and popularly known as the Franciscans; the Friars Minor Conventual, popularly the Conventuals or the Black Franciscans; and the Friars Minor Capuchin, popularly the Capuchins. Altogether therefore there are over 44,000 Franciscan friars in the world today. These many brethren are engaged in every field of religious and priestly labor, and work side by side in every land, in all things "catholic and apostolic," like their holy Father, Francis.

The Second Order

In the year 1212, Lady Clare of Assisi placed herself under the spiritual direction of St. Francis. Realizing what a spiritual treasure he had found in St. Clare, Francis clothed her with a habit of penance not unlike his own. This was the beginning of the Second Order, that of the Poor Ladies, or, as they are now called, the Poor Clares.

St. Clare was soon joined by her sister Agnes. The Poverello wrote for them a simple Rule, and turned over to them the Church of San Damiano, to be their motherhouse, and convent of perpetual inclosure.

In but a few years Clare, who styled herself "the handmaid and little plant of our holy Father, Francis," found herself the spiritual mother of many nuns.

Although the Rule of the Poor Clares is most austere, the Second Order has prospered wonderfully in every century. Today the order numbers nearly 14,000 nuns and is divided into two observances: the Poor Clares Urbanists, who keep the Rule with a few mitigations; and the Poor Clares Collettines, who keep the Rule in its primitive severity.

The Third Order

Third Orders are of two kinds, secular and religious or regular. The former are associations of persons living in the world, the latter are groups of religious living a community life under vows.

The Third Order Secular of St. Francis is a religious order in the strict sense of the word. It was founded by St. Francis of Assisi in 1221, for men and women, married and single, who, though living in the world and occupied in trades and professions, want to lead a more perfect Catholic life.

THIRD ORDER SECULAR OF ST. FRANCIS IN THE MODERN WORLD

Why the Third Order? — "It has been our earnest wish that all should do their best to follow the example of St. Francis of Assisi. Wherefore, in the past We have always devoted special attention to the Third Order of St. Francis; and now that by the great favor of God We have been called to the Supreme Pontificate and a favorable opportunity has presented itself, We do urge all Christians not to be behindhand in joining the ranks of this soldiery of Christ." In these words of his encyclical, "Auspicato," Sept. 17, 1882, did Pope Leo XIII appeal to his children to enroll in the Third Order of St. Francis, of which he was the most renowned tertiary at that time. Also Third Order members were Pius X, Benedict XV and Pius XI. Like their venerable predecessor they commended and recommended the Third Order to the faithful. While our present Holy Father has not yet spoken on the merits of the Third Order, yet the fact that he is both a Dominican and a Franciscan tertiary is a recommendation more convincing than words. If our Supreme Pontiffs have thought so highly of the Third Order, and if Leo XIII even proposed the Third Order as his reform for the world, surely it behooves our Catholic people to look into the Third Order and to enroll, if possible, under the banner of Francis to fight "the good fight" for God, for Church, and for country.

Its Origin — We trace the origin of the Third Order to about the year 1221 when St. Francis clothed Blessed Luchesio of Poggibonzi with the habit of the Third Order. For several years the First and Second Orders had existed, were flourishing, were leading men back to Christ, and were putting Christ once again into the hearts of men. The people saw how much good St. Francis had accomplished by his founding of the First and Second Orders; so they besought him to draw up also a rule of life for them. After much prayer and meditation St. Francis, assisted by his great friend and protector, Cardinal Ugolino, drew up the Rule of the Third Order. "The year 1221 is now generally regarded as the date of this Rule," writes Fr. Gregory Cleary, O. F. M. This Rule consisted of twelve chapters, a thirteenth being added in 1227. Immediately the Third Order spread far and wide, producing far-reaching results.

Its First Fruits — At this period, which marked a turning point in history, the Christian world was badly in need of reform. Subtle heresies were being propagated by false reformers. Party strife and petty wars with their terrible results were laying waste the Imperial and Papal states and the cities of Italy. The rich lived in luxury and pleasure; the poor eked out a miserable existence. By making thoroughly loyal Catholicity a requisite for membership in the Third Order, St. Francis laid the axe to the root of the heresies. By forbidding the tertiaries to take formal oaths unnecessarily and to bear arms except in defense of the Roman Church, the Christian faith, their country or themselves, St. Francis brought peace to Europe. By his rules of moderation and decency, by exhorting the practice of the virtues of poverty, chastity and obedience according to each one's state in life, by stressing the dignity and freedom of all men redeemed by Christ, St. Francis brought justice and charity back into the lives of men. As Pius XI writes: "Francis by his indomitable apostolate and that of his order, as well as by means of the Third Order, laid anew the foundations of society, reforming it thoroughly according to the ideals of the Gospel."

Its Rule and Nature — The first Rule of the Third Order was promulgated by St. Francis himself in 1221. By his Bull, "On the Mountain," issued August 18, 1289, Pope Nicholas IV expanded and confirmed this Rule. Leo XIII in his Apostolic Constitution, "The Merciful Son of God," issued May 30, 1883, adapted this Rule to meet modern needs without, however, changing the nature of the Third Order. Hence today the Third Order is still a true secular order; the Superiors of the First Order have direct jurisdiction over it; and its life and apostolate remain the same as before.

The present Rule consists of three short simple chapters. The first chapter limits membership to loyal Catholics who have completed their fourteenth year; provides for the reception of married women; prescribes wearing of the scapular and cord; and decrees for the reception, novitiate and profession of tertiaries. The second chapter prescribes moderation in living; decency in one's mode of life; the virtues of temperance and thanksgiving; fasts on the Vigils of the Immaculate Conception and of St. Francis; monthly confession and Communion; daily recitation of twelve Our Fathers, Hail Marys and Glories, or of the Little Office of the Blessed Virgin, for those who do not say the Divine Office; timely making of one's will; good example and zeal in the Christian apostolate; the virtue of charity and the spirit of peace; no unnecessary oaths, indecent language or vulgar jokes; attendance at daily Mass if possible, and at the monthly meetings; maintenance of a common fund for the benefit of the members and of good causes; visiting of the sick tertiaries; and praying for those departed. The third chapter provides for the conferring of offices, visitation, admonishing of disobedient tertiaries, and dispensations from the Rule. It points out that violations of the Rule are not sinful unless they are also violations of the Commandments of God or of the Church.

Hence we see that there is nothing very difficult about the Rule. It was written, not for great saints, but for ordinary good Catholics who want to cultivate spiritual perfection according to their state in life.

Like all Franciscan Rules it restricts itself to essentials, giving great latitude to the spiritual bent of the individual. The Third Order is wide enough to include all Catholics, from the Holy Father to the young student in high school, from the president of a great industrial organization to the porter who sweeps the floor of a warehouse. If only all Catholics would embrace the Third Order in the spirit of penance springing from a sincere love of God, what a spiritual renovation would take place in our day! For as the Most Rev. Leonard M. Bello, Minister General of the Order of Friars Minor, writes in his encyclical on the Third Order: "The Franciscan Third Order is an association of the elect of the faithful, who although they live in the world, nay because they live in the world, desire, nevertheless to pursue Christian perfection according to the very spirit of the Franciscan religious and nuns, but in a manner suitable to their state in life: so that while having professed neither the cloistral law nor the three vows of the same, they set up in their homes a cloister, as it were, shut off from the allurements of the world; and they endeavor to practise with a cheerful spirit all the virtues corresponding to the three vows of religious."

"My Plan for Social Reform" — "My plan for social reform is the Third Order," Leo XIII was accustomed to say. For the Third Order goes to the root of all our present social evils; it would reform the source of all our man-made evils — the heart of man. Yet the Third Order has not for its primary end any social or economic reforms. Like the Church it is a purely spiritual society, having for its end the salvation and sanctification of men. This religious spirit of the Third Order is the source whence the brothers and sisters of the Third Order draw their inspiration for countless works of charity. In his encyclical, "Quadragesimo Anno," Pius XI pointed out that there can be no true social or economic reforms without a moral reform. Vice versa it follows that social and economic reforms must of necessity follow a moral reform. Why? Because religion was not and was never intended to be the affair of one hour on Sunday; true religion must and does enter into every act of our lives. Hence, let a man for his sanctification become a tertiary, and what happens? That man sanctifies himself by prayer, the sacraments, and attendance at Holy Mass. He practises the virtues of poverty, chastity and obedience according to his state in life. By the virtue of poverty he lives moderately, within his means; he does not seek to amass wealth but rather to share it. By the virtue of chastity he practises modesty and decency in thought, word, and deed; he does not seek pleasure immoderately. By the virtue of obedience he is loyal to his God, his Church, and his country. Thus he conquers the old enemies of man which are so active today — the world, the flesh and the devil.

But the reforming power of the Third Order does not stop here. The Third Order is a world-wide fraternal society. Get a world-wide society of men and women practising the virtues of poverty, chastity and obedience according to their states in life, and you have a most powerful moral force that will shame the grabbers of material wealth and promote the economic good of each individual; that will discourage the filthiness of indecency and impurity, and foster the beauty and holiness of modesty and chastity; that will remain impervious to the present widespread attacks against Church and State, and promote loyalty to both according to Catholic principles. The Third Order renovated the face of the earth in the thirteenth century; it can do the same today. (For a complete, authoritative, inspiring, solid treatment of this aspect of the Third Order we cannot recommend too highly "Social Ideals of St. Francis," by Fr. James Meyer, O. F. M., popular edition 60 cents.)

So too the Third Order holds the key to the solution of many of our other problems. The real Christianity of real Franciscanism has no place for snobbery, exploitation or race prejudices. For the love of Christ, Francis ministered to the lepers, his brothers in Christ. If Francis lived with us today, how could he act unjustly or uncharitably toward his brothers and sisters for love of whom Christ was born and crucified, and into whose hearts Christ enters in Holy Communion?

Franciscan Youth — If the Third Order is a powerful spiritual help for Catholic men and women, how much more helpful is it for Catholic youth! St. Francis teaches them that religion should be a positive, joyful service in the House of their Heavenly Father. He offers them a Rule of Life that is the guarantee of true success and happiness in this life and in the next. Father General writes that young tertiaries should have special consideration up to 25 years of age; that, when possible, they should have their own board of officers, director, and literature, and other advantages suitable to their nature and inclinations. For further information see "The Seraphic Youth Movement" in "Survey of a Decade," by Poppy and Martin, page 78, and Father General's encyclical, numbers 24-26.

Organization — A fraternity must be erected by a Franciscan Provincial or Superior of the First Order or of the Third Order Regular within whose territory the fraternity is to be located. Fraternities are organized: (1) locally, under the jurisdiction of the local Franciscan Superior; (2) regionally, under the jurisdiction of the respective Ministers Provincial; (3) internationally, under the jurisdiction of the respective Ministers General. Usually each Province appoints a Third Order Commissary. Recently the Fathers General of the various Franciscan Orders have appointed Commissary Generals for all the Third Order fraternities under their jurisdiction. In the United States a National Organization of the Third Order of St. Francis was founded in 1921 to further the full observance of the Rule of the Third Order, and to foster national union and co-operation. (The Fathers General urge such federation and directive union of the tertiary provinces and fraternities.) The Franciscan Provincial Superiors constitute the National Directive Board of which the secretary is the Very Rev. Adalbert Foley, O. F. M. Secretary of the National Executive Board is Fr. Maximus Poppy, O. F. M., who has been active in Third Order work for 10 years. His office is at 3200 Mera-mec St., St. Louis, Mo.

Privileges — Tertiaries can gain many plenary and partial indulgences, and can receive General Absolution on many great feast days. Pius X granted tertiaries communication of indulgences with the First and Second Orders and participation in the spiritual fruits of their good works. Priest tertiaries enjoy the personal favor of the "privileged altar" three times a week; and may, apart from choral office, use the Divine Office and the Missal of that family of the First Order to which they are affiliated. Hence on Saturdays in Franciscan churches and private oratories they may say the Mass of the Immaculate Conception.

Third Order and Catholic Action — A misunderstanding of the nature of Catholic Action has produced a tendency to identify long-established religious societies with Catholic Action. The attempt to identify the Third Order in its normal functioning with Catholic Action would injure both. Yet, a consideration of the relation between the Third Order and Catholic Action will show the universality and the effectiveness of the Third Order in furthering the mission of the Church, namely, the salvation of souls, in any given age.

Catholic Action is the participation of the laity in the apostolate of the hierarchy which is the salvation of souls. The Third Order is a true religious order of seculars, both priests and laity, under the jurisdiction of the superiors of the Franciscan First Order and Third Order Regular, having for its primary purpose the salvation and sanctification of the Tertiaries. Catholic Action being a participation in the apostolate of the hierarchy, it must be conducted under the direct supervision of the hierarchy of which each bishop is the representative in his own diocese. The Third Order is subject to ecclesiastical authority and each fraternity can be established only with the permission of the local Ordinary and is subject to visitation by him. Catholic Action is of its nature corporate, implying united action of all the members of the Mystical Body of Christ toward spreading God's kingdom over all the earth. The Third Order dedicates its members to all good works, and this wide scope of purpose includes whatever work the bishop may give the members to do as Catholic Action. Catholic Action has the pursuit of personal perfection as its first and greatest end. The entire rule of the Third Order aims primarily at the sanctification of the individual.

To summarize, then, the Third Order is at one with Catholic Action in its observance of Gospel life, its constitution for the laity, and its obedience to Church authority, as well as its corporate aim and personal implications. Even though the Third Order may not be designated as Catholic Action by a bishop, it should be the backbone of Catholic Action in a diocese. Pope Pius XI called upon Tertiaries to fight the battles of the Lord against godless Communism and the other errors of our age, as knights in the army of Catholic Action. Tertiaries, therefore, should be the leaders in Catholic Action, the papal crusade of our day to win the world for Christ.

MARRIAGE LEGISLATION OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH

The marriage contract is a lawful agreement between a man and a woman by which is given and accepted the exclusive and perpetual right to those bodily functions intended for the generation of children. It was this contract which our Lord raised to the dignity of a sacrament when He instituted the Sacrament of Matrimony. This sacrament sanctifies the union and gives to the couple the graces which they need for the proper fulfillment of the duties of their state in life. Those who are not baptized can enter into a natural contract of marriage, but only those who are baptized can receive the sacrament.

The primary purpose of marriage is the generation and the education of children; the secondary purposes are the cultivating of mutual love and the quieting of concupiscence. The two essential qualities of this union are unity and permanence. True and lawful marriage is, therefore, a union between one man and one woman which can be broken by nothing but the death of either party. These qualities serve to secure the ends for which marriage is intended; its unity insures the proper care and the loving co-operation in the rearing of the children; its permanence guarantees mutual love and support all through the natural lives of both parties.

All persons who are not forbidden by law may contract marriage. Certain prohibitions are laid down by the natural and the divine law. These are binding upon all men no matter what their religious beliefs may be. Thus for example, all men are bound by the natural law which forbids marriage before a certain age. But, since Christ left to His Church complete jurisdiction over all baptized Christians, she has the supreme power to regulate concerning their marriages. Her laws are binding upon all who are validly baptized, hence they oblige heretics, schismatics and apostates unless these classes are positively exempted by the Church. In two cases this exemption is stated: heretics and schismatics are not bound by the impediment of disparity of worship nor are they held to the canonical form of celebration before a priest. Unbaptized persons are bound to the observance of these laws when these laws authentically explain the provisions of the divine law.

The Church has laid down a list of impediments which affect the status of a marriage. Some of these impediments render the marriage null and void so that in the eyes of the Church such a marriage is worthless. These are known as diriment or nullifying impediments. Other impediments, while they do not render the marriage invalid and worthless, nevertheless make it gravely sinful. These are called impeding or prohibitory impediments.

The Impeding or Prohibitory Impediments

1. The Impediment of Simple Vows. (a) One who is bound by a simple vow of virginity cannot enter marriage without grave sin. Virginity is the state of perfect purity which has never been defiled by any sinful thought, word or action contrary to this virtue. In taking a vow of virginity a person promises to persevere in this state by avoiding the first deliberate act which would violate the purity of the soul. A marriage contracted without a dispensation from this vow, although valid, would be sinful because one of the duties of the married state is the generation of children which involves the violation of this vow.

(b) One who has made a vow of perfect chastity has promised to abstain from sexual intercourse and from voluntary acts against purity. One entering marriage without dispensation from this vow sins gravely but the marriage is valid.

(c) The vow of celibacy is a promise never to marry. Unless a person is dispensed from this vow he cannot enter marriage without grave sin.

(d) The vow to enter a religious order hinders a person from contracting marriage without grave sin.

(e) The vow to receive sacred orders is a promise to receive the orders of subdiaconate, diaconate and priesthood. One who has made such a vow cannot contract marriage without grave sin in as much as the observance of his vow after marriage is practically impossible.

2. The Impediment of Legal Relationship. Legal relationship is the bond which exists between the person adopting and the person adopted. If Civil Law states that this relationship is a prohibitory impediment, it is also regarded as such by the Church; if the Law states that it is a nullifying impediment, the Church likewise looks upon it as such. In this matter the Church determines the nature of the impediment according to the provisions of the Civil Law. Nowhere in the United States does an impediment arise from Legal relationship.

3. The Impediment of Different Religions. The Church strongly forbids the marriage of a Catholic to any baptized member of an heretical or schismatical sect. Moreover if there is grave reason to believe that such a marriage would result in the loss of the Faith of the Catholic party, the marriage is forbidden by the Divine Law itself. "Mixed" marriages are gravely sinful if contracted without the proper dispensation, although they are nevertheless valid. To obtain such a dispensation it is necessary that there be just and grave reasons for the marriage; that the non-Catholic party promise to allow the Catholic party complete freedom in the practise of religion; that both parties promise that all the children born to them will be baptized and brought up as Catholics; that there be strong grounds for believing that these promises will be observed sincerely.

The Diriment or Nullifying Impediments

1. Impediment of Age. No male before his sixteenth year of age completed and no female before her fourteenth year completed is capable of contracting a true and valid marriage. Marriage at any time after that age would be valid, but the Church urges young people to observe the age limits which certain states have specified, otherwise serious legal consequences would follow. This is especially true in the case of minors. The pastor should not assist at their marriage if the parents are unaware of it or if they are reasonably unwilling that it take place.

2. The Impediment of Impotency. Impotency consists in the incapacity to perform the normal, physical act of copulation. Such impotence, provided that it preceded marriage and is a permanent physical defect, whether on the part of the man or the woman, renders the marriage null and void. In cases of doubt the Church does not hinder the parties from marrying. Sterility is not to be considered an impediment to marriage.

3. The Impediment of an Existing Bond. Unity is one of the qualities of marriage. Hence a person who is already validly married cannot contract another valid marriage as long as he is bound by the bonds of the previous union. A second marriage may be entered into if the first was null or has been legitimately dissolved.

4. The Impediment of Disparity of Worship. The Church forbids the marriage of any non-baptized person with one baptized in the Catholic Church or converted to the Church from heresy or schism. Such a marriage attempted without the necessary dispensation would be invalid. Dispensations are granted on the conditions mentioned above in the treatment of the Impediment of Mixed Religions.

5. The Impediment of Sacred Orders. One who has been ordained a subdeacon, deacon or priest cannot contract a valid marriage. It is possible with a dispensation for a married man to receive Sacred Orders provided that his wife consents and takes a vow of chastity.

6. The Impediment of Religious Profession. The members of certain religious orders take solemn vows of poverty, chastity and obedience. One who is bound by such a vow of chastity cannot contract a valid marriage. This impediment affects both male and female religious. It is to be noted that whereas solemn vows render a marriage null and void, simple vows render the marriage sinful but do not impair its validity. In only one case do simple vows render a marriage invalid, and this is due to a privilege granted to the Jesuits by Pope Gregory XIII by which their simple vows invalidate marriage.

7. The Impediment of Abduction. There can be no valid marriage between an abductor and a woman abducted with a view to marriage, so long as she remains in the power of the abductor. This impediment ceases as soon as the woman gains her freedom and freely marries the man. One who forcibly detains a woman against her will incurs this same impediment even though the woman came of her own free will to the place in which she is detained.

8. The Impediment of Crime. This impediment may arise in one of three ways:

(a) Through an act of adultery with an accompanying promise of marriage or an attempt to contract marriage. The parties concerned would be incapable of contracting a valid marriage without a dispensation, even after the death of their consorts.

(b) Through an act of adultery joined with the murder of the consort of either party. This murder may be planned and executed by either of the guilty parties; it is not necessary that there be a mutual conspiracy. A dispensation would have to be obtained before the parties concerned could contract a valid marriage.

(c) Through the crime of conjure. This impediment is incurred when there is a mutual conspiracy resulting in the death of a legitimately wedded consort. The intention of marrying the accomplice must likewise enter in.

9. The Impediment of Relationship. Relationship may come about in four ways:

(a) Through consanguinity or relation by carnal descent. In determining the relationship existing between persons we must note the common ancestor, the line and the degree. Those in the direct line are descended one from the other such as children from parents, grandchildren from grandparents. Those in the collateral line have a common ancestor but are not descended from one another such as brothers or sisters. The degree of relationship is the distance from the common ancestor. The following table illustrates these principles.

John
Mary	Jane
Edmund	Andrew
Michael	Bertha

John and Michael are related in the third degree of consanguinity in the direct line. Jane and Bertha are related in the second degree of the direct line. Michael and Bertha are related in the third degree of consanguinity in the collateral line. Edmund and Bertha are related in the third degree of the collateral line because the number of degrees is determined by the number in the longer of the two lines.

There can be no valid marriage between blood relatives in the direct line no matter what degree of relationship exists. Likewise all marriages are invalid which are contracted without dispensation between persons who are related within the third degree of the collateral line of consanguinity. The Church never dispenses in the direct line nor in the first degree of the collateral line.

(b) Through affinity or relation resulting from a valid marriage. The husband contracts this relationship with the blood relatives of the wife and vice versa. There is, however, no relationship of affinity between the blood relatives of the husband and the blood relatives of the wife. The degree of affinity is computed in such a way that those who are blood relatives of the man are related by affinity to the woman in the same line and degree in which they are related to the man. Thus the blood brother of the husband is related to the wife in the first degree of the collateral line. The mother of the bride is related to the groom in the first degree of the direct line.

The Church declares invalid any marriage between persons who are related by affinity in any degree of the direct line as well as between those who are related by affinity within the second degree of the collateral line.

(c) Through spiritual relationship arising from baptism. Whoever administers baptism, whether solemnly or privately, contracts a certain relationship with the person baptized. This same relationship exists between the godparents and the one baptized. Hence, without a dispensation, there can be no valid marriage between a godchild and its godparents nor between the one baptized and the one who baptizes.

(d) Through adoption or legal relationship. As noted under the Impeding Impediments, legal relationship may become a diriment impediment rendering invalid any marriage between the adopter and the person adopted. In this matter the Church merely follows the norm established by the Civil Law and considers legal relationship in the light of these laws as prohibiting or annulling impediments.

10. The Impediment of Public Honesty. This impediment arises from an invalid marriage or from public or notorious concubinage. It renders the man incapable of contracting a valid marriage with the relatives of the woman in the first and second degrees of the direct line and vice versa. The accompanying plan will illustrate this.

Alice is living with Edward as his concubine. This fact gives rise to an impediment which prevents Edward from marrying Mary or Martha who are related to Alice in the first and second degrees respectively of the direct line. The same impediment hinders Alice from marrying William or Francis.

Publishing the Banns

To insure the absence of all impediments the Church orders the pastor to announce publicly the names of people who are about to contract marriage. The publishing of the "banns" is usually done in Church at the parochial Mass on three continuous Sundays or holy-days of obligation. If the parties are of different parishes, the banns are announced in both places. Persons who know of reasons why the marriage should not take place are obliged to make known these reasons to the pastor before the date set for the wedding.

The Prescribed Form of Marriage

Not only must the parties be free from all impediments, they must also observe the form of marriage which is demanded by the law of the Church. This law states that those marriages only are valid which are contracted in the presence of the pastor of the place in which the ceremony is performed, or in the presence of the local Ordinary, or in the presence of a priest delegated by either. There must also be present two witnesses.

This prescription of the law is binding upon the following: (a) Catholics by baptism or conversion when marrying among themselves; (b) Catholics who marry non-Catholics even after they have received a dispensation from the impediment of different religions or of disparity of worship; (c) An Oriental Catholic who marries a Catholic of the Latin rite.

In view of this law it is evident that a Catholic who goes through a marriage ceremony before a minister or a Justice of the Peace contracts no marriage. Moreover, a Catholic who goes through this ceremony before a Protestant minister incurs excommunication reserved to the bishop (Canon 1063). However, because the Code of Canon Law expressly exempts non-Catholics from this law, the marriages of non-Catholics before ministers and Justices are valid, if not rendered null by the presence of other nullifying impediments.

Fear as a Cause of Nullity

A fear which would so disturb the mind as to suppress the use of reason would also destroy the consent which is necessary for validly contracting marriage. The Church has stated that in certain cases fear, even though it left a degree of consent that would be sufficient for another natural contract, may be the cause of nullity in a marriage. This fear must be really grave; it must be provoked by an outside free agent; it must be unjustly provoked.

The Separation of Married People

1. A valid marriage between baptized persons, after it has been consummated, cannot be dissolved by any human power or by any cause other than the death of either of the parties. Consummation of a marriage is effected by the conjugal act by which the spouses become one flesh.

2. A valid marriage between baptized persons or between a baptized and a non-baptized person, provided that it has not been consummated, may be dissolved in two cases:

(a) The solemn religious profession of one of the parties. A married person, therefore, who wished to enter an order and to take solemn vows would have to prove that the marriage had not been consummated. If this were proven, the matrimonial bond would be broken and the party who remains in the world would be free to contract a new marriage.

(b) Dispensation from the Holy See. There must be a grave cause for seeking such a dispensation. It is enough if one of the parties makes the request; and the request is often granted in spite of the opposition of the other party. When the dispensation is granted both parties are free to enter new marriages.

These exceptions do not undermine the indissolubility of marriage. In both cases the marriage had not been rendered perfect by a consummation. Moreover it is the Pope and not a civil authority who pronounces the sentence. As the Vicar of Christ, and in virtue of his pontifical authority, he dispenses in these particular cases because of grave necessity and in the interests of the spiritual welfare of the persons concerned.

3. A legitimate marriage, even consummated, between non-baptized persons can be dissolved in favor of the party who is converted. This is the "Pauline Privilege" or the "Privilege of the Faith." It is so called because Saint Paul first promulgated it as a means of protecting the Faith of his converts. (I Corinthians, vii, 12-15.) The conditions necessary for using the Pauline Privilege are:

(a) The marriage must have been contracted before the baptism of either party;

(b) One, only, of the parties must be converted and have received valid Christian baptism.

(c) The infidel party must refuse to be converted or at least to live peacefully without insulting God and without interfering with the freedom of the Christian party in the practice of religion. The marriage will not be dissolved if the infidel party assents to both demands, or at least to the second. But because the Pope has the power to dissolve such a marriage, since it is not a consummated Christian marriage, he may do so in exceptional cases for extremely grave reasons even if the infidel party assents to both demands.

4. There are also certain cases in which the partners in a valid marriage may separate without the right of marrying again. The chief cause of perpetual separation arises from adultery of one of the parties. There are other causes which permit the injured party to seek a separation: the affiliation of the other party with a non-Catholic sect; criminal and shameful conduct; the education of the children in schism or heresy; grave peril of soul or body. In this, as in all other matters pertaining to the Sacrament of Matrimony, the advice of the pastor should be sought and followed.

Sacred Tribunal of the Rota

Courts of first instance and of second instance, for the adjudication of matrimonial cases, are established in all dioceses throughout the world. Every case is appealed after the first trial: by the parties themselves if the verdict has been against nullity; and by the Defender of the Bond if the decision has been in favor of it. The case is settled if the decisions from the court of first instance and the court of second instance are identical. If they are not, a third trial is necessary, and this takes place before the Sacred Tribunal of the Rota in Rome. In 1941 the Sacred Rota issued 29 decrees of nullity in the 87 matrimonial cases examined. By papal rescript courts of third instance established in this country may during the war adjudicate matrimonial cases usually tried before the Roman Rota.

BIRTH CONTROL

By the technical term "birth control" is meant the unlawful limitation of offspring. All such birth control is by its very nature evil. Because it is intrinsically evil, no reason, however great, can justify it. The prohibition against birth control is not a Church law, but is a dictate of the natural law which is God's law implanted in His creatures. The chief forms of birth control are: contraceptives, abortion and sterilization.

The only legitimate method for limiting offspring is abstinence and self-control.

Contraceptives — The use of contraceptives, whether they be instruments or medicines, is to the married and unmarried alike mortally sinful. The malice of this type of birth control arises from the fact that while the faculty of generation is used, its primary purpose (the generation of offspring) is frustrated. When that primary purpose is frustrated, nature (God's law) is perverted. Such a perversion is nothing less than the sin of onanism, spoken of in Genesis, 38, 9-10.

Abortion is the ejection of a living immature foetus from the womb of the mother at a time when the foetus cannot live outside the womb. Intentional abortion is really murder, and all who take part in an abortion, not excepting the mother, incur an excommunication reserved to the bishop, if the abortion really follows from the attempt to perform it (Canon 2350).

Closely allied to abortion is craniotomy which is that operation in which forceps are used to crush and kill the child in the womb. This also is murder.

Sterilization is an operation in which the tubes, destined to carry the seed, are cut or tied so that during the sexual act no seed will be ejected and no conception can take place. Sterilization frustrates and perverts nature in the same way as does the use of contraceptives. Hence sterilization, except when necessary to preserve the health of the whole body of the one sterilized, is gravely sinful.

RACISM

The racist doctrine may be summarized as follows:

(a) There are essential differences between the various races of men that inhabit the globe.

(b) These essential differences derive from the blood of each race which is the "soul" of the race.

(c) Aryan blood has given rise to all the real and enduring culture of the world. The Nordic race is the present-day counterpart of the ancient Aryan race.

(d) The higher or more noble races, among which the Nordic race is supreme, are predestined by nature to dominate the inferior races, among which the Jewish race is the lowest.

Upon the unstable foundation of this racist error several countries have more or less completely patterned their national policy. They have conveniently adopted a pantheistic concept of the universe and adapted it to their racist theory. They reject the Christian and Jewish concept of a personal God, the Supreme Being Who is Creator of the universe and hence distinct from it, and in place of the personal God the racists conjure up a god whom they identify with nature — that nature which has decreed the supremacy of the Nordic race. This pantheistic god is best served by an obedience to his racial laws.

With the law of racial superiority accepted as fundamental and the blood of the race considered the ultimate source of all value, the leaders in the movement have logically evolved an entirely new moral code. Whatever tends to preserve and perpetuate the "purity" of race is good; whereas whatever tends to pollute the race or hinder its development is evil. For example, procreation of pure Aryans be it within or without the bond of matrimony is good, whereas procreation of children within the bond of marriage contracted by an Aryan and a Jew is an evil. Today marriages of the latter type are declared illegal in Germany. The Christian virtues such as love of neighbor, mercy and humility are decried as weakness and corruption, whereas the Nordic virtues of honor, loyalty and pride, whereby the god of nature is served and the laws of race superiority furthered, alone are considered decent and worthy of human beings.

A new creed is thus established — a creed without foundation in science, without foundation in reason, and without a vestige of truth in theology.

The doctrine is unscientific. The "Aryan race" is an arbitrary classification based upon similarity of language among various peoples. And, in the light of our present scientific knowledge, it would be imprudent to attempt to prove a definite and universal connection between blood and lingual relationships. Objective scientists working with facts, and not attempting to fit facts to a preconceived theory, conclude, as does Professor Franz Boaz of Columbia University: "People confuse individual heredity with race heredity. Individual heredity is a scientific reality, but to speak of 'race heredity' is nonsense. What we know as 'race' is largely a matter of environment. There is no such thing as 'pure' race. All European races are mixtures of many stocks, particularly so wherever you have a large group."

The doctrine is without any logical justification. The proposition that "pure" Aryan or Nordic blood will necessarily produce real culture is unreasonable. Blood and culture are not correlative terms. Culture is based upon thought: culture is real if ideas are true; and ideas are true if in agreement with objective reality — not because they are Nordic ideas or ideals. Culture is not real because it is Nordic culture and degraded because it is Jewish or Christian, any more than fools' gold is true gold because found in Germany, or true gold is fools' gold because found in South Africa.

Finally, viewed in its conflict with theology, racism is, as Pope Pius XI has said, "a true form of apostasy. It is not merely one idea or another which is false. It is the whole spirit of the doctrine which is contrary to the faith of Christ." In his encyclical, "Mit brennender Sorge," the same Pope Pius wrote: "Whoever exalts race, or the people, or the State, or a particular form of state, or the depositories of power, or any other fundamental value of the human community . . . whoever raises these notions above their standard value and divinizes them to an idolatrous level, distorts and perverts an order of the world planned and created by God; he is far from the true faith in God and from the concept of life which that faith upholds."

No more telling indictment of the racist heresy is to be found than that given by Pope Pius XII, in his first encyclical, "Summi Pontificatus": "...Widespread today is the forgetfulness of that law of human solidarity and charity which is dictated and imposed by our common origin and by the equality of rational nature in all men, to whatever people they belong, and by the redeeming Sacrifice offered by Jesus Christ on the Altar of the Cross to His Heavenly Father on behalf of sinful mankind."

After recalling the facts that God created man to His own image and likeness and hence is the true Father of man, the Holy Father insists on the essential unity of the human race which is denied in the racist doctrine. He recalls what St. Paul proclaimed to the proud Greeks, the Aryans of that day: that God "hath made of one, all mankind, to dwell upon the whole face of the earth, determining appointed times, and the limits of their habitation, that they should seek God" (Acts, xvii, 26, 27).

St. Paul, the herald of this truth, opens to us what the Holy Father terms "a marvelous vision," a vision "which makes us see the human race in the unity of one common origin in God, 'one God and Father of all, Who is above all, and through all and in us all' (Ephesians, iv, 6); in the unity of nature which in every man is equally composed of material body and spiritual, immortal soul; in the unity of immediate end and mission in the world; in the unity of dwelling place, the earth . . . ; in the unity of the supernatural end, God Himself, to Whom all should tend; in the unity of means to secure that end."

The Holy Father carefully avoids the other extreme, exemplified by Communism, which preaches a levelling process that would submerge the individual characteristics of peoples in the international reign of a homogeneous proletariat. He points out that "the nations despite a difference of development due to diverse conditions of life and culture are not destined to break the unity of the human race, but rather to enrich and embellish it by the sharing of their own peculiar gifts, and by that reciprocal interchange of goods which can be possible and efficacious only when a mutual love and a lively sense of charity unite all the sons of the same Father and all those redeemed by the same Divine Blood." He further proclaims that "the Church hails with joy and follows with her maternal blessing every method of guidance which aims at a wise and orderly evolution of particular forces and tendencies having their origin in the individual character of each race, provided they are not opposed to the duties incumbent on men from their unity of origin and common destiny."

Having shown the unity of mankind within which all races harmoniously develop, the Holy Father insists on their essential equality. "The spirit, the teaching and the work of the Church can never be other than that which the Apostle of the Gentiles preached: 'putting on the new [man], him who is renewed unto knowledge according to the image of Him that created him. Where there is neither Gentile nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, barbarian nor Scythian, bond nor free. But Christ is all and in all' (Colossians, iii, 10-11)."

CATHOLICS AND PSYCHOLOGY

Today, there is a widespread interest in psychology. "Intelligence tests," "inferiority complexes," "neuroses," "inhibitions," "obsessions," "the subconscious" and many other words, are no longer the peculiar property of the philosophers, but form a part of everyday language. Newspapers search out the hidden psychological motives for every crime and misdeed; books are published which treat of the "development of a winning personality"; and sensational sex-theories are popularized by magazines, novels and movies.

But the terminology is not the only thing that has ceased to be the exclusive property of the philosophers. A part of psychology has veered further and further away from philosophy until, in modern times, it has ceased to be a branch of philosophy and has become an independent science. Though we still have traditional psychology, which is rational or philosophical, we also have a new psychology, which is experimental or empiric and which approximates a natural science. Psychology means the science of the soul, and everything in philosophical psychology hinges on the nature, the origin, the destiny of the human soul as the principle of life. This branch of philosophy answers such questions as: "Does the soul exist?" "What is its essence?" "Where did it come from?" "What is it capable of doing?" "What is its influence?" It answers these questions by studying man's actions and proceeding back to the reasons for them, the cause of them: the soul. If man has thoughts, then there must be some power in man whose function it is to think. This power is not in man's body, for thought is spiritual and the body is material. Therefore, concludes philosophical psychology, there is in man something spiritual that has the power or faculty of thinking. That spiritual thing is the soul, and the faculty of the soul that thinks is the mind.

Experimental psychology, on the other hand, is more or less biological in character. It is more interested in the immediate causes of man's actions than in the fundamental cause; it is more interested in studying the physical manifestations of man's mind than in speculatively studying the mind. It wants to measure mental phenomena with material means. If man has thoughts, experimental psychology wants to know how fast he acquired those thoughts. How much can he understand? How fast can he put into practice what he has learned? How long does it take for his thoughts to influence his nervous system, his muscular system? A person takes an intelligence test and has his mind catalogued as being of a certain "mental age"; this mental age is divided by the age of the person to get his I Q or Intelligence Quotient.

That, briefly and simply stated, serves to indicate by way of example how far experimental psychology has departed from philosophy. It is today an independent, autonomous science: a natural science to be ranked with chemistry, biology, etc. The Catholic Church's attitude towards this science is the same as her attitude towards all science: she welcomes what is true (provided it be true and not merely theoretical) and rejects what is false. There are Catholics who have become outstanding in this branch of knowledge, engaged as they are either in teaching it in Catholic colleges and universities or in conducting independent research in their laboratories.

What has been found objectionable in so much of this "scientific psychology" is that many of its modern exponents have not been content with its separation from philosophy: they have proceeded to deny many of the principles of philosophy. Many have been so occupied with observing and measuring and cataloguing the mental states and functionings of the mind that they have first forgotten about the soul, and then denied its very existence. They have been so preoccupied with the material aspects that they have disregarded the spiritual. This materialism is responsible for a whole series of errors. After saying that man is only matter, without a spiritual soul, it was only a step to say that the mind is the sum total of its conscious states, thus denying the substantiality of the soul, and from there proceed to say that thought is matter in motion and that man reacts to his environment as one chemical reacts to another.

It is needless to state that this materialism is opposed to Catholic philosophy. Catholic philosophers in their psychology can and do use to advantage many of the findings of scientific psychology, but they reject what is false and vehemently oppose it. They do this secure in the knowledge that their philosophy is true and that it cannot be disproved by any startling "discovery" of science. They are neither overawed nor frightened by any number of precision machines or measuring devices. For the truth of the matter is that philosophy does not depend on science. The philosophers base their psychology on solid grounds. They, too, observe facts, and from these facts draw their conclusions by reason. But they do not need a minute description of the facts, nor do they need to measure them to prove, for example, that man has a spiritual soul or that he has freedom of the will. The findings of scientists often throw light on some philosophical problem. But the point is that philosophy does not need them. They are not necessary; they are useful. Consequently, while Catholic philosophy welcomes certain systematic and scientific observations of scientific psychology, it resents and resists any effort on the part of modern exponents of that psychology to deny the tried and true principles of philosophy.

Catholics have subjected many of the teachings of scientific psychology to severe criticism, and justly so, for these false teachings when applied to human conduct are treacherous and morally fatal. They are the more dangerous, because these false teachings have long since ceased to be of mere academic interest; they have been brought to the people in the street by the papers they read and the magazines they buy. And, unfortunately, they have played no small part in influencing the lives and conduct of many people.

They have found a welcome reception by those who are beset by the worries and doubts and insecurities of life. In this restless, nervous age, the stress and strain, the complexity of modern life is proving too much for an alarmingly increasing number of people, and when this so-called psychology offers its help, they turn to it (as people once turned to religion) for peace and security. But the untrue principles of modern psychology cannot help them, for it is based on materialism from which the whole world suffers. Success in life is measured in terms of money and social position. Men engage in breakneck competition to earn more than other men or to become better known socially. Emphasis is everywhere placed on the satisfaction of man's material needs to the neglect of his soul. This prevailing materialism has destroyed belief in a spiritual world for a great many people; it has even considerably weakened the faith of many others who have a religion. They have been led, all unwittingly perhaps, to regard this life as all-important. They have directed all their energies to that end. And they have failed. In many cases not through their own fault but because of conditions over which they had no control.

Recently, universal depression brought the material world of many crashing to the ground. Everywhere men were brought face to face with unemployment and economic chaos. They saw things that were once taken for granted and considered of lasting value passing away. They saw, and they are still witnessing, menacing changes in the very framework of society itself. And they are panic-stricken to learn that what they had based their hopes on is no more. They are thrown back upon themselves, and forced to ask the questions: "What about me?" "What good is life?" "Why am I living?" "What of the future?" In search of help and security, they turn to psychology. But they are already suffering from an overdose of materialism, and so will find neither help nor solace in the answer materialistic psychology gives. For materialism looks only to this world and believes that man means nothing, comes from nowhere and has no destination. This type of materialistic psychology is unable to assist people burdened with the cares of life: it can only aggravate their condition by wrong advice, by counseling behavior that is immoral and unnatural.

And it is safe to say that any system of knowledge that fails to take into account the true nature of man is wrong and dangerous. Catholic psychology can assist men to avoid or to get rid of mental trouble for it recognizes the complete human nature, body and soul. The Catholic Church has for centuries been interested in human behavior and because she knows human nature so well (for besides her long experience she is aided by Revelation and the divine power vested in her to teach and lead men to their true end) she possesses the true knowledge of leading men to peace of soul with God and men. The main reason why there are so many mental and nervous disorders among men today is that religion has ceased to be a vital factor in their lives. The Catholic religion teaches that man was created for heaven; but whether men believe it or not, the majority act as though they were created for this world. The Catholic moral code would keep men on the straight road to heaven and bring peace and order to earth, were it universally observed. But the sins of nations and of society and of individuals have laid waste the earth, not to speak of the spiritual effects on human souls. Hence it is many have become disgusted with life and are left drifting in a world of bare and comfortless reality.

A psychology to be true, then, must not reject philosophy; for a psychology to be Catholic, it must be based on the doctrines and morality of the Catholic faith. With this foundation it can incorporate into itself and use the knowledge which true science has given us of the bodily constitution of man and the mechanism of his functions.

The Nature of Man — Man is a finite creature composed of body and soul, created by God to do His will in this life by observing His Law, and to be happy with Him forever in heaven. Man's body is material; his soul is spiritual. Both body and soul make up man, so that he is not a pure spirit as are the angels, nor is he pure matter as are the animals. The soul is the reason for the life of the body; it is the reason why man can live, and feel and think. This principle of life is so intimately united with the body that it pervades every part of it and when it leaves the body, the body dies. But if the body is so dependent on the soul that it cannot live without it, the soul too is dependent on the body. Since the soul is a spiritual substance, it could not contact the material world without the assistance of a material instrument, and the body is this instrument; it is the means of communication which the soul has with outside reality. The soul is the more important element in man, but the body should not be minimized. For without the body, the soul could not be called "man." Both body and soul united is man. They are intimately united, and though the body will be separated from the soul at death, yet it is destined to be reunited with the soul on the last day and to live with it throughout eternity.

The Fallen Nature of Man — Man, then, was created by God to act as a complete integral unit. But when the human race became stained by original sin, through the Fall of our first parents, this unity of action was disturbed. The soul lost its perfect control over the body. Man became, in a sense, divided against himself, for due to his original sin, his lower nature strives for supremacy over his higher nature. Furthermore, the partners of this union were injured. The soul was wounded: the intellect was darkened and the will weakened. The body was wounded: it became subject to sickness and disease and death. The disturbance of the perfect balance between the soul and the body, and the injury done to both, are the punishments which the sin of Adam and Eve brought upon the human race.

Though not a perfectly balanced union the soul and the body of man, however, are still so closely united that separation means the death of the body. They are so intimately united that the soul still acts through and with the body, its means of communication with material things. And so certain conditions of the body still affect the soul and vice versa. With original sin, however, enters in the fact that the body is subject to sickness and disease and so we have the possibility of the soul being affected by diseased or abnormal conditions of the body. With original sin also enters in the fact that the mind and will of man are imperfect and can be misused, and so we have the possibility of the body being injured by abnormal conditions of the soul. Consequently, the quality of thought and reason often depends on the quality of certain organs and parts of the body. In this respect the health of the brain and the highly developed nerve centers is an important factor in mental life.

Those parts of the body that are closely related to intellectuality, and which form the physical basis for thought, may not develop properly, thereby causing feeble-mindedness; or, after development, may contract disease and deteriorate, thereby causing insanity. Modern psychiatry (that branch of medicine that treats diseases of the mind) and neurology (study of the nervous system) have made great advances in investigating the nature and the development of the nerves and in showing the effect sickness and disease have on nerve and brain tissue. They have studied the diseases of the brain and have developed new and effective treatments for insanity. Not all types of insanity can be cured, for if the physical basis of mental life is lacking or has wasted away, no medical treatment can supply it. Nevertheless, modern treatment can do much to alleviate insanity, and if given in the early stages of the disease can often prevent it.

The different types of insanity are technically called "psychoses." They may be caused by poisons taken into the body, by infection, by injuries to the head; or they may be induced by conditions within the person: prolonged and excessive worry, alcoholism, and so forth. Insanity may affect the emotions, causing its victims (manic-depressives) to be excessively elated and in turn, abnormally depressed. Another type (schizophrenia — "split personality") attacks personality, and its victim thinks he is William Jennings Bryan or perhaps Napoleon. Other types affect the memory, the powers of perception. There are many varieties, and many degrees of insanity. Some are violent types, while others depart only a little from the normal. All, however, need medical attention.

Since man is a rational creature and is distinguished from the animal by his power of thought, it can be understood why some people regard insanity as disgraceful. But such an attitude is inexcusable because insanity is no more disgraceful than pneumonia or any other of the diseases or injuries that afflict the body of man. However, while maintaining and encouraging the proper attitude towards insanity, Catholics, when they hear the Church blamed for the "harsh and inhuman treatment" given the insane in ages past, will do well to remember that it is still necessary to restrain the violently insane lest they harm themselves and others; and that if the insane in those ages lacked the "refinements" of modern scientific treatment, so did normal people lack the conveniences of present-day life.

Besides those mental disorders that are the result of disease and have a physical or organic basis, there are also disorders of the mind that are mental only and do not entail any deterioration of the physical organism. These are called "psycho-neuroses" and are due in most cases to fears, anxieties, dreads. Thus people may be oversolicitous for the health of their body (hypochondria), and fear that they have heart trouble, stomach trouble or suffer from some ailment that will necessitate an operation. They may experience a normal physiological sensation and, through ignorance and fear, exaggerate it until it becomes in their minds the symptom of a disease. These symptoms may not be purely imaginary, for it is possible for the mind to cause disturbances in the body that are like those caused by actual illness. There are any number of other phobias: fear of closed places (claustrophobia) causes people to believe they are smothering in an ordinary room; there is the fear of the dark, often found in children; the fear of high places, of germs, and so forth. These phobias throw the person into an emotional panic. To rid himself of this panic he either performs an action or is prevented from acting. If he performs an action (e.g., he feels compelled to wash his hands) he is the victim of an "obsession"; if emotional panic makes him avoid doing something, he is the victim of an "inhibition." Thus many people are afraid to shake hands or walk under ladders. A popular psycho-neurosis seems to be the "inferiority complex," a fear people have that they are inadequate and cannot measure up to certain situations in life. So they are shy, retiring, and avoid social contacts as much as possible.

A neurotic condition that is often found in pious people is scrupulosity. This is not in any way due to religion itself; it is on a par with other neuroses. The person who has an unreasoning fear that he has stained his soul by sin, and must confess his sins over and over again, is just like the person who has an abnormal fear of being infected by germs and must be always washing his hands. The person who is really scrupulous (and not merely conscientious) feels he has sinned when he really has not, or worries about his confessions when there is no reason to worry. Scrupulosity is usually, if not always, characterized by selfishness and pride. The scrupulous person fears sin, not so much because it displeases God, but because if he sins, it will tarnish his soul.

Fear is natural and necessary. Man has the instinct of self-preservation and when his existence or well-being is threatened by evil, he experiences the emotion of fear. Like all other emotions, fear is capable of good or evil. It must be controlled by right reason. Too much fear is wrong, and so is the total lack of it. Man must train himself to act according to right reason, and not be influenced unduly by his emotions.

In individual cases, the cause of the neurosis may not be clearly apparent. It is usually hidden from the person himself so that he acts without knowing the motive of his action, or attributes the act to another motive. The true motive may be hidden from consciousness or buried in the "unconscious" mind. Thus the adult who experiences a violent reaction every time he sees a man wearing a derby hat may have forgotten that the family doctor who lanced a boil when he was a child wore a derby hat at the time. Duns Scotus, a Catholic theologian of the 13th century, admitted the possibility of present action being caused by motives long since forgotten. Psycho-analysts of today work on the same principle. Emotions, they say, are "repressed," forced out of consciousness by a "censor" which keeps them in the realm of the unconscious. The conflict that results when the repression (which still remains active) struggles to emerge into consciousness is the cause of the neurosis. The mental difficulty of the patient can be cured by bringing this hidden force to consciousness.

This is done by psycho-analyzing the person. On the assumption that all his thoughts are related as links in a chain, he is encouraged to talk freely. One thought will link into another until by "free association" his mind reaches back into the dark recesses of the unconscious. Since these repressions remain active, they may find expression in a substitute gratification. Since Freud believes that all dreams are symbolic and "wish-fulfillments" of suppressed desires, the interpretation of dreams enters into the process. If this mechanism of repression has any value, it should teach the Catholic (what his faith already teaches) that it is sinful to entertain interiorly what it is sinful to do exteriorly. The wilful desire to commit adultery is adultery. He must be chaste in mind as well as in body. He must be sincere in conforming himself, soul and body, whole and entire, to the laws of God.

Catholics who are suffering from neuroses can find help in the confessional. The priest in the confessional, besides being a Father who gives the life of grace by taking away sins (thereby also easing the mind) is also a teacher, a judge, a physician of souls who can see the true state of the penitent's soul and is often in a position to cure his neurosis. Yet in serious cases a Catholic psychiatrist should be consulted. Psycho-analysis is fraught with danger. Even psychoanalysts themselves do not recommend it for all cases, and believe that many neuroses can be cured without recourse to this extreme method. For a Catholic, further danger arises from the naturalistic and materialistic principles of many psycho-analysts who deny the spiritual element in man, many of them regarding even religion itself as a neurosis. And their denial of original sin leads them to counsel a license of action that is inconsistent with, and opposed to, morality and religion.

The Catholic knows that there is something wrong with his nature, that in its present state it is a fallen nature, and that he cannot give free rein to all his passions. The Catholic knows that, due to original sin, there is a conflict within himself; but since he regards this warfare as normal in his present state, he will not be unduly worried or morbidly disgusted with himself when spiritual progress seems slow. He will face life and its problems with courage, knowing that his faith gives him a remedy for everything that man lost by the Fall. The Fall darkened the intellect, weakened the will and lessened the control the soul had over the body. The Catholic has his intellect enlightened so that he knows there is in him the concupiscence of the flesh, the concupiscence of the eyes, the pride of life. He has his will strengthened so that he is able (by the example and grace of Christ) to bring his flesh gradually into subjection by mortification, to control his selfishness by detachment from this world's goods, to be humble in the sight of God and man. St. Thomas in speaking of the sin of our first parents says that man fell by desiring to be in some way equal to God. The Catholic knows it is impossible for him to be infinite for he has a finite nature, and so he is content with the limitations of his true nature and resists the tendencies of his fallen nature. The soaring illimitability of a superman has no attraction for him, for the very limitations of his nature have been sanctified by the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity, Who took upon Himself a human nature, and Who has made us really adopted sons of God.

Science

"Science, which is the true knowledge of things, never is repugnant to the truths of the Christian Faith."

(Pope Pius XI in "In multis solaciis," October, 1936.)

RELATION OF THE CHURCH TO SCIENCE

The relation of the Church to science is admirably expressed in the following words of the Very Rev. Thomas Plassmann, O. F. M., president of St. Bonaventure College, on the occasion of the first meeting of the Catholic Round Table of Science of Western New York and Pennsylvania.

"The Church teaches all her children to love nature because of its beauty. She points out to us the usefulness of the various elements and sanctifies them with her material benediction. And in their beauty and power she sees, as the Seraphic Doctor puts it, the vestiges of the Almighty.

"No greater error has ever been propagated than that the Catholic theologian should be afraid of scientific research. The Catholic theologian has the professional duty of keeping abreast at all times with the findings of research. He has before him the two great books, the Book of the Revelation and the Book of Nature. The former is the writing of God's spirit; the latter is the work of His hands. He knows that Revelation touches only the fringe of the mysteries of God, even as science, notwithstanding all the astounding discoveries of recent decades, has no more than touched the fringe of the mysteries of nature.

"Theology is anxiously waiting for new light, but naturally she asks for facts and not mere theories. Meanwhile the theologian and the scientist shall work in accord, each one keeping within his limits; but in all probability, when the trumpet will sound from Mount Sion for the final reckoning, the theologian will still be pouring over the obscure pages of the Apocalypse and the scientist will still be busy with his microscope, telescope and spectroscope..."

CATHOLIC SCIENTIFIC SOCIETIES

Besides the outstanding Catholic scientific societies which are established at many Catholic universities and colleges we find three new organizations fostered by the Church: The Pontifical Academy of Sciences, The Catholic Round Table of Science, and The Institutum Divi Thomae.

The Pontifical Academy of Sciences

The Accademia dei Lincei which was founded by Prince Federigo Cesi, at Rome, August 17, 1603, was devoted chiefly to the study of the mathematical, physical and philosophical sciences. It counted, among its members, many of the famous scientists of the time, including Galileo.

The Accademia was reorganized by Pius IX on July 3, 1848, and was given the name, Pontificia Accademia dei Nuovi Lincei. Leo XIII encouraged the development of the Academy and in 1887 drew up a new constitution for it.

Pius XI in his Motu Proprio, "In multis solaciis," of October 28, 1936, reformed and reorganized the Accademia. "We, in the fulness of Our power, of Our own initiative, and after mature deliberation on Our part," he said, "restore this house of studies according to new norms; We constitute and declare the same 'The Pontifical Academy of Sciences'; and at the same time We promulgate the statutes hereto appended, as proper to it, in accordance with which the assembly itself should be guided in the future."

The statutes declare that the end and scope of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences is to encourage the study, development and history of the physical, mathematical and natural sciences. Pope Pius XI in selecting the seventy scientists who hold membership for life, said: "We have chosen these men with the greatest care from among the various scientists who are held in high honor in each country. In making this selection We have been influenced both by the importance of their labors and of their writings, which each one on his part has contributed to the advancement of the sciences; and by the reputation which these scholars, by common consent, enjoy in the ranks of the learned."

Italy has twenty-eight members; Germany, eight, including two Austrians and one Czechoslovakian; the United States, seven; Belgium and France, five each; Holland, four; England, two; Argentina, Brazil, China, Denmark, Ireland, Norway, Poland, Portugal, and Switzerland, one each.

The seven American members of the Academy are: George D. Birkhoff, professor of mathematics at Harvard University; Alexis Carrel, professor of biology at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research; Robert A. Millikan, director of the Norman Bridge Laboratory of Physics in the California Institute of Technology; Thomas H. Morgan, director of the department of biological sciences in the California Institute of Technology; George S. Sperti, director of the Institutum Divi Thomae in the Athenaeum of Ohio; Hugh S. Taylor, professor of chemistry at Princeton University; and Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory.

In 1938 the Pius XI Prize was personally conferred on Professor Heymans of the University of Ghent, Belgium.

Pope Pius XI selected as the first president of the re-established Academy, the famous Franciscan scientist, Fr. Agostino Gemelli.

Born in Milan on January 18, 1878, Fr. Gemelli received the degree of Doctor of Medicine and Surgery, summa cum laude, in 1902 from the University of Pavia. He joined the Franciscan Order in 1903, and was ordained in 1908. In 1920, Fr. Gemelli founded the Giuseppe Toniolo Institute for Higher Studies. At its solemn opening on December 8, 1921, the chief inaugural speaker was Cardinal Ratti, who later became Pope Pius XI. Fr. Gemelli became the first rector of this new Catholic University of Italy. He was also commissioned by the Holy Father to found a Catholic Medical Center in Rome, construction of which was under way in 1940.

The Catholic Round Table of Science

The Catholic Round Table of Science, which was organized by Dr. John M. Cooper, of the Catholic University of America, held its first meeting in New York City on December 28, 1928. Its objective is the encouragement of productive scholarship, as distinct from absorptive scholarship, by Catholics, particularly by Catholic colleges and universities, in the field of natural sciences.

The meetings are held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The local conference plan was adopted at the 1934 meeting and many chapters have been established in various sections of the country. The New York Metropolitan Chapter held its first meeting on March 23, 1935, at Fordham University; Fr. Francis P. LeBuffe, S.J., was elected secretary of the Chapter. The Western New York and Pennsylvania Chapter held its first official meeting at St. Bonaventure College on October 12, 1935; Sister Grace of the Sacred Heart, of D'Youville College, was elected secretary. The New England Chapter was organized on January 25, 1936, at Boston College and Fr. John A. Tobin, S.J., of Boston College, was elected permanent secretary. On October 11, 1936, the Catholic high school teachers of science of Rochester, Auburn and Elmira formed the Rochester Chapter and elected Sister Martini Marie, S. S. J., of Nazareth Academy, secretary of the Chapter. The Scranton Chapter was organized on January 9, 1937, and Sister Mary Wilfrid, R. S. M., of Misericordia College was elected secretary. The Vermont Chapter was formed at St. Michael's College on May 15, 1937, and the Chicago Chapter was organized at Loyola University on May 1, 1937. The general secretary of the Catholic Round Table of Science is the Very Rev. Anselm M. Keefe, O. Praem., rector of St. Norbert College, West De Pere, Wis.

At these meetings plans were formulated whereby Catholic scientists could carry on co-operative research work. Previously, this work had been hindered, due to the lack of adequate equipment and of time on the part of the professors. The individual colleges now take portions of some investigation, depending upon the necessary equipment being available at their institution.

Institutum Divi Thomae

A graduate school of scientific research of the Athenaeum of Ohio was founded by the Most Reverend John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati, on June 1, 1935. The object of the Institutum Divi Thomae is to carry on fundamental research in the natural sciences in order to determine, as far as is possible, the basic laws governing natural phenomena. As a graduate school of research the Institutum Divi Thomae has various affiliated units coöperating in its research program. These are at: Rosary College, River Forest, Ill.; Marymount College, Salina, Kans.; Siena Heights College, Adrian, Mich.; Barry College, Miami, Fla.; Bradley Hall, Palm Beach, Fla.; Good Samaritan Hospital, Dayton, Ohio; and St. Francis Hospital, Cincinnati, Ohio. From the Institutum plans, directions and assignment of various phases of research are issued to these units.

Dr. George S. Sperti, a member of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, is director of the Institutum.

The school is specially engaged in studying the cellular growth in cancer, these researches being part of a comprehensive research program to find medical cancer remedies more fundamentally effective than surgery, radium and X-rays, and to attack the basic conditions responsible for the disease.

Since the entrance of the United States into the present war, the facilities of the Institutum have been used in solving some of the special problems created by the war. The dean, Msgr. Cletus Miller, and Dr. Sperti have been advisors to the Government in organizing the scientific resources of the nation.

Scientific and Technical Societies at Some Catholic Colleges and Universities

Boston College, Boston, Mass.: Chemical Club; Physics Research Academy, members are graduates with M. S. or Doctorate degrees in Physics; Physics Club; Radio Club, operating Station WIPR; Pre-Medical Academy.

Canisius College, Buffalo, N. Y.: Chemistry Club; Mendel Club (Biology); Strohaber Science Club.

Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C.: A. S. C. E.*; A. I. E. E.*; A. S. M. E.* Scientific publication, "Catholic Anthropological Conference."

Creighton University, Omaha, Neb.: Caducean Society (Medical); Chemistry Club; Creighton Pharmaceutical Association; Mathematics Club; Odontological Society; Pasteur Club (Biology).

Fordham University, New York City, N. Y.: Chemists' Club; monthly publication, "The Report"; Mendel Club, monthly publication of biological research, "Cabmuth"; Physics Club; Seismological Observatory.

Georgetown University, Washington, D. C.: Astronomical Observatory; Chemo-Medical Research In-

- stitute; Chemists' Club; Seismological Observatory, monthly publications, "Instrumental Bulletin" and "Seismological Despatches."
- Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass.: Affiliated with American Mathematical Association, American Physical Society, American Chemical Society and the American Association of Jesuit Scientists. Scientific Society; Mendel Club (Biology); Chemists' Club, publication, "The Hormone."
- John Carroll University, Cleveland, Ohio: Scientific Academy.
- Loyola College, Baltimore, Md.: Loyola Chemists' Club.
- Loyola University, Chicago, Ill.: Lambda Chi Sigma Honorary Chemical Society.
- Loyola University of Los Angeles, Los Angeles, Cal.: Engineering Society; Pre-Medical Society.
- Manhattan College, New York City, N. Y.: A.S.C.*, Mendelian Society of Biological Research; Newton Mathematical Society.
- Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wis.: Radio Club; Chemical Club; Engineering Association; Junior Branch American Dental Association; Mathematics Club; A.S.C.E.*; A.I.E.E.*; A.S.M.E.*; A.I.C.E.* Scientific publications, "The Marquette Medical Research Bulletin" and "The Marquette Medical Review."
- St. Bonaventure College, St. Bonaventure, N. Y.: Astronomical Observatory; Alpha Kappa Mu Pre-Medical Society; Roger Bacon-McLaughlin Club (Mathematics and Physics); Tau Chi Sigma Chemical Society; Science Center. Scientific publication, "Science Studies."
- St. Edward's University, Austin, Texas: St. Edward's Academy of Science, affiliated with the General Texas Academy of Science.
- Siena College, Loudonville, N. Y.: Roger Bacon Mathematics Club; Berthold Schwarz Chemistry Club; Radio Club.
- University of Dayton, Dayton, Ohio: Sigma Delta Pi Pre-Medical Society, publication "Sigma Delta Pi News"; Chemical Seminar Club; Illuminating Engineering Society; Radio Club; Mechanical Engineering Society; A.S.C.E.*, honored in two consecutive years by the National Society as being one of the twelve outstanding Student Chapters in the United States.
- University of Detroit, Detroit, Mich.: Aeronautical Society, affiliated with the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences; Architectural Society; Sigma Rho Tau, Engineering Honoring Speech Society; Tau Phi, Honorary Engineering Society; A.I.C.E.*; A.I.E.E.*; A.S.M.E.*; S.A.E.*; A.S.C.E.*; A.C.S.*
- University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Ind.: Notre Dame Academy of Science; Chemists' Club; Engineering Society.
- University of Portland, Portland, Ore.: Biologists' Club, publication, quarterly, "The Biolog."
- University of San Francisco, San Francisco, Cal.: Bio-Chemical Club; Wasmann Club (Biology).
- University of Santa Clara, Santa Clara, Cal.: Astronomical, Meteorological and Seismological Observatory; Engineering Society; Mendel Club; Galtes Chemistry Society; A.I.E.E.*; A.S.C.E.*; A.S.M.E.*
- University of Scranton, Scranton, Pa.: Chemical Society; Physics Club.
- Villanova College, Villanova, Pa.: Phi Kappa Pi Engineering Fraternity; Lambda Kappa Delta Science Fraternity; Villanova Chemical Society; A.I.E.E.*; A.S.C.E.*; A.S.M.E.* Publications, "The Villanova Engineer" (monthly) and "Mendel Bulletin" (science quarterly).

*A.C.S.—Student Branch of the American Chemical Society.

*A.I.C.E.—Student Branch of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Radio

Radiotelegraphy has been used since the beginning of the twentieth century, principally by ships in communicating with other ships or with shore stations. It has served to make the science of navigation safer and more accurate in many ways. The exact time is always obtainable and exact bearings can be given to ships in fog by means of the direction-finding apparatus.

Radiotelephony became a reality in 1915 when through the research work of the engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company wire systems were used in connection with the radiotelephone. At first headphones were used, but since 1920 rapid improvements have been made. Service was opened up between New York and London, January 7, 1927. Direct transmissions from abroad are now obtained on radio sets equipped for short wave reception. So great has been the development of radio that today there are in the United States 915 licensed stations, 52 under construction and 60,000 receiving sets.

TELEVISION

A picture being televisioned is dissected, in sequence, into small areas which are transformed into varying electrical currents by means of a photo-electric cell. These currents are transmitted over a carrier wave and then transformed back again into a picture in the receiving set. The human eye, due to persistency of vision, is not sensitive to rapid changes in motion. If in a series, twenty pictures a second are reproduced, the eye will perceive a moving picture without a flicker. In the earlier television sets a scanning disc was employed. Due to many technical difficulties this apparatus has been replaced by the cathode-ray tube.

The Federal Communications Commission has assigned channels in the 6 to 3.5 meter band for television transmission. As the maximum range of these low waves is 75 miles, a number of transmitters would be needed to cover an extensive area. In the light of present knowledge this would be done through the use of the coaxial cable developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories in 1936, or by a series of automatic hill-top relay stations spaced ten to twenty miles apart, as worked out by the Radio Corporation of America.

Television sets must be accurately synchronized with the transmitter sending the program or images will be illegible. This means that any change in the method used in transmitting television signals requires a similar change in the receiver. Because of this, the Federal Communications Commission has insisted on the formulation of a set of standards under which all groups interested in television must operate.

In 1938 the Radio Manufacturers Association adopted standards to be applied to television. Among other items, the regulations specified that the term, "television receiver," is to be applied only to sets which receive the picture and accompanying sound as a unit. A "picture receiver with sound converter" is the term to be used when a television instrument re-creates only the image, with the sound reproduced by suitable attachment with a standard broadcast set.

The size of the picture produced on a home television set varies from the smallest, about 2 by 3 inches, to the largest, about 14 by 17 inches. Experimental models have been demonstrated in which the picture is thrown on a retractable screen 18 by 24 inches.

While natural static produces little interference with the television image and none with the accompanying sound, since the latter is now transmitted by FM, automobile ignition systems, diathermy devices and X-ray equipment cause considerable annoyance unless special arrangements can be made at the receiving end to overcome them.

During 1938 the National Broadcasting Company gave more than 125 satisfactory demonstrations of television broadcasts. The development of a mobile unit made possible a number of novel pickups out-of-doors, in addition to the studio shows. The N. B. C. commenced regular programming in the New York area in April, 1939, with two hours broadcasting scheduled for each week, and four or five hours of broadcasts each day at the New York World's Fair. The estimated cost of operating the broadcasting station, exclusive of talent costs, is $2,000 an hour. In 1941 the National Broadcasting Company exhibited the potentialities of radio by picking up scenes at Camp Upton, Long Island, and recreating them on a theatre-sized screen installed in the New Yorker Theatre. Well over a thousand guests applauded the accomplishment, as images of soldiers in action 68 miles distant appeared on the 10 foot by 15 foot surface.

The Columbia Broadcasting System took quarters for a television studio in the Grand Central Terminal, and has a transmitter for its television station, WCBW, in the nearby Chrysler tower. Tests were satisfactorily completed, and in 1941 telecast began a regular program schedule of several hours a week.

A third television transmitter, WABD, erected and operated by the A. B. Dumont Laboratories, is now operating a few hours a week from its location at 515 Madison Avenue, New York City.

Television in full color for practical broadcasting had its first successful laboratory demonstration in September, 1940. The system, invented by Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, gives a more pleasing lifelike and dramatic quality to the pictures, increases the apparent definition of the objects and makes small details easier to recognize. The method is comparatively simple, using only one camera at the pickup point, one transmitter and a receiver with only a single cathode-ray tube of conventional design. The color attachment for reproduction is comparatively inexpensive and can be fitted to the standard model receiver altered to a slight extent. The same frequency band width of  $4\frac{1}{4}$  megacycles is used and the scanning quality is 343, although experiments are under way to raise the line number to a point between 400 and 500. One of the most unique features of this color method is that it makes possible the reception of the picture either in full color for those receivers equipped with the color attachment or in black and white for the ones lacking it. Further experiment in this field has been slowed up because of the war.

HIGH LIGHTS IN THE HISTORY OF RADIO

In 1864, James Clerk Maxwell formulated the theory of electromagnetic waves radiating from oscillating charges and Hertz, in 1887, experimentally verified this theory. While working on the development of the incandescent lamp, Thomas A. Edison discovered that a feeble flow of electrons came from the heated filament. This phenomenon, which was first observed in 1883, is known as the "Edison Effect" and is the basis of operation of all vacuum tubes. Fleming made use of the "Edison Effect" and in 1904 developed the two element vacuum tube. In 1906, De Forest introduced a third element, a grid, to control the flow of electrons from the heated filament to the plate.

Marconi invented wireless telegraphy in 1895. He successfully sent a message across the English Channel in 1899, and spanned the Atlantic Ocean with wireless in 1901. In the early days of wireless telegraphy, communication was almost exclusively restricted to ships and shore stations.

The first wireless SOS was sent by the sinking transatlantic liner Republic in January, 1909.

The Congress of the United States was the first to recognize this aid to navigation, and in 1910 passed the Radio Act, which required wireless equipment and an operator on every deep sea vessel carrying more than 50 persons. In April, 1912, the Titanic sent out an SOS which was heard by the S. S. Carpathia. Though at a considerable distance from the stricken vessel the Carpathia arrived in time to save 706 lives. Another vessel, which was much nearer to the scene of the disaster and which was equipped with wireless apparatus, did not hear the call for help because the operator was off duty when the SOS call was sent out by the Titanic. Had there been another wireless operator on duty at that time, many of the 1,517 persons who perished might have been saved. As a result of this disaster Congress amended the Radio Act in 1912 and, among other requirements, it called for two wireless operators to be on constant duty while the vessel was on the high seas.

The first radio station, KDKA, was established for organized broadcasting on November 2, 1920. The first commercially sponsored program was broadcast from Station WEAf on September 7, 1922. The neutrodyne circuit was introduced by L. A. Hazeltine in March, 1923, and the superheterodyne receiver was demonstrated in March, 1924, by Edwin H. Armstrong. The first multiple station broadcast of Stations WEAf of New York City, WGY of Schenectady, KDKA of Pittsburgh, and KYW of Chicago was made in June, 1923. The first international program was sent from Coventry, England, to Houlton, Me., thence by telephone wires to Station WJZ, New York City, in March, 1924.

The A. C. Vacuum tubes were introduced in August, 1925. The National Broadcasting Company was organized on November 1, 1926. The first coast-to-coast broadcasting hook-up was used to broadcast the Rose Bowl football game, on January 1, 1927. Transatlantic radio-telephone service was opened between New York and London on January 7, 1927. The Federal Radio Commission was appointed on March 2, 1927. This Radio Commission provided for the assignment of wave-lengths and the regulation of broadcasting stations. The Columbia Broadcasting System was organized in September, 1927. The first transatlantic television transmission was made on February 8, 1928, by John L. Baird. The Cathode Ray television receiver was demonstrated by V. K. Zworykin in 1929.

The Vatican City Station HVJ transmitted for the first time, February 12, 1921, carrying Pope Pius XI's voice, through an international broadcast, around the world. The Metropolitan Opera House, on December 25, 1931, presented an opera, "Hansel and Gretel," for the first time by radio. The Mutual Broadcasting System was organized September 30, 1934. The Bell Telephone announced the development of a Coaxial Cable for television in 1936. The Electron Projection Gun, which projects a television picture 8 x 10 feet, on a screen, was demonstrated by V. K. Zworykin and R. R. Law in 1937. A foghorn synchronized to operate with radio signals was developed by the U. S. Lighthouse Service to provide the means of determining a vessel's distance, as well as the direction from a lighthouse, in 1937.

In 1938 there was a great increase in the size of the networks. The Canadian Transcontinental Network was hooked up with the United States Networks.

On March 2, 1939, a waiting world heard the announcement from Vatican City that His Eminence Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli had been elected Pope by the Conclave, and had chosen the name Pius XII. Within a few moments, after this announcement had been made, the world was thrilled in hearing Pius XII bestow his blessing from the balcony of the Basilica of St. Peter. On March 12, 1939, the Columbia, Mutual and National Broadcasting Companies broadcast the complete ceremony of the coronation of Pius XII.

When Germany invaded Poland on September 1, 1939, plans already worked out by American broadcasters were set in motion to reach the theatres of war wherever they might be. N. B. C. and C. B. S. arranged for combination trans-oceanic short-wave circuits and land lines to bring first-hand descriptions of military actions to American listeners. Rulers and other high officials spoke with ever-increasing frequency into microphones tied in with American stations. The world was closer together than ever before.

By the beginning of 1940, news broadcasts from foreign lands were reaching new highs. Newscasts in 1940 increased 251 per cent over 1939 in the case of N.B.C. and to a comparable degree on C.B.S. In its annual year-end report, N.B.C. announced that it had brought 1,742 programs from foreign countries, compared to 695 the previous year.

During the same period, according to N.B.C., Winston Churchill's addresses were brought to this country seven times; Adolph Hitler's only twice. Among the special features which attracted listeners were Mussolini's dramatic declaration of war on England and France, and, later, the signing of the Franco-German armistice terms in a wagon-lit deep in the forests of Compiegne. Late in 1942 came the broadcast describing America's first peace-time draft drawing in Washington.

Networks continued to expand as listeners demanded to hear the outstanding programs offered by C.B.S. and N.B.C. The latter's combined Red and Blue chains added 40 outlets alone, bringing their total to 220 stations.

At the end of 1940, N.B.C. announced that it had received over one million letters from listeners keenly interested in the religious programs broadcast by representatives of all faiths.

In 1941, with the war expanding rapidly into both hemispheres, the time and facilities allotted to newscasts from or near the fighting fronts and from the seats of all governments concerned with the war, increased from month to month. By the end of the year, N.B.C. had broadcast over 3,000 newscasts by its 40 foreign correspondents. This was the year also when the Good Neighbor policy began to take tangible form. Both major network organizations contributed their share of aid in this project intended to bring the peoples of the Americas closer together. N.B.C.'s Pan American network was formed in 1941 with 109 outlets below the Rio Grande and far into Central and South America. A constant flow of programs from and to the United States helped to cement relations between the two Americas.

Visitors to New York continued to make Radio City one of their chief points of interest. Records compiled for 1941 showed that over two million guests had witnessed broadcasts in the spacious N.B.C. studios of Radio City. Hundreds of thousands of other visitors used the guided tours to watch the wheels of radio and television move in their spectacular ways.

It was in 1941 that television, long considered merely an experimental venture, became a commercial industry. Television station W2XBS, atop the lofty Empire State tower, dropped its experimental license on July 1 and, in its place, acquired the right to accept sponsored television programs using new call letters of WNBT. WNBT thus became the first commercial television station in New York City.

With the extent of listening constantly on the increase, Americans found the number of broadcast stations growing in the same degree. Compared to 1922 when the United States had but 30 radio stations, the year 1942 showed a total of 923 ethereal voices. These stations served an estimated audience of well over 125,000,000 persons. On January 1, 1942, reliable surveys indicated a total of 30,300,000 homes equipped with radios and several million automobiles equipped to receive programs. Because many homes had more than one radio, the total number of sets in use were said to be 60,000,000, at the beginning of this year.

The new high quality system of radio transmission invented by Major Edwin H. Armstrong and called by him Frequency Modulation, has kept in step with the expansion of standard radio broadcasting. The former is known familiarly as FM; the latter as AM, meaning amplitude modulation. From the inventor's pioneer FM station W2XMN, located atop the Palisades near Alpine, N. J., the new system expanded rapidly in the eastern part of the country. By mid-1942 more than two score of FM stations were operating on schedules that varied from a few hours a day to full time. Many manufacturers, visioning the growth of a demand for high quality FM reproduction brought out special receivers for this purpose. The FM audience continued to grow and might have become an important factor in broadcasting if the scarcity of certain materials had not led to the War Production Board order of March 22, to cease manufacture of all radio receivers. FM programs are transmitted on waves from 6 to 7½ meters in length. Television stations utilize the still shorter waves of 3½ to 6 meters.

Facsimile, the radio printing press, which transmits texts or pictures by wire or over the air, went into commercial operation between Los Angeles and New York in 1941.

The Electron Microscope, developed from the radio practice of Dr. Zworykin, made great strides in 1941. This instrument magnifies fifty times more than the best optical microscope. There are about 15 of them in use in different laboratories.

CATHOLIC RADIO WORK IN THE UNITED STATES

(Courtesy of N. C. C. M.)

Regular weekly Catholic broadcasts were heard over individual stations in the United States as early as 1923, not long after the beginning of organized broadcasting. These grew in number in the seven years following, many of them being broadcast over Catholic stations. But it was not until 1929 that the first regular network program was put on the air under Catholic auspices. This was the Catholic Truth Period, begun by the Rev. M. J. Ahern, S. J., over the N.B.C. Yankee Network in New England. This has been on the air each year since under the same direction. It is now broadcast over stations of the Yankee Network.

The following year the nationwide Catholic Hour was begun over the N.B.C. Red Network by the National Council of Catholic Men, and it has been on the air continuously every Sunday with the exception of one Sunday in 1931, which was given over to an address by the President of the United States. The broadcast's starting time and network have remained the same throughout twelve years on the air—six o'clock, Eastern War Time. The Catholic Hour is now broadcast by more than 100 stations in the United States and Hawaii.

The C.B.S. Church of the Air was inaugurated in 1931. This program presents speakers of different religious faiths, Protestant, Jewish and Catholic, on different Sundays throughout the year. In 1937 a second program of the same type was added, the morning program going on the air at 10:00 a. m., E. S. T., and the afternoon at 1:00 p. m., E. S. T. Approximately one Catholic program is included in each division each month, and is broadcast by about 65 stations.

The Ave Maria program was begun in 1935 by the Franciscan Friars of the Atonement at Graymoor, Garrison, N. Y., and is carried at present by a network of 7 stations in the East. These broadcasts are dramatizations of lives of the saints. The "live" Ave Maria program is heard over 7 stations.

The Sacred Heart Program, daily broadcast originating from Station WEW, St. Louis, Mo., and directed by the Rev. Eugene P. Murphy, S. J., numbers 9,000,000 listeners and is heard over 85 stations from coast to coast and in Alaska.

Other "live" programs are the Rosary Hour, a full hour broadcast heard during 20 weeks of the year over a network of 17 stations extending from Massachusetts to Illinois; and the Cathedral Hour, a 15-minute broadcast each week over 3 Arizona stations. The Rosary Hour is broadcast in the Polish language. The Cathedral Hour is a children's program written and produced by Fr. Don Hughes of Tucson, Ariz.

Electrically transcribed programs have been coming to the fore in recent years. Transcriptions are made of the "live" Ave Maria program which are distributed throughout the country and broadcast over 164 stations weekly. Boys Town, Omaha, Neb., produces a transcribed program centering about the activities of Boys Town which is broadcast over approximately 264 stations. Rev. Richard Felix, O. S. B., of Conception, Mo., director of the Defenders of the Faith, produces and distributes the transcribed series, Highway to Heaven. The National Council of Catholic Men has produced a number of transcribed addresses by Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen and other Catholic Hour speakers which local organizations are able to sponsor at nominal cost.

A survey made by the National Council of Catholic Men shows that there are 52 quarter-hour local Catholic "live" broadcasts initiated weekly throughout the country; 60 half-hour broadcasts; 12 full hour broadcasts; and 28 broadcasts extending for miscellaneous periods.

A special series of Holy Week dramatizations has been offered for several years by the National Council of Catholic Men, originally as a "live" program, now in the form of transcriptions. These are dramatizations of a script entitled "The Living God," played by a professional Hollywood cast and broadcast over as many as 239 stations.

There are a number of Catholic college workshops in operation, notably at Catholic University, Washington, D. C.; Fordham University in New York; Loyola University in Los Angeles; Immaculata College, Immaculata, Pa.; St. Bonaventure's College, St. Bonaventure, N. Y.; Loras College, Dubuque, Iowa; and St. Benedict's College in Atchison, Kans. In addition there are many Catholic colleges that have produced a series or more of programs over their local stations, and offer one or more courses in radio.

A Catholic Radio Bureau was organized in November, 1938, by the National Council of Catholic Men as a service to Catholics interested in the work. It is the aim of the Bureau to assist them in their relations with the station manager, in securing time for a program, to help in deciding on the type of program and its chief features, to help in the production of the program, to operate a Catholic script library, to serve as a means of contact for Catholic radio groups and to act as a clearing-house for information helpful to Catholic broadcasters. A "Memorandum on Producing Catholic Radio Programs," which contains helpful information along these lines, has been issued by the Bureau and may be secured from the N. C. C. M. on request.

The Catholic Hour

The nation-wide Catholic Hour, now grown to be the world's largest regular religious radio broadcast, was inaugurated on March 2, 1930, by the National Council of Catholic Men and the National Broadcasting Company jointly. The inaugural program was carried on 22 stations associated with the National Broadcasting Company, and this number has now grown to 104, located throughout the United States and Hawaii, and including one short-wave station. The program can be received regularly by short wave in almost any part of the Western World and the National Council of Catholic Men reports that it has received letters from listeners as far away as the Falkland Islands, Nigeria, Turkey, Alaska and Australia. The N. C. C. M. produces the program in its entirety, and attends to all administrative details, etc. N.B.C. and its associated stations co-operate by providing studio facilities and radio service.

The program, originally of one hour's duration, now lasts only a half-hour and consists of an eighteen-minute address, ten minutes of choral music, and announcements. Each speaker delivers a series of addresses in sequence, some of the series continuing through as many as seventeen weeks. The subjects are usually doctrinal, moral, or historical. The priest-speakers are chosen from many sections of the country by a special committee established by the National Council of Catholic Men.

Music is provided by a choral group associated with the famous Paulist choristers.

The Catholic Hour elicits mail response to the extent of about 16,000 letters per month averaged throughout the year. The National Council of Catholic Men estimates that about 20 per cent of these are from non-Catholics, and that less than one-half of one percent are adversely critical. Hundreds of people have been brought into and back to the Church through its instrumentality.

An innovation for the Catholic Hour was begun in the series of programs given during January, February, and March, 1940, by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen. Beginning his series with a plea for a return to God and to the spirit of prayer, he offered free on request a small "Prayer Book for Our Times," which he prepared in co-operation with St. Anthony's Guild of Paterson, N. J. There were 35,000 listeners who responded to that call, and when the series was ended on Easter Sunday the number had swelled to more than 300,000. The N. C. C. M. office alone distributed 323,000 of the prayer books.

A comparable supplementary booklet has been prepared by Msgr. Sheen each year since and offered free of charge to the radio audience.

THE CHURCH'S STAND ON CAPITAL AND LABOR

Thoughts from the Encyclical "Quadragesimo Anno" of Pope Pius XI
("Forty Years" after the "Rerum Novarum" of Pope Leo XIII)

The Industrial Revolution created both the privileged capitalist class and the oppressed laboring class.

Charity—The capitalist has not desired a fair distribution of profits but has consigned the wretched laborer to the good offices of charity.

Industrial Reform — The undeservedly miserable laborer has agitated, sometimes wisely, sometimes unwisely, for the reform of industry.

Unjust Distribution — Catholic priests and laymen were quickly convinced that the unjust distinction in the distribution of wealth was an evil.

Exploitation of Labor—Pope Leo XIII espoused the cause of the working man, who had long been exploited by cruel employers and greedy competition.

Modern Social and Economic Problems — Today modern economics must be arraigned; Socialism must be examined; the root of the present social disorder must be exposed; the cure must be indicated —and that is a reform of Christian morals.

Work of the Church—Pope Leo insisted on the authority of the Gospel to end or make conflicts less bitter. The Church enlightens and directs the mind and improves and betters the condition of the working man by approving working men's organizations. The Church awakened the down-trodden working man with a sense of his true dignity. Institutions were founded for the assistance and support of labor.

Importance of Catholic Teachings —Whether consciously or not, the teachings of Pope Leo came to be used by the whole world, particularly after the World War. Many underestimate the importance of Pope Leo's doctrine, but thereby they show their own ignorance or ingratitude.

Duties of the State — Pope Leo reminded the State that it has the duty of insuring public and private prosperity and demanded that the State give special protection to the needy wage-earner rather than extend privilege to the capitalist.

Rights of Labor — Pope Leo taught that the rights of the laborer spring from his dignity as a man and as a Christian and concern the soul, the health and strength of the body, the housing, workshops, wages, dangerous occupations, risks, etc.

Unions of Employers and Employees — Pope Leo held that organizations of working men and employers would bring the two classes closer together and would aid in alleviating distress.

Liberalism Denounced—Pope Leo denounced Liberalism which permits capitalists to organize in corporations, etc., but denies laborers the right to unite.

Trades Unions Approved — Pope Leo encouraged the formation of trades unions, with religious background if possible, in opposition to socialist organizations whereby respect for justice and collaboration is lost.

Employers' Associations — Pope Leo proposed associations of employers for the common good but, so far, little has been done to meet his proposal.

Rights of the Church—It is the right of the Church to deal authoritatively with social and economic problems whenever they interfere with moral conduct.

Private Property—Pope Leo defended the right of private property against Socialism but this does not mean that the Church upholds the wealthier classes against the proletariat.

Defense of Private Ownership — The abolition of private ownership would not be beneficial but grievously harmful to the working classes.

Purpose of Private Ownership — The right to own private property has been given by God Himself so that individuals may provide for their own needs and the needs of their families.

Character of Ownership — The right of ownership is twofold, i.e., individual and social. Too much stress on one or the other leads to the evils of individualism and collectivism.

Distinction of Right and Use — The right of private property must be distinguished from its use. The misuse of the privilege of ownership does not destroy the principle of ownership.

Defining Private Possession—The defining of private possession has been left by God to man's own industry and to the laws of individual people. The right to possess private property is derived from the Author of nature, not from man.

Rights of the State—The State has no right to abolish the institution of private property but only the right to control its use in harmony with the public good.

Superfluous Income — Those with superfluous income have the obligation of using it for charity.

Interdependence of Capital and Labor — Capital cannot do without labor, nor labor without capital. It is flagrantly unjust for one or the other to seize all the profits of production.

Unjust Claims of Capital—Capital has unjustly claimed all the products and profits and has left only a minimum of subsistence to labor.

Unjust Claims of Labor — Labor also has unjustly claimed all products and profits except what is necessary for the repair of capital. It is to be understood that the laborer has not the right to the full product of his toil.

Proper Distribution of Wealth — Wealth produced should be distributed for the common good among individuals and classes of people. The proletariat must be uplifted from hand-to-mouth uncertainty. A just share of the profits should go to capital but an amply sufficient share should be given to labor, with which, by thrift and good management, the family burdens may be borne with greater ease.

Enterprise, capital and labor must combine to produce; all three deserve a share in the fruits of industry, not only one.

Danger of Revolution — Unless proletarian conditions are improved, human society cannot be defended from the forces of revolution.

Property for Laborers—The propertyless laborer should be enabled to acquire some property.

Wage Contracts—Partnerships — It is an error to say that wage contracts are unjust, but it is desirable under modern conditions that some form of partnership be used so that wage earners may participate in ownership, management or profits.

Just Wage—A just wage must be sufficient to support the laborer and his family. Others in the family should contribute to its maintenance, but tender children and women, particularly mothers, should not be forced to seek work outside the home. Every effort must be made to enable fathers of families to receive a sufficient wage. If this is not possible in the present state of society, reforms should be introduced to guarantee such a wage.

Unjust Wages—It is unjust to demand wages so high that an employer cannot pay them without ruin to himself or ultimate harm to employees.

Unjust Wage Cuts—But if business makes smaller profits on account of bad management, the want of enterprise or out-of-date methods, that is not a just reason for reducing the working man's wages. It is unjust to lower or raise wages for private profit without considering the common good.

Unjust Burdens—If business does not make enough money to pay a just wage on account of unjust burdens or competition, those who force business into such straits are to blame.

Harmony between Capital and Labor—Employers and employees should join to overcome difficulties and obstacles.

Savings—It is conducive to the common good that wage earners save a portion of their wages so as to attain a certain modest fortune.

Employment—Opportunity for work should be provided for those who are willing and able to work.

Wage Scales—A scale of wages too low as well as one too high, causes unemployment.

Unemployment—Widespread and lengthy unemployment is a dreadful scourge, causing misery and temptation to the laborer, the ruin of prosperity in nations and the endangering of public order, peace and tranquillity.

Individualism and the State—The State should interfere to correct the evils of individualism. It is the duty of the State to abolish conflict between classes and to promote harmony between the various ranks of society.

Labor Not a Commodity—Since the human dignity of the working man must be recognized in labor, labor is not a chattel or a commodity for sale.

Occupational Groups—Instead of subjecting labor to the commodity law of supply and demand, laborers should organize themselves into occupational groups. The Occupational Group system is the organizing of the members of the same trade or occupation. This is similar to the Guild system of the Middle Ages.

Labor Unions—Laborers have the right to create or join unions and adopt rules for the attainment of their objects.

Laissez-faire—Economic affairs cannot be left to free competition alone. The individualistic ideal that the State should keep hands off industry is a dangerous doctrine.

Monopoly—Monopoly must be controlled by social justice. Social justice may be defined as that virtue (of justice) by which the members of a society perform all actions necessary for attaining or maintaining the common good of that society, and direct all their conduct in right relation to that same common good.

International Pacts—Since nations are dependent, one upon the other, economic cooperation should be promoted by prudent pacts and institutions.

Corporations—Syndicates—Syndical and corporative organizations under public control are advantageous in preventing strikes and lock-outs and in repressing Socialism but they have the risk of becoming bureaucratic and political unless actuated by Catholic principles.

Economic Domination of a Few—Free competition has been superseded during the last forty years by the concentration of great power and economic domination in the hands of a few, such as trustees and directors of invested funds. These few are able to govern credit and determine its allotment, thus holding in their hands the soul of production.

Survival of the Strongest—Limitless free competition has resulted in the survival of the strongest, who very often are not the most just.

Results of Economic Dominations—This concentration of economic power has led to a struggle for economic dictatorship, a struggle for the control of the State so that its resources and authority might be abused, and finally to a clash between states over economic matters.

Politics and Economics—States have used their power and political influence to promote the economic advantage of their citizens; economic forces have insisted on deciding political controversies.

Economic Dictatorship — Free competition is dead; economic dictatorship has taken its place. Economic life has become hard, cruel and relentless.

Imperialism — The State, which should be supreme, has become a slave to human passion and greed. A detestable imperialism holds that where a man's fortune is, there is his country.

Public Authority—Free competition and economic domination must be subjected to public authority which should seek public good.

Socialism Divided — Within the past forty years Socialism has been divided into two hostile groups, both of which however, oppose the Christian faith.

Communism—One group has degenerated into Communism which pursues a merciless class warfare and aims to abolish private ownership. It is cruel and relentless when in power. All care should be taken to prevent the propagation of Communist doctrines and to prevent conditions which so discourage people that they will welcome the change offered by Communism.

Moderate Socialism—Less radical is the other section of Socialism which condemns recourse to physical force and mitigates the program of class warfare and abolition of private property. Its recent programs often approach the ideal of Christian reform. This group, however, has not rejected class warfare and the abolition of private property but has merely become more moderate in these matters. It is vain to meet Socialism half way. Socialism must accept Christian truths wholeheartedly before it can be called Christian.

Just Demands of Socialism—Socialists should be convinced that their just demands are defended by Christian faith and promoted by Christian charity.

Socialism and the Church—Many have questioned whether that form of Socialism which has retracted false doctrines can be accepted by the Church.

Christianity Opposes Socialism—Whether Socialism is considered as a doctrine, a historical fact or a movement, if it really remains Socialism, it cannot be brought into harmony with the Church because it conceives human society in a way utterly alien to Christian truth.

Christian Doctrine—Teaches that man is placed on earth to develop his faculties for the praise and glory of God, so that he may attain temporal and eternal happiness.

Socialist Doctrine — Socialism holds that man lives on earth simply for his own material advantage and that for the better production of wealth, man must surrender his individuality and submit to the dictates of a society dedicated to the production of wealth.

Temporal Goods—The acquisition of temporal goods is so highly esteemed by Socialists that they would sacrifice other greater goods, such as liberty, therefor; they would replace human dignity with material abundance.

Socialist Authority — A Socialist society is impossible without the use of excessive compulsion. Socialist authority is based on the need for the acquisition of wealth, not on the authority of God.

"Religious Socialism" and "Christian Socialism" are contradictions in terms. No one can be at the same time a sincere Catholic and a true Socialist.

Cultural Socialism, likewise to be avoided, was born of Liberalism; its offspring will be Bolshevism.

Church Does Not Favor the Rich—Many Catholics have joined socialistic organizations, giving as their excuse that the Church favors the rich and neglects the working man. This is an unjust charge, as the encyclical of Pope Leo XIII proves. Those who have wandered astray are earnestly besought to return to the Church.

Social Reconstruction, to be effective, must be preceded by moral renovation. If society is to be healed, it must return to Christian life and Christian institutions.

Christianity Opposes Greed — Christianity alone supplies the remedy for the excessive solicitude for transitory things, which is the origin of all vices.

Violation of Law—The unquenchable thirst for riches and temporal possessions has caused men to break the law of God and violate the rights of their neighbors.

Evil Consciences—The uncertainty of economic conditions demands the keenest and most unceasing straining of energy with the result that some have become so hardened against the stings of conscience as to hold all means good which enable them to increase their profits and safeguard the wealth amassed by unremitting toil against the sudden changes of fortune.

Speculation — The easy returns possible from speculation have appealed to the greed for gain thereby, resulting in unchecked speculation, whereby prices have been raised and lowered.

Corporations—Abominable abuses have arisen in corporations. Injustices and frauds have taken place where boards of directors violate their trusts as regards the savings they administer

Rationalism—Civil authority could have averted these evils, but rationalism, which disregards moral law, had permeated civil authority and gave free reign to avarice.

Workers Used as Tools — As business leaders fell into evil, workingmen followed them, particularly as many employers treated workers as mere tools, without considering the welfare of their souls.

Moral Perils in Factories — Boys and young men, girls and women are exposed in factories to frightful perils to morals.

Family Life Ruined—The present economic regime and the resulting disgraceful housing conditions have proven obstacles to family ties and family life.

Daily Bread—Instead of the true Christian spirit, man's one aim has been to obtain his daily bread as best he can.

Labor's Perversion—Bodily labor, which was decreed for the good of man's body and soul, has been changed into an instrument of strange perversion.

New Economic Order—Economic life must be rationalized but it will be faulty and imperfect unless based on the divine plan.

Divine Plan—God is the supreme end of all created activity; all created goods are merely instruments leading to God. God has placed man upon earth to work and use it for his own needs.

Fortunes—Those engaged in production are not forbidden to increase their fortunes in a lawful and just manner.

Proportionate Share of Wealth—He who serves society and develops its wealth should be given a proportionate share of the increased public riches, provided he respects the law of God and the rights of his neighbor.

Justice and Charity—Justice can remove the cause of social strife but it is left to charity to bring a union of hearts and minds. In the absence of charity, the wisest regulations come to nothing.

Charity and the Laborer—Under charity the rich and powerful will change their former negligence of their poorer brethren into solicitous and effective regard. Under charity working men will lay aside all feelings of hatred or envy, will become proud of their positions and work usefully and honorably for the common good, following Christ, Who chose to become a carpenter.

Paganism — We are confronted with a world which has almost fallen back into paganism. Working men who have denied Christ must be won back to Him.

Social Studies—An intense study of social matters, Christian training in youth, and spiritual exercises are necessary to enable Christians to solve the problems of the day.

Catholic Program — As resolute disciples are selected by evil men to spread false doctrines and to oppose the Church, Catholics must also resolutely teach the true doctrine and oppose evil.

SPORTS

The Catholic Church has always approved of legitimate recreation as an honest pursuit of a living, and she has found in it a powerful aid in the character formation of youth and also an occasion for mental training. The love for such sports as baseball and football developed in youth has led some of our finest Catholic men to seek their living on the baseball diamond and to win fame on the gridiron.

The Catholic Youth Organization

The Catholic Youth Organization, popularly known as the C. Y. O., was founded in Chicago in 1930 by the Most Rev. Bernard J. Shiel, Senior Auxiliary Bishop of Chicago. Its existence is the result of Bishop Shiel's personal observations and experiences. Bishop Shiel, as a young priest and chaplain at the Old Cook County Jail, became profoundly impressed by the need of a program of recreational activities, organized under Church auspices, that would keep the youth from the pitfalls of delinquency.

The primary purpose of the C. Y. O. is to assist in saving souls by bringing them closer to the Church through the medium of a balanced program of leisure-time activities. These programs are properly organized, reasonably controlled and carefully supervised. The various activities are classified as: spiritual, cultural, social and physical. They are the media of bringing Catholic youth under the proper Catholic influence and into the proper environment during their leisure time, thereby assuring the preservation of faith and morals. This purpose is attained by keeping young people learning, working and playing within the influence of their respective parish priests in the hope that personal associations of this nature during youth's formative years will help them to live a true Christian and democratic life.

The objectives of the C. Y. O. are:

"To restore all things to Christ.

"To promote youth activity under Catholic auspices.

"To supplement the work of the home and the school.

"To develop and extend the scope of Catholic Action.

"To influence the community by establishing a recreational program with specific ideals.

"To build physically, culturally and socially.

"To develop a better American citizenry."

His Eminence, the late Cardinal Mundelein, said in his advice to the C. Y. O. officials: "Adopt a program of recreation so adequate, interesting and attractive that youth will have a desire to participate in none other." With this as a goal, more than fifty per cent of the dioceses of the United States have established a C. Y. O. program.

The C. Y. O. is largely publicized in athletics. This, a just and an incidental branch of its purpose, keeps youth entertained in leisure and desired activity. The priests teach true Christian sportsmanship and develop the body along with the soul. To achieve the desired results in each diocese much remains to be accomplished. The Diocese of Newark in 1941 held the first national C. Y. O. basketball tournament at Seton Hall College. This is to be continued and, no doubt, to be augmented by others.

The reason for the success of the C. Y. O. program is that the organization is divided into parish units each giving the youth of its scope the desired training it needs and attending to each situation directly.

The influence of the Catholic Youth Organization is shown in the youth of the past decade now grown to maturity and serving God and country unflinchingly.

Members of the C. Y. O. take the following Pledge of Catholic Sportsmanship:

"I promise upon my honor to be loyal to my God, to my Country and to my Church; to be faithful and true to all my obligations as a Christian, a Man and a Citizen. I pledge myself to live a clean, honest and upright life — to avoid profane, obscene and vulgar language, and to induce others to avoid it. I bind myself to promote, by word and example, clean, wholesome and manly sport, I will strive earnestly to be a man of whom my Church and my Country may be justly proud."

VATICAN CITY

Vatican City comprises an area of 108.7 acres, which includes the Vatican Palace, Museums, Art Galleries, Library, Observatory and Gardens, St. Peter's and neighboring buildings between the Basilica and Viale Vaticano. In Rome thirteen buildings, including the three major basilicas, certain other churches and houses necessary for Congregations and officials connected with the administration of the Holy See, enjoy extra-territorial rights. The population is 953, including 800 Italians and 100 Swiss.

Vatican City has telegraphic, telephonic and postal services placed at its disposal by the Italian government, issues its own stamps and coins, and has a radio station and a 600-foot double track railroad extending from an Italian railway to the Vatican Gardens. The summer residence is at Castel Gandolfo, on Lake Albano, 15 miles from Rome.

The legal system is based on Canon Law, and there is a court of first instance for civil and criminal cases. The administration was entrusted by Pope Pius XII to a commission of cardinals: Cardinal Canali, president, Cardinal Pizzardo and Cardinal Mariani.

The Papal States, comprising 16,000 square miles, were seized by the Italian government in 1871, and the sovereignty of the Pope confined to the Vatican, where successive Pontiffs lived as voluntary prisoners until by the Lateran Treaty in 1929 Vatican City was established as an independent state.

GREAT WARS AND THEIR CAUSES

To come to any solution of the problem of reaching the ideal of enduring peace, and of outlawing war, it is essential to know the causes of war. Great wars of history with their causes are here tabulated:

Trojan War (1200 B. C.). The Greeks avenge the capture of Helen of Troy by Paris.

First Messenian War (800 B. C.). The Spartans take Messenian land.

Second Messenian War (630-600 B. C.). The Messenians of southern Greece revolt against Spartan oppression. Sparta is victorious and further degrades the Messenians by making them serfs.

First Sacred War (590 B. C.). The Greek cities unite in the Amphictyonic League against citizens of Crisa who oppress pilgrims enroute to the oracle at Delphi.

Third and Fourth Persian Wars (481-479 B. C.). The Persians under Xerxes desire to avenge former defeats at the hands of the Greeks. The Greeks are victorious and put an end to Persian invasions.

Third Messenian War (464-456 B. C.). The Messenians again revolt against Spartan oppression. They are crushed and banished from their homes in southern Greece.

Peloponnesian War (431-404 B. C.). Envious Spartans crush Athens.

Second Sacred War (356-346 B. C.). Phocians seize and plunder Delphi because the Amphictyonic league claims hegemony and imposes fines. Members of Amphictyonic league seek the aid of Philip of Macedon, who takes their place.

Third Sacred War (339-338 B. C.). Philip of Macedon, feeling powerful after settling religious disputes, takes over Greece as his own.

Samnite Wars (343-290 B. C.). The Samnites and Romans fight for supremacy in Italy. The Romans win.

Wars of Alexander the Great (334-328 B. C.). Alexander conquers Asia as far as Indus River and spreads Western civilization to the East. At his death his empire breaks up.

Rome vs. Tarentum and Epirus (282-272 B. C.). Rome resents the insults of Tarentum and her ally, Epirus, and takes over their government.

First Punic War (264-241 B. C.). The Romans and Carthaginians struggle for supremacy in Sicily. Carthage is forced to give up Sicily and pay a war indemnity.

Second Punic War (218-201 B. C.). The Romans and Carthaginians fight to the finish. Carthage is forced to give up Spain, pay tribute, surrender her fleet and agree not to fight without Rome's permission.

Macedonian Wars (214-146 B. C.). Philip of Macedon becomes an ally of Carthage and Macedonia is conquered by Rome.

Third Punic War (149-146 B. C.). Carthage wages war with Massinissa, whereupon Rome destroys Carthage and makes her territory a Roman province.

Jugurthine War (111-105 B. C.). Jugurtha of Numidia shows contempt for Roman intervention, whereupon his country is divided.

Social War (91-88 B. C.). Italian Allies demand Roman citizenship and fight for it.

Mithradatic Wars (88-64 B. C.). Rome interferes with the ambition of Mithradites VI and makes Pontus, Syria and Cilicia Roman provinces.

Gladiatorial War (73-71 B. C.). A band of gladiators revolt against Rome.

Gallic War (58-51 B. C.). Caesar conquers Gaul and enlarges the Roman Empire.

Roman Civil War (49-41 B. C.). Caesar, conqueror of Gaul, and Pompey struggle for supremacy in Rome. Caesar is appointed dictator and is assassinated. His friends conquer Caesar's enemies and place Octavius, Caesar's grand-nephew, on the throne as emperor.

Jewish War (66-70 A. D.). The Jews revolt against Roman domination. Jerusalem and the temple are destroyed.

Dacian Wars (86-107 A. D.). Rome desires to conquer and rule Dacia.

Civil Wars of Roman Empire (193-194 A. D.). The Roman Barack Emperors fight for the throne until Diocletian arranges for a method of succession.

Wars of Constantine (310-323 A. D.). Constantine establishes himself as sole ruler of Rome.

Wars of Justinian (533-534 A. D.). Justinian, Emperor of the East, tries to restore the West under his rule.

Wars of the Franks (486-814 A. D.). The Franks desire to extend their territory ending with the restoration of the Holy Roman Empire under Charlemagne.

Heptarchic Wars in England (588-828 A. D.). The struggle among seven Teutonic kingdoms for supremacy in England, ending with rule of Egbert, King of Wessex.

Mohammedan Wars (622-A. D.—). The Mohammedans try unsuccessfully to conquer and convert the Western world.

The Crusades (1096-1270 A. D.). The oppressions of Mohammedans and Turks caused Christian nations to fight for the restoration of the Holy Places.

War of the Empire (1158-1183). Barbarossa unsuccessfully attempts to restore his rule over north Italy.

Wars of the English Barons (1215-1265). The misrule of the English king reduces his authority.

Hundred Years' War (1339-1453). England engages France in a contest for the title of French land.

Austro-Swiss War (1315-1388). The Hapsburgs oppress Switzerland; the Swiss gain their freedom.

Wars of the Roses (1455-1485). Two families fight for the throne in England.

Italian Wars (1494-1529). Claimants for thrones of Naples and Milan fight for them.

French Religious Wars (1562-1598). Oppressed Protestants seek and gain equality.

Liberation of the Netherlands (1568-1648). The tyranny of Spain is overthrown.

Thirty Years' War (1618-1648). Protestants and Catholics fight for supremacy in Europe.

English Civil War (1642-1649). The oppression of Charles I is contested by Parliament, resulting in his death and the establishment of a commonwealth under Cromwell.

Wars of Louis XIV (1667-1697). The French king is desirous of fame and more power.

War of the Spanish Succession (1701-1714). A contest over the successor to the Spanish throne.

Northern War (1700-1701). Russia joins Poland, Denmark and Saxony in taking Baltic Sea lands from Sweden.

War of the Austrian Succession (1740-1748). Austria, Hungary, England and Holland unite against Prussia, France, Spain, and Bavaria for sea power.

Seven Years' War, or French and Indian War (1756-1763). England fights for Canada, for supremacy in India and in the West Indies.

American Revolution (1775-1783). Infringements on local rights cause the colonies to revolt against England. They are aided by France.

French Revolution (1792-1802). The deposition of the French king gives control to the people, who, glutted with blood, finally accept Napoleon as their ruler.

Napoleonic Wars (1802-1815). The ambition of Napoleon leads him to seek world dominion. At his defeat, France is restored to its former boundaries.

War of 1812 (1812-1814). The United States and Great Britain fight over neutral trade aggressions.

War of Grecian Independence (1821-1829). Turkey is forced to acknowledge independence of Greece.

Mexican War (1846-1848). A boundary dispute with Mexico gives the United States territory north of the Rio Grande and Gila Rivers.

Crimean War (1854-1856). Turkey, aided by Great Britain, France and Sardinia, prevents a Russian protectorate over Greek Christians.

Sepoy Mutiny (1857-1858). The Sepoy mutiny causes India to pass under British rule.

War of Italian Liberation (1859). Italy is unified under Victor Emmanuel.

American Civil War (1861-1865). The Union is preserved and slaves freed under President Lincoln.

Danish War (1864). Denmark is forced to give up Schleswig Holstein to Austria and Prussia.

Austro-Prussian War (1866). Austria is forced to give up German territories.

Franco-Prussian War (1870-1871). France engages Prussia in war and loses Alsace-Lorraine.

Russo-Turkish War (1877-1878). Because of Turkish barbarism, Russia fights Turkey and secures indemnity as well as the formation of the independent states, Montenegro, Serbia, Rumania, and the recognition of a Christian Bulgaria.

Chinese - Japanese War (1894-1895). A dispute over claims to Korea ends with Japan taking Korea and Formosa.

Spanish-American War (1898). Inhuman Spanish tactics in Cuba cause United States to assume sovereignty in Cuba, Philippines, Puerto Rico and Guam.

Boer War (1899-1902). The Boers rebel against the British government in Transvaal but join in Union of South Africa under Britain.

Russo-Japanese War (1904-1905). Russian encroachments cause a war which ends with Korea going to Japan, Manchuria back to China, and Japan receiving railroad rights.

Balkan War (1912-1913). Turkish misrule causes the loss of more territory.

World War (1914-1918). Assassination of Austrian heir to Serbia brought Europe, long tense, into open conflict. German invasion of Belgium a large factor in alignment of forces.

Russian Revolution (1917). The culmination of a long series of efforts to obtain rights for the less privileged classes.

Spanish Civil War (1936-1939). Spaniards under leadership of General Franco succeed in ousting Communists who for a time usurped power.

Sino-Japanese Incident (1937- ). Not called a war because of military and economic difficulties which would arise in a war, but nevertheless a major conflict with the independence of China at stake.

Second World War (1939- ). Hitler conquers most of Europe. Great Britain fights on and supports Russia, invaded by Nazis. Italy and Japan are allied with Germany. The United States declares war when attacked by Japan. The world is involved.

LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG SPEECH

(Address at the Dedication of Gettysburg Cemetery, November 19, 1863)

Fourscore and seven years ago our fathers brought forth upon this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We are met to dedicate a portion of it as the final resting-place of those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have thus far so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us; that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

CATHOLICS IN THE REVOLUTION

Although Catholics numbered only 25,000 at the beginning of the War of Independence and despite the fact that they were openly proscribed, their part in the struggle for freedom was far greater than their number would imply.

Charles Carroll, a member of the Continental Congress, was appointed to the Board of War in 1774. He later signed the Declaration of Independence.

Father John Carroll and Charles Carroll were sent by the Congress on a mission to Canada to secure the neutrality of Canada against the British.

Father Pierre Gibault was an important aid in preserving the Northwest Territory for the Colonies.

Irish Catholics of Philadelphia subscribed funds for the disheartened Army at Valley Forge.

Generals Stephen and John Moylan, General Lacy, Colonels Morgan O'Connor, Louis de Fleury, Arthur Dillon and John Fitzgerald, aide and secretary to Washington, Majors John Doyle and Michael Ryan and Captain Fitzsimmons were Catholic Americans.

The outstanding naval captain of the Revolution was the Catholic, John Barry.

Aid was given to the Colonies by Catholic France, Catholic Spain and Catholic Poland.

Generals Lafayette, Rochambeau, Pulaski and Kosciuszko and Admirals D'Estaing, De Grasse and De Barras were heroes of the Revolution and Catholics.

CATHOLICS IN THE CIVIL WAR

Archbishop Hughes of New York said in 1860: "If the division of the country should ever take place, Catholics will have had no voluntary part in bringing about such a calamity."

When the separation of North and South did come, Catholics fought in both Union and Confederate armies. With the Union were some 50 Catholic generals, and with the Confederate forces were more than 20 Catholic generals, as well as many officers of lower rank and thousands of enlisted men on both sides.

General Rosecrans, a convert to Catholicism, refused the plan of the Republican leaders headed by Horace Greeley whereby he was to take command of the army and succeed Lincoln as the Republican candidate.

General Philip H. Sheridan, the outstanding Catholic General of the Union, turned defeat to victory by his remarkable ride from Winchester to Cedar Creek, in 1864.

Among the other Catholic Generals in the Union Army were Meagher of the Irish Brigade, James Shields, Henry J. Hunt, Edward O. C. Ord, Sturges, Guiney, Corcoran, Hardie, Kearney, Stone, McMahon, Newton, and Anderson of Fort Sumter (brevetted major-general in 1865).

Admiral Ammen, Commodore Sands, Commander James H. Ward, Feliger and Beaumont were among the North's Catholic heroes of the sea.

The Confederate cause was served by Generals Beauregard, Cabell, Cleburne, Hardee, Branch, Carroll and Paul J. Semmes. The Confederate General, James Longstreet, became a Catholic after the war.

The Captain of the "Alabama" which brought such destruction to the Northern cause on sea, was the Catholic, Raphael Semmes.

The Catholic, Stephen R. Mallory, Senator from Florida, served in Jefferson Davis' Cabinet as Secretary of the Navy.

The Catholic Sisterhoods by their heroism in nursing the wounded of both Northern and Southern forces earned the lasting gratitude of the soldiers and have been enshrined as the "Nuns of the Battlefield."

Joseph C. Butler and Lewis Washington, two Protestant gentlemen, purchased the U. S. Marine Hospital at Cincinnati and presented it to the Sisters of Charity as the Hospital of the Good Samaritan in honor of Sister Anthony, the Ministering Angel of the Army of Tennessee.

The following war lyrics of the South were written by Catholics: "Dixie", by Dan Emmett; "Bonnie Blue Flag", by Harry McCarthy; and "Maryland, My Maryland", by James Ryder Randall.

Theodore O'Hara, the Catholic poet who served the Confederacy under General Breckenridge wrote "The Bivouac of the Dead" commemorating the Battle of Buena Vista in the Mexican War.

Father Abram J. Ryan, the great Southern poet, served as a Confederate Chaplain in the Civil War.

The poet, John Bannister Tabb, who served on a Confederate blockade runner became a convert in 1872 and later a priest.

Archbishop Hughes of New York and Bishop MacIlvaine were sent on a successful mission to Europe to prevent foreign governments from recognizing or openly aiding the Confederate States.

Bishop Michael Domenec of Pittsburgh persuaded the Queen of Spain not to recognize the Confederacy.

Orestes A. Brownson, the famous convert to Catholicism, attacked secession and urged the abolition of slavery.

AMERICAN CATHOLIC RECORD IN FIRST WORLD WAR

The Catholic population of the United States in 1917 was 17% of the total population, and yet so great were the number of Catholic enlistments in all arms, that 30% of the Army, 40% of the Navy, and 50% of the Marine Corps were Catholic. Mortality was as follows:

THE SECOND WORLD WAR

Synopsis: Sept., 1939 — Nov., 1941

War came, Sept. 1, 1939, when Germany annexed Danzig and invaded Poland. Great Britain and France declared war on Germany, Sept. 3. Europe saw Nazi blitzkrieg tactics—a combination of overwhelming initial air attacks, hammer-strokes by mechanized ground forces plus surprise, perfect military coordination, and psychological exploitation. Germany crushed Poland and partitioned the country with Russia, which invaded from the east. Russia seized Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania and on Nov. 30 invaded Finland. After a three and a half months' war Finland signed a peace pact with the Soviet, ceding to Russia part of her territory.

Hitler's 1940 time-table called for occupation of Denmark and Norway by "wooden horse" tactics, destruction in detail of Dutch and Belgian armies, seizure of Luxembourg, a break to the coast endangering northern Allied units, and a final decisive battle against France from a position outflanking the Maginot Line. Germany occupied Denmark, April 9. The Norwegians resisted by arms but surrendered, June 9. Netherlands capitulated May 14, and Belgium on May 28. The British evacuated their forces from the continent, at Dunkerque, and France laid down her arms. By armistice signed June 22, the greater part of France was occupied by the Nazis, and a French government of the unoccupied portion was set up at Vichy under Marshal Petain. This government broke off diplomatic relations with Great Britain on July 5. Italy entered the war on the side of Germany on June 10. In ensuing warfare in Africa she lost Ethiopia, restored by the conquering British to Haile Selassie. War in North Africa resembled a football game with the British on the offensive by the end of 1941.

The spring of 1941 proved fatal to Greece and Yugoslavia, who, unlike Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria, defied the Axis. The Yugoslav army capitulated, April 18, and the Greek Army, April 24. Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary joined the Axis, of which alliance Japan became a member, Sept. 27, 1940. She had then been waging war against China for three years. The French acquiesced to Japanese demands for military control of French Indo-China in July, 1941. On June 8 British forces invaded Syria, and an armistice was signed July 12. On that day Britain signed a mutual aid pact with Russia. On Aug. 24 Russo-British forces invaded Iran, which fell to them Aug. 28. On June 22 Germany had invaded Russia.

The world witnessed besieged Britain trading aerial blows with Germany and clamoring for a second front when Russia halted the Nazi juggernaut before Moscow in the winter of 1941. Britain, Russia and the occupied nations of Europe, meanwhile, turned hopeful eyes to the United States where neutrality was thinning, though the gathering war clouds in the Pacific remained unnoticed.

Chronology: Dec., 1941 — Nov., 1942

December, 1941

- 7 — Japan attacks Pearl Harbor sinking battleships Arizona and Utah, three destroyers and a minelayer, and strikes at Midway, Wake, Guam, Philippines, Singapore and Hong Kong.
- 8 — U. S. Senate votes war 82-0; House of Representatives 388-1. President signs war measure at 4:10 p. m. British Empire and many of the American republics declare war on Japan.
- 11 — Germany and Italy declare war on United States.

- 22 — Prime Minister Churchill arrives in Washington to confer with President on concerted war effort.
- 30 — Japanese out-blitzing German krieg tactics. Since Pearl Harbor, Nippon has seized Wake, Guam, Hong Kong; landed on island of Borneo; advanced in Malaya; bombed open city of Manila and advanced within thirty miles of it; sunk The Repulse and Prince of Wales by planes; secured Thailand's cooperation; and carried submarine warfare to the Pacific coast.
- 31 — Russians keep retaking numerous towns and villages. In Libya also the Axis is steadily retreating westward.

January, 1942

- 1 — A joint agreement of 26 United Nations is signed in Washington, D. C., pledging full resources against members of the Tripartite Pact and its adherents, with which such governments are at war, and not to make a separate armistice or peace with the enemy: United States of America, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, China, Australia, Canada, Belgium, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, India, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Poland, South Africa and Yugoslavia.
- 3 — Japanese enter Manila as MacArthur withdraws to Bataan, where his forces battle 200,000 Japanese to standstill in nine continuous weeks of fighting.
- 6 — President's armament plan calls for 185,000 planes, 120,000 tanks, 55,000 anti-aircraft guns, 18,000,000 tons of deadweight merchant shipping; asks Congress for 56 billion-dollar war bill; and reveals A. E. F. will operate all over the world.
- 9 — Chronicle of Wake Island records 7 Nipponese warships sunk and 9 planes downed.
- 15 — Battle of Atlantic extends to American waters, as two American ships are torpedoed and sunk off New York coast.
- 21 — Mozhaisk, keystone of German salient of Bryansk-Vyazma line, falls after 18-day heavy Soviet offensive.
- 23 — Rio de Janeiro Conference recommends rupture of diplomatic relations with Axis by 21 American Republics.
- 25 — Roberts' Report charges Lt. Gen. Walter C. Short and Adm. Husband E. Kimmel with dereliction of duty at time of Pearl Harbor attack.
- 26 — Australia for first time in 154-year history faces invader on New Britain Island.
- 31 — Japanese effect fifth landing in Netherlands East Indies at Amboina Island, despite serious naval losses in Macassar Strait between Borneo and Celebes.

February, 1942

- 2 — U. S. Navy in first offensive against Japanese raids Gilbert and Marshall Islands; sinks 16 ships and downs 41 planes, with loss of 11 planes.
- 5 — Since Jan. 26 British have lost all but 150 miles of Libyan coast to Rommel's counter-attacking forces.
- 9 — Normandie, now U. S. auxiliary Lafayette, catches fire and capsizes at New York pier.
- 13 — Nazi warships successfully run gauntlet from Brest through English Channel to Helgoland.
- 16 — Nipponese 9-week Malay campaign culminates in seizure of Singapore, key to India, Java and Australia, and in capture of 73,000 Empire troops.

- 17 — Premier Hideki Tojo reveals Japan's war aims, viz., suppression of Chungking regime, "emancipation" of India, Burma and Dutch East Indies; and furtherance of Greater East Asiatic unification.
Nazi headquarters admit Russian advance of 180 miles in some sectors since start of winter campaign.
- 21 — Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek of China pleads for Indian support against Nippon and appeals to Britain to heed Indian desire for freedom.
- 24 — As President Roosevelt addresses nation, Japanese submarine shells oil refineries at Elwood, Calif.
- 26 — The 33rd United Nations ship is reported sunk in Atlantic as Secretary of Navy Knox announces 54 Japanese ships sunk since Pearl Harbor.

March, 1942

- 8 — Rangoon, entry port of Burma Road, is abandoned in flames to Nipponese.
- 9 — Spurred by Java sea victory and capture of Batavia, Japanese complete conquest of Java with seizure of Bandung, thus gaining Asiatic rule in three months.
- 15 — Hitler, in speech, admits blunder in Russian campaign, as Reds continue to hold initiative and claim that Soviet guerillas control 6,000 sq. miles.
British lead in ship losses, with 203 war vessels sunk, and navies of 18 warring and neutral nations have lost 1,120,916 tons of war-craft of all kinds.
- 16 — As sabotage and open resistance spreads through the occupied countries, Greek relief society in Cairo reports that approximately 200,000 Greeks have perished from hunger or imprisonment, while reports still persist that pestilence is sweeping Eastern Europe.
- 18 — United Nations electrified by MacArthur's escape through Japanese infested waters and assumption of supreme command in Southwest Pacific. American and Australian flyers celebrate event by bagging 23 Nipponese ships.
- 25 — U-Boats claim 68th victim vessel.

April, 1942

- 9 — Bataan falls.
- 11 — British negotiations with India, promising post-war dominion status with right to secede from British Empire, fail completely.
- 14 — Despite Vichy assurances as regards Martinique, Madagascar and the French fleet, U. S. recalls Ambassador Leahy when pro-Axis Laval returns to power.
- 15 — U. S. planes based in Australia raid the Philippines.
- 19 — U. S. Army bombers attack Tokyo, Yokohama, Kobe, and Nagoya.
- 30 — Nipponese seal Burma Road by capturing Lashio, last railroad terminus.
Mussolini empowers 98 prefects to deal with deteriorating home front.
An eight-day R. A. F. offensive of 4,800 planes over occupied Europe and German industrial centers, is reported.
Germans, despite elaborate Soviet claims, still hold such pivotal points as Smolensk, Kharkov and Dniepropetrovsk.

May, 1942

- 5 — British seize island of Madagascar, passageway to Atlantic and Indian Oceans.
- 6 — The 27-day siege of Corregidor and other Manila Bay forts ends.

Japanese enter Chinese Yunnan Province via Burma Road, sealed by capture of Lashio and Mandalay.

- 9 — Coral Sea victory temporarily halts Japanese invasion threats to Australia. U. S. Navy lists 15 enemy ships sunk and more than 20 damaged, while sustaining loss of aircraft carrier, Lexington, a tanker and destroyer. In Southwest Pacific war theatre Allies attempt to secure air supremacy.
  - 13 — Pope Pius XII calls upon responsible statesmen to reach a peace which would be "dignified, just and lasting for all nations."
  - 17 — First joint Army-Navy communique reveals 600,000 American troops moved to battle stations within three weeks after Pearl Harbor attack, and promises offensive war.
  - 24 — Laval, angered by Washington's "interference" in Martinique, where U. S. secured immobilization of French war vessels, faces Italian demands for Tunisia, Corsica and Nice.
  - 27 — Occupied Europe's resistance reaches new heights when Czechs mortally wound Reinhard Heydrich, No. 2 Gestapo man; French assassinate more German troops; Dutch continue acts of terrorism; Greeks, Croats and Serbs join guerilla forces to launch a "spring offensive"; Norwegians continue resistance despite waves of arrest.
  - 31 — The 19-day bloody Kharkov battle ends with Germans, already occupied with major offensive in Libya, claiming victory, and Russians, previously driven from Kerch peninsula, eastern Crimean gateway to Caucasus, saying that contemplated Nazi drive to Rostov is frustrated.
- Mexican Senate translates Rio recommendations into war with Axis. The 11-day old Nipponese knockout offensive, launched at both ends of the 1,500-mile expanse of South China, from Burma border in west to coastal province of Chekiang, pushes past Kinwha, the provincial capital.
- A mass attack of 1,260 British planes drops 3,000 tons of bombs on Cologne. Nazis report 12,000 dead.

June, 1942

- 5 — U. S. declares war on Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary.
  - 16 — After victimizing 53 Japanese warships in Coral Sea and Midway victories, American air force assumes global activity by harassing Japanese invaders of the Aleutian Islands, bombing Rumanian oil fields, saving British convoy in Mediterranean, aiding in defense of Middle East and Australia, and firing Rangoon via India.
  - 18 — Chinese, striving to launch counter-offensives against major Japanese bases in Central China, manage to hold last 50 miles of Chekiang-Kiangsi R. R. before Nipponese multiple prong drives in coastal provinces.
  - 19 — Churchill, having concluded with Molotoff a 20-year mutual-aid pact, and Roosevelt, a Lend-Lease agreement with assurance of Russian post-war cooperation, discuss advisability of second European front in 1942 and reduction of U-boat toll, estimated at 319 ships and 3,600 lives.
  - 26 — Bremen joins Cologne and Essen as victim of British thousand-bomber attack.
  - 28 — Russia, beset by siege at Sevastapol and German offensive on Kursk-Kharkov fronts, charges Germany with gassing of civilians. Previously England has threatened retaliatory measures on Germany, and United States on Japan.
- The F. B. I. seizes 8 Nazi saboteurs landed from submarines on Long Island and Florida coasts.

- 30 — Following Tobruk surrender, Axis army in ten days sweeps to within 70 miles of Alexandria.

July, 1942

- 8 — Egyptian battle dissolves into sporadic positional warfare, after British halt Rommel at El Alamein, 60 miles from Alexandria.
- 14 — Yugoslav revolt is intensified as Croat Green Cadres hit hard and often at Fiume, Italy, and Mihailovich's guerillas press Axis in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Meanwhile, Nazis, harrassed by heavy R. A. F. raids and Second Front spectre, threaten occupied countries with grim reprisals.
- 21 — Casualties of U. S. armed forces total 44,143.
- 23 — Invasion fears grip Australia, with Japanese occupation of Buna-Gona area, 110 miles from Port Moresby, springboard for future Allied offensive.
- 24 — With Sevastopol and air control over Barant Sea, passageway on Murmansk convoy line, secured, Nazis close spigot of Caucasus, Rostov on Don, and drive towards Stalingrad on Volga, in effort to separate Russia's northern and southern armies.
- 25 — China, facing her sixth year of war, is cheered by presence of American air force, despite loss of her remaining coastal ports of Foochow and Wenchow, and Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad.
- 30 — Giant cargo planes seen as possible solution to U-boat sinkings, unofficially estimated at 423.
- 31 — Navy reveals 10,000 Japanese on Aleutian Islands of Attu, Kiska and Agattu, where American submarines have sunk or damaged 15 enemy destroyers.

August, 1942

- 7 — U. S. Navy opens offensive in South Pacific. Marines land on Guadalcanal Island.
- 10 — Battle rages for fourth day in Solomon Islands.
- 13 — U. S. Marines hold three isles in Solomons, Tulagi, Gavutu and Tanambogo, as well as positions on Guadalcanal.
- 14 — India seethes with revolt following demand for immediate freedom and ensuing British imprisonment of Gandhi and Nehru and suppression of India National Congress, as Japanese, despite Burma's monsoons, creep to within 30 miles of India's N. E. border.
- 17 — Churchill-Stalin conference viewed as possible formation of common Caucasus-Middle East line to safeguard Baku, Iran and Iraq oil regions and to thwart any Axis conjunction in Far East.
- 18 — Japanese fleet defeated off Solomon Islands.
- 19 — Sabotage-ridden occupied Europe's hopes of Allied invasion heightened by Dieppe raid and opening of around-the-clock air assault.
- 22 — Brazil's embroilment in the war brings South America into closer cooperation with United Nations. U. S. Navy officially lists 353 merchant ships sunk since mid-January.
- 27 — Overeagerness to aim daggerpoint at Port Moresby and Australia-Solomon communications, because of smashing of island screens by Solomon defeat, lures Japanese into Milne Bay trap.
- 28 — Japan, faced by probable bombing from lost air bases of Wenchow, Chuhsien and Lishui, watches dream of Korea-Singapore rail line fade with Chinese reoccupation of 240 of 450 miles of Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad.
- 30 — Russia pins hope on Leningrad-Voronezh counter-offensive and bombing of German cities to divert Germans besieging Stalingrad and menacing Novorossisk, last Black Sea naval base, and Astrakhan, entry port on Caspian for Lease-Lend goods.

September, 1942

- 8 — British lines remain intact all along El Alamein front against Rommel's ill-fated second bid for Nile Valley. Simultaneous with Churchill's disclosure that British Iran-Iraq Army is made autonomous for possible defense of imperilled Caucasus, President Roosevelt reveals United States and British aides reached vital strategy decisions in July parley at London.
- 12 — Unabated disturbances in India revive suggestions for American intervention or guarantee of Indian post-war independence.
- 17 — Allied bombers blast Balkans to fan anti-Axis sabotage; Norwegians, Belgians and Dutch brave religious persecution; Luxembourgers face mass deportation; and Laval interns Catholic leaders for protesting return of 20,000 Jews to Germany.
- 20 — Japanese stiffen resistance at Nanchang, major Nipponese stronghold in Kiangsi Province, and at Kinwha, a Tokyo-range air base, as Chinese slowly close in on Canton, 90 miles upriver from Hong Kong.
- 23 — Persistent enemy harassment in Solomons seems indicative of show-down; in New Guinea foe is momentarily checked before Port Moresby after negotiating supposedly impassable Owen Stanley gap.
- 28 — Despite severance of Volga artery, Stalingrad precariously holds on; Nazis check Reds in Central Russia, but fail to advance to Grozny oil fields, and from captured Novorossisk to Tuapse on the road to Black Sea oil port of Batum.

October, 1942

- 6 — Strong probability of American drive from seized Andreanof group of Aleutians causes Japanese to concentrate all their forces on oft-bombed Kiska.
- 10 — U. S. and Britain plan relinquishment of extraterritorial rights in China where stalemate continues.
- 13 — Threat to Port Moresby erased as Australians push across Owen Stanley pass nears Kokoda.
- 16 — Berlin and Rome in stew over increased sabotage and revolt in occupied countries, possible American-Fighting French thrust from Lake Chad and Anglo-Egyptian Sudan to outflank Afrika Korps, and Allied intentions on Dakar, 1,600 miles from Brazilian bulge.
- 20 — Veering of Battle of Atlantic in Allied favor indicates reinforcements and supplies are pouring across in a steadily increasing stream.
- 23 — Hopes of securing needed lifeline for isolated China through resumption of Burma campaign quickened by massing of American troops on Indian border, presence of powerful British naval squadron in Indian Ocean, and virtual occupation of all Madagascar.
- 24 — Powerful air offensive in western Europe extending to northern Italy, Russian defense on Volga-Stalingrad-Caucasus front, and opening of British desert offensive feature Allied efforts against Axis.
- 30 — With length of war and fate of Australian supply lines hanging in balance, American mastery in air, tenacity on land, and dauntlessness on sea combine to win first round of savage Solomons battle.

November, 1942

- 5 — British Army is victorious over Axis forces at Alamein.
- 8 — Allied forces, estimated from 300,000 to 600,000 and reportedly conveyed in 500 transports under protection of 250 warships, are landed in North Africa. A radio broadcast by President Roosevelt announcing that the purpose of the Allies is to aid France to regain her freedom and that there is no intent of territorial aggrandizement, a broadcast by General Eisenhower, in command, to the same effect, and leaflets dropped by airplane over North African countries, where landings are effected, win some cooperation from French forces in control and from the people. Strong opposition is met in Casablanca, Morocco. Oran, Algeria, after brief counter-attack, welcomes American troops.

- 11 — A 76-hour blitzing of Morocco and Algeria is successfully terminated by the Allies.

- 12 — American announced casualties, including North African campaign, are as follows:

	Killed	Wounded	Missing	Prisoners
Army .....	1,419	2,431	30,018	161
Navy .....	3,864	1,340	8,122	460
Marine Corps ....	734	103	1,900	728
Coast Guard .....	37	11	126	...

- 13 — Battle between the Japanese and U. S. Marine Corps rages at Guadalcanal.

- 14 — A pincer movement on Axis forces is being made from Tunisian tip to El Aghella.

- 20 — Chinese paced by American flyers reopen campaign against Canton, while Japan, reeling from its Solomons disaster and pinning of its New Guinea forces against the sea in Buna-Gona area, strives to develop a drive in Central China, and reportedly is massing troops in Burma in wake of Allied offensive.

- 23 — French West Africa, including Dakar, pledges allegiance to Admiral Darlan, whose temporary appointment in North Africa by the United States gives rise to bitter protests by the Fighting French.

- 25 — In the five battles of the Solomons, viz., Savo Island (Aug. 8-9) Eastern Solomons (Aug. 24-25), Cape Esperance (Oct. 11-12), Santa Cruz (Oct. 25-26) and Guadalcanal (Nov. 13-15), the scene of the greatest American naval victory, United States to date has sustained loss of 26 ships sunk and 5 damaged; while Japanese losses stand at 40 ships sunk and 76 damaged. In 11 months of war United States surpasses Japan in sinking ships 337-86, of which 93 are credited to unheralded American submarines which prowl in Japan's home waters. United States fares badly in Atlantic with estimated total of 535 ships sunk. No reports announced as to anti-submarine campaign, but British Admiralty claims over 500 U-boats.

- 26 — Germany invades unoccupied France.

- 27 — With Nazis approaching Toulon the French fleet in harbor is scuttled.

- 28 — While Allied forces in North Africa aim to hem Germany into Europe, shorten supply lines to Africa and the Far East, ease pressure on Russia and secure invasion base for Europe, Norwegian joint public action, Danish growing rebellion, Dutch stubborn non-cooperation, Belgian Catholic leaders' opposition, French scuttling of its '60-odd warships, Czech cunning sabotage, Poles' unfaltering resistance, Yugoslavs' regular warfare, and Greek crafty underground continue to undermine Axis' European fortress.

- 30 — Hitler's European stronghold is threatened on three sides. Along eastern side Russians in counter-offensive hammer to within 60 miles of Latvian border and slowly close trap on Stalingrad besiegers. On southern side Allies as result of advance of Americans in Tunis, British in Libya, and Fighting French column from Lake Chad, attempt squeeze play on Axis in North Africa. On western side R. A. F. blasts at demoralized Italy, while A. A. F. strikes at submarine nests on French coast.

THE AMERICAN'S CREED

I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

PRESIDENTIAL OATH OF OFFICE

The Constitution of the United States requires that the President take the following oath of affirmation before entering office:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

THE CHURCH AND AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

The Roman Catholic Church always has embodied the principles adopted in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

The Declaration of Independence appeals to God to witness the advocacy of the principles of the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man and equal rights and opportunities for all. It furthermore declares these principles to be true and self-evident.

Although the Constitution does not refer to the Church or to the Bible, the principles embodied in that document were taught in their fulness by Christ and by Christ alone.

The "inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" mean the God-given rights for only such rights may be called inalienable.

The Declaration of Independence is a more sincerely Christian document than the Constitution for it proclaims liberty to all; the Constitution on the other hand, made provisions for slave-holding. It is in this partial inconsistency of the Constitution that the cause of the Civil War is to be traced.

The deficiencies of the Constitution as a Christian document, however, have been in a measure made up by the amendments to it, particularly the first ten amendments.

Since the foundations of the Republic have been laid upon truly Christian principles and since these principles are found in their fulness and are faithfully upheld in the Catholic Church alone, it is indeed no presumption, but rather a belated admission, to say that our nation has its roots in Catholicism.

The Catholic Church would keep this nation sincerely consistent with its first principles. Therefore it insists upon the integrity and sanctity of the family and the holiness of marriage as the institution approved by God for the perpetuation of the race and the upholding of the State.

The Catholic Church recognizes the State as the power ordained by God to uphold the social order. She holds her children bound to stand by it. No greater loyalty to the State is to be found than among Catholics.

The Church is inflexible, however, in resisting any encroachment on the part of the civil power into the affairs of the Church. So long as the State remains in its own sphere of authority, however, the Church enjoins upon all to obey, love and reverence it.

The Church, accepting the theory that the government of the United States is based upon popular consent, given by a majority of educated and enlightened men and women, upholds the unity of the State on this basis and is opposed to the actions of individuals and minority groups when their actions go contrary to the will of the whole and against the general welfare. At the same time it will not sanction the acts of a majority should they be contrary to the general welfare.

The Church opposes the theory that the workers in a State are to be exploited by the rich, just as she opposes the theory that only the workers are to be considered. Both such theories are despotic. Thus the Church is unalterably opposed to both Communism and Plutocracy.

By the same token the Church opposes State Socialism because of its despotic insistence that rights, such as the right of private property or the right to the pursuit of happiness be given up when insisted upon by a majority. Such abrogation of rights leads ultimately to slavery.

The Church likewise is opposed to anarchy because by its extreme individualism it would destroy all unity, order and law.

The Church upholds the idea of citizenship as outlined in the principles forming the basis of the American State because these are Catholic principles. Should these principles be assailed, the Church will be the first to object and the last to give up the fight for them.

CATHOLIC JUSTICES OF THE U. S. SUPREME COURT

Associate Justice Frank Murphy was born at Harbor Beach, Mich., April 13, 1893, and has been Judge of the Detroit Records Court, Mayor of Detroit, Governor General of the Philippine Islands and first United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, Governor of Michigan, and Attorney General of the United States. He served overseas in the World War as a Lieutenant and later Captain with the Fourth and Eighty-fifth Divisions. The secular papers throughout the country gave him warm and widespread praise for his sincerity, honesty and high ideals in the administration of his office of Attorney General of the United States. Although he served but a short time in this capacity, the New York "World-Telegram" stated in an editorial: "He has energized the Justice Department. The positions he took on civil liberties, the spoils system, and the Hatch Act, anti-trust, including labor's part therein; judicial appointments, prosecution without fear or favor of the Pendergasts and the saboteurs — all make up a fast-moving picture of justice functioning on high." He was nominated by President Roosevelt in January, 1940, to fill the vacancy in the United States Supreme Court occasioned by the death of Justice Pierce Butler, who was also a Catholic. Justice Murphy is the fifth Catholic to sit on the Supreme Court bench.

The first Catholic to serve on the Supreme Court was Roger Brooke Taney of Maryland. Named Chief Justice by President Andrew Jackson in 1836, he served in that high position until his death in Baltimore on October 12, 1864. Before being named to the Court he had served as Attorney General of the United States and Secretary of the Treasury, ad interim. His stability and integrity are well borne out in the case of Merriman of Maryland, when his legal sense forced him to decide against the popular will and even against the President himself. The most spectacular case, however, in which Chief Justice Taney was destined to render an opinion was that concerning the famous Dred Scott decision. Maryland erected a statue to him in front of the State House at Annapolis in 1872, as a public tribute to the esteem in which he was held.

For a period of some thirty years after the death of Chief Justice Taney there was no Catholic on the Supreme Court bench. In 1894, however, President Grover Cleveland appointed Edward Douglass White of Louisiana as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. After resigning from the post of United States Senator from Louisiana which he had held from 1891 to 1894, he qualified for the Court on March 12, 1894. President William Howard Taft named him Chief Justice on December 12, 1910, and when he died on May 19, 1921, he was succeeded in that high office by President Taft himself.

The third Catholic to sit on the Supreme Court bench was Associate Justice Joseph McKenna of California, and for some twenty-three years he and Chief Justice White were on the bench at the same time. He was named to the Court by President William McKinley and took his seat on January 26, 1898. At the time of his appointment he was serving as Attorney General in President McKinley's Cabinet. Prior to that he had served as a member of Congress from California for seven years. For the brief period between the time of Associate Justice Pierce Butler's taking his seat on the bench on January 2, 1923, and the retirement of Associate Justice McKenna on January 25, 1925, two Catholics again served on the Supreme Court at the same time. Associate Justice McKenna died in Washington, D. C., on November 21, 1926.

Associate Justice Pierce Butler, the fourth Catholic to sit on the bench, was named to the Supreme Court by President Harding and took his seat on January 2, 1923. Justice Butler went to the bench fully equipped with a scholarly knowledge of the law as it affects business so important in daily American life. He served until his death on November 16, 1939.

CATHOLICS IN THE PRESIDENTS' CABINETS

There have been seven Catholics who have served in various Presidential Cabinets, and one is serving today. Of these, Roger Brooke Taney (Attorney General, and Secretary of the Treasury ad interim, under Andrew Jackson), Joseph McKenna (Attorney General under William McKinley) and Frank Murphy (Attorney General under Franklin Roosevelt) became members of the Supreme Court (see page 570). The other five are James Campbell, Robert J. Wynne, Charles J. Bonaparte, James A. Farley and Frank C. Walker.

James Campbell, Postmaster General under President Franklin Pierce, was born in Philadelphia, September 1, 1812. Educated at Stockdale Academy, he afterwards studied law and was admitted to the bar. He served as a Judge of the Court of Common Appeals and Attorney General of Pennsylvania. On March 7, 1853, he was appointed Postmaster General by President Pierce, and served in this capacity until the close of that administration. During his term he reduced the rate of postage, introduced the registry system, the separated postage stamps and the stamped envelope. He died in Philadelphia, January 23, 1893.

Robert J. Wynne, Postmaster General under President Theodore Roosevelt, was born in New York City, November 18, 1851. He attended school there and later learned telegraphy in Philadelphia and became chief operator of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co. Journalism then took his interest, and he became assistant correspondent for the "Gazette" in Washington, D. C. During the presidency of Grover Cleveland he was the Washington correspondent for the Cincinnati "Tribune" and the Philadelphia "Bulletin." His column was restricted to finance, tariffs and national politics. In 1902 he became first assistant to Postmaster General Payne and on the latter's death he succeeded him in the Cabinet and served as Postmaster General until March 4, 1905, when he became Consul-General to Great Britain.

Charles J. Bonaparte, Secretary of the Navy and Attorney General under President Theodore Roosevelt, was born in Baltimore on June 9, 1851. After graduation from Harvard Law School he became the champion of civil service reform. He was appointed Secretary of the Navy on July 1, 1905. His bill to increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy served greatly to promote the high standards of the service. On December 17, 1906, he succeeded William Moody as Attorney General. Notre Dame University awarded him the Laetare Medal in 1903. He died in 1921.

James Aloysius Farley, Postmaster General during the first two terms of President Franklin Roosevelt, was born in Grassy Point, N. Y., May 30, 1888. He attended Stony Point High School and Packard Commercial School in New York City. He later served as Town Clerk of Stony Point, Port Warden of New York City, Supervisor of Rockland County, and member of New York State Athletic Commission. In July, 1932, he became Chairman of the National Democratic Committee. He was appointed Postmaster General in March, 1933, and resigned in August, 1940.

Frank Comerford Walker, the present Postmaster General, was born May 30, 1886, in Plymouth, Pa. He attended Gonzaga University in Spokane and the Notre Dame Law School. He was Assistant District Attorney of Silver Bay County and later was elected to the Montana legislature. In 1932 he became Treasurer of the Democratic National Committee. He is a close friend and adviser to President Roosevelt, and was appointed to succeed James A. Farley when the latter resigned in August, 1940.

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained, and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the meantime exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of justice by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies, without the Consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us: For protecting them by a mock Trial from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent: For depriving us in many cases of the benefits of Trial by Jury: For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences: For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighboring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy of the Head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms. Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

WE THEREFORE, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is and ought to be totally dissolved: and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

(The Original Manuscript Has No Title.)

PREAMBLE

We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this CONSTITUTION for the United States of America.

ARTICLE I.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

SECTION 1.

CONGRESS

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

SECTION 2.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Election of Members. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature. [Modified by the Fourteenth Amendment.]

QUALIFICATIONS. No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

APPORTIONMENT. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union, according to their respective numbers, [The apportionment under the census of 1930 is one representative for every 279,712 persons.] which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. [The word "persons" refers to slaves. The word "slave" nowhere appears in the Constitution. This paragraph has been amended (Amendments XIII and XIV) and is no longer in force.] The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one representative; [and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three; Massachusetts, eight; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, one; Connecticut, five, New York, six; New Jersey, four; Pennsylvania, eight; Delaware, one; Maryland, six; Virginia, ten; North Carolina, five; South Carolina, five; and Georgia, three.] [Temporary Clause.]

VACANCIES. When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the executive authority (Governor) thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

OFFICERS. IMPEACHMENT. The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker [The Speaker, who presides, is one of the representatives; the other officers — clerk, sergeant-at-arms, postmaster, chaplain, doorkeeper, etc. — are not.] and other officers; and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SECTION 3.

THE SENATE

NUMBER OF SENATORS. ELECTION. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six years; and each senator shall have one vote. [Repealed in 1913 by Amendment XVII.]

CLASSIFICATION. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year; of the third class, at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation, or otherwise, during the recess of the Legislature of any State, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the Legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies. [Modified by Amendment XVII.]

QUALIFICATIONS. No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

PRESIDENT OF SENATE. The Vice-President of the United States shall be president of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided.

OFFICERS. The Senate shall choose their other officers, and also a president pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice-President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

TRIALS OF IMPEACHMENT. The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments: When sitting for that purpose, they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief-Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

JUDGMENT IN CASE OF CONVICTION. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment, according to law.

SECTION 4.

BOTH HOUSES

MANNER OF ELECTING MEMBERS. The times, places, and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time, by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators. [This is to prevent Congress from fixing the places of meeting of the state legislatures.]

MEETINGS OF CONGRESS. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day. [Amended by Article XX, Section 2.]

SECTION 5.

THE HOUSES SEPARATELY

ORGANIZATION. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner, and under such penalties, as each house may provide.

RULES. Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

JOURNAL. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy, and the yeas and nays of the members of either house or any question shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

ADJOURNMENT. Neither house, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

SECTION 6.

PRIVILEGES AND RESTRICTIONS ON MEMBERS

PAY AND PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERS. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

PROHIBITIONS ON MEMBERS. No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

SECTION 7.

METHOD OF PASSING LAWS

REVENUE BILLS. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with amendments as on other bills.

HOW BILLS BECOME LAWS. Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

RESOLUTIONS, etc. Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SECTION 8.

POWERS GRANTED TO CONGRESS

POWERS OF CONGRESS. The Congress shall have power:

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish a uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

To establish post-offices and post-roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court;

To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offenses against the law of nations;

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, [Letters granted by the government to private citizens in time of war, authorizing them, under certain conditions, to capture the ships of the enemy.] and make rules concerning captures on land and water,

To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years;

To provide and maintain a navy;

To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces;

To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions;

To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively the appointment of the officers, and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;

To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular States, and the acceptance of Congress, become the seat of the government of the United States, [The District of Columbia] and to exercise like authority over all places purchased by the consent of the Legislature of the State in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings; — And

IMPLIED POWERS. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof. [This is the famous elastic clause of the Constitution.]

SECTION 9.

POWERS FORBIDDEN TO THE UNITED STATES

ABSOLUTE PROHIBITIONS ON CONGRESS. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each person. [This refers to the foreign slave trade. "Persons" means "slaves." In 1808 Congress prohibited the importation of slaves. This clause is no longer in force.]

The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus [An official document requiring an accused person who is in prison awaiting trial to be brought into court to inquire whether he may be legally held.] shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it.

No bill of attainder [A special legislative act by which a person may be condemned to death or to outlawry or banishment without the opportunity of defending himself which he would have in a court of law.] or ex-post-facto law [A law relating to the punishment of acts committed before the law was passed.] shall be passed. (Extended by the first eight Amendments.)

No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken. [Extended by Amendment XVI.]

No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.

No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear, or pay duties in another.

No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and a regular statement and account of the receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no person holding any office of profit or trust under them, shall, without the consent of the Congress, accept of any present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state. [Extended by the Ninth and Tenth Amendments.]

SECTION 10.

POWERS FORBIDDEN TO THE STATES

ABSOLUTE PROHIBITIONS ON THE STATES. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex-post-facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

CONDITIONAL PROHIBITIONS ON THE STATES. No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws; and the net produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any State on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States; and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the Congress.

No State shall, without the consent of Congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops, or ships-of-war, in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State, or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay. [Extended by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments.]

ARTICLE II. EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

SECTION 1.

PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT

TERM. The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice-President, chosen for the same term, be elected, as follows:

ELECTORS. Each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no senator or representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.

PROCEEDINGS OF ELECTORS AND OF CONGRESS. [The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the Senate. The president of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by ballot one of them for President; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said house shall, in like manner, choose the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the Vice-President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice-President.] (This paragraph in brackets has been superseded by the Twelfth Amendment.)

TIME OF CHOOSING ELECTORS. The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

QUALIFICATIONS OF PRESIDENT. No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years resident within the United States.

VACANCY. In case of the removal of the President from office, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice-President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice-President, declaring what officer shall then act as President; and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected. [The Presidential Succession Act was passed in 1886.]

SALARY. The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

OATH. Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation: — "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States."

SECTION 2.

POWERS OF THE PRESIDENT

MILITARY POWERS; REPRIEVES AND PARDONS. The President shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices; and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

TREATIES; APPOINTMENTS. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law; but the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

FILLING OF VACANCIES. The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session.

SECTION 3.

DUTIES OF THE PRESIDENT

MESSAGE; CONVENING OF CONGRESS. He shall from time to time give to the Congress information [through his messages] of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

SECTION 4.

IMPEACHMENT

REMOVAL OF OFFICERS. The President, Vice-President, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

SECTION 1.

UNITED STATES COURTS

COURTS ESTABLISHED; JUDGES. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SECTION 2.

JURISDICTION

FEDERAL COURT IN GENERAL. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; — to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; — to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; — to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; — to controversies between two or more States; — between a State and citizens of another State; [Limited by the Eleventh Amendment.] — between citizens of different States; — between citizens of the same State claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects.

SUPREME COURT. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

TRIALS. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

SECTION 3.

TREASON

TREASON DEFINED. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort.

No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

PUNISHMENT. The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason, but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attained.

ARTICLE IV.

RELATIONS OF THE STATES

SECTION 1.

OFFICIAL ACTS

Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

SECTION 2.

PRIVILEGES OF CITIZENS

The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States. [Extended by the Fourteenth Amendment.]

FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE. A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

FUGITIVE SLAVES. No person [including slaves] held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due. [Limited by Thirteenth Amendment.]

SECTION 3.

NEW STATES AND TERRITORIES

ADMISSION OF STATES. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

TERRITORY AND PROPERTY OF UNITED STATES. The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

SECTION 4.

PROTECTION OF THE STATES

The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened), against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

AMENDMENTS

HOW PROPOSED; HOW RATIFIED. The Congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress; provided that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

PUBLIC DEBT. All debts contracted, and engagements entered into, before the adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation. [Extended by the Fourteenth Amendment, Section 4.]

SUPREMACY OF CONSTITUTION. This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

OFFICIAL OATH; RELIGIOUS TEST. The senators and representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

RATIFICATION OF THE CONSTITUTION

RATIFICATION. The ratification of the Conventions of nine States shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.

Done in convention, by the unanimous consent of the States present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth.

In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names.

Attest: WILLIAM JACKSON,
SECRETARY

There were sixty-five delegates chosen to the convention: ten did not attend; sixteen declined or failed to sign; thirty-nine signed. Rhode Island sent no delegates. The signatures have only the legal force of attestation.

In the following order the Constitution was ratified by the several states: Delaware, Dec. 7, 1787, Yeas 30 (unanimous); Pennsylvania, Dec. 12, 1787, Yeas 43, Nays 23; New Jersey, Dec. 18, 1787, Yeas 38 (unanimous); Georgia, Jan. 2, 1788, Yeas 26 (unanimous); Connecticut, Jan. 9, 1788, Yeas 128, Nays 40; Massachusetts, Feb. 6, 1788, Yeas 187, Nays 168; Maryland, April 28, 1788, Yeas 63, Nays 11; South Carolina, May 23, 1788, Yeas 149, Nays 73; New Hampshire, June 21, 1788, Yeas 57, Nays 46; Virginia, June 26, 1788, Yeas 89, Nays 79; New York, July 26, 1788, Yeas 30, Nays 27; North Carolina, Nov. 21, 1789, Yeas 194, Nays 77; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, May 29, 1790, Yeas 34, Nays 32; Vermont, Jan. 10, 1791, Yeas 105, Nays 4.

New Hampshire completed the nine states required by Article 7 needed for the establishment of the Constitution.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION OF UNITED STATES

Opposition in and out of Congress, to the Constitution, in that it was not sufficiently explicit as to individual and state rights, led to an agreement to submit to the people immediately after the adoption of the Constitution a number of safeguarding amendments.

And so it was that the First Congress, at its first session, at the City of New York, September 25, 1789, adopted and submitted to the states twelve proposed amendments—A Bill of Rights, as it was then and ever since has been popularly called. Ten of these amendments (now commonly known as one to ten inclusive, but in reality three to twelve inclusive) were ratified by the states as follows: New Jersey, November 20, 1789; Maryland, December 19, 1789; North Carolina, December 22, 1789; South Carolina, January 19, 1790; New Hampshire, January 25, 1790; Delaware, January 28, 1790; Pennsylvania, March 10, 1790; New York, March 27, 1790; Rhode Island, June 15, 1790; Vermont, November 3, 1791;

Virginia, December 15, 1791. No ratification by Connecticut, Georgia or Massachusetts is on record. These original ten ratified amendments appear in order below as Articles I to X, inclusive.

The two of the original proposed amendments which were not ratified by the necessary number of states related, the first to apportionment of Representatives; the second, to compensation of members of Congress.

Titles of Nobility

Congress, May 1, 1810, proposed to the states the following Amendment to the Constitution:

"If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office, or emolument of any kind whatever, from any emperor, king, prince or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States and shall be incapable of holding any office or trust or profit under them or either of them."

It was ratified by Maryland, December 25, 1810; Kentucky, January 31, 1811; Ohio, January 31, 1811; Delaware, February 2, 1811; Pennsylvania, February 6, 1811; New Jersey, February 13, 1811; Vermont, October 24, 1811; Tennessee, November 21, 1811; Georgia, December 13, 1811; North Carolina, December 23, 1811; Massachusetts, February 27, 1812; New Hampshire, December 10, 1812.

Rejected by New York (Senate), March 12, 1811; Connecticut, May session, 1813; South Carolina, approved by Senate November 28, 1811, reported unfavorably in House and not further considered, December 7, 1813; Rhode Island, September 15, 1814.

The amendment failed, not having sufficient ratifications.

Amendments to Prohibit the Constitution from Abolishing or Interfering with Slavery (The Corwin Amendment)

Congress, March 2, 1861, proposed to the states the following Amendment to the Constitution:

"No amendment shall be made to the Constitution which will authorize or give to Congress the power to abolish or interfere, within any state, with the domestic institutions thereof, including that of persons held to labor or service by the laws of said state."

Ratified by Ohio, March 13, 1861; Maryland, January 10, 1862; Illinois (convention), February 14, 1862. The amendment failed, for lack of a sufficient number of ratifications.

The Ten Original Amendments (They were declared in force December 15, 1791.)

The first ten Amendments, known as the Bill of Rights, mostly the work of Madison, were adopted in 1791.

ARTICLE I

FREEDOM OF RELIGION, OF SPEECH, AND OF THE PRESS: RIGHT OF PETITION

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE II

RIGHT TO KEEP ARMS

A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.

ARTICLE III

QUARTERING OF SOLDIERS IN PRIVATE HOUSES

No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner; nor, in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

ARTICLE IV SEARCH WARRANTS

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous, crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service, in time of war, or public danger; nor shall any person be subject, for the same offense, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation. [Amendment XIV, Sec. 1, extends part of this restriction to the States.]

ARTICLE VI CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS (CONTINUED)

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor; and to have the assistance of counsel for his defence.

ARTICLE VII JURY TRIAL IN CIVIL CASES

In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved; and no fact, tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any court of the United States than according to the rules of the common law.

ARTICLE VIII EXCESSIVE PUNISHMENTS

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX UNENUMERATED RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE

The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X POWERS RESERVED TO STATES

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE XI SUITS AGAINST STATES

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another state, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.

ARTICLE XII ELECTION OF PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT

1. The Electors shall meet in their respective states, and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign, and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and the House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have such a majority, then, from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in case of the death, or other constitutional disability, of the President. [Adopted in 1804, superseding Article II, Sec. 1.]

2. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then, from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators; a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice.

3. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

ARTICLE XIII

SLAVERY

SECTION 1.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY

Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

SECTION 2.

POWER OF CONGRESS

Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XIV

CIVIL RIGHTS: APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES: POLITICAL DISABILITIES: PUBLIC DEBT

SECTION 1.

CIVIL RIGHTS

All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

SECTION 2.

APPORTIONMENT OF REPRESENTATIVES

Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a state, or the members of the legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such state.

SECTION 3.

POLITICAL DISABILITIES

No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any state, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any state legislature, as an executive or judicial officer of any state, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may, by vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

SECTION 4.

PUBLIC DEBT

The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any state shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations, and claims shall be held illegal and void.

SECTION 5.

POWERS OF CONGRESS

The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

ARTICLE XV

RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE

SECTION 1.

RIGHT OF NEGRO TO VOTE

The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

SECTION 2.

POWER OF CONGRESS

The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XVI

INCOME TAX

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census or enumeration.

ARTICLE XVII

SENATE: ELECTION: VACANCIES

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each state, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislatures.

When vacancies happen in the representation of any state in the Senate, the executive authority of such state shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any state may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointment until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.

ARTICLE XVIII NATIONAL PROHIBITION

SECTION 1.

After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

SECTION 2.

The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

SECTION 3.

This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years of the date of the submission hereof to the States by Congress.

ARTICLE XIX WOMAN SUFFRAGE

SECTION 1.

The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

SECTION 2.

Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

ARTICLE XX TERMS OF PRESIDENT, VICE-PRESIDENT AND CONGRESSMEN

SECTION 1.

The terms of the President and Vice-President shall end at noon on the 20th day of January, and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon on the 3rd day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified, and the term of their successors shall then begin.

SECTION 2.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3rd day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SECTION 3.

If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice-President elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice-President shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice-President elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice-President shall have qualified.

SECTION 4.

The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice-President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

SECTION 5.

Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article (October, 1933).

SECTION 6.

This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission.

ARTICLE XXI

REPEAL OF THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

SECTION 1.

The eighteenth article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

SECTION 2.

The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or Possession of the United States, for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof is hereby prohibited.

SECTION 3.

This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by convention in the several States, as provided by the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by Congress.

PROPOSED CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT

(RATIFIED BY 28 STATES. RATIFICATION BY 36 STATES NECESSARY.)

SECTION 1.

The Congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.

SECTION 2.

The power of the several States is unimpaired by this article except that the operation of State laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the Congress.

CATHOLIC IDEALS IN GOVERNMENT

Thoughts from the Pastoral Letter of the American Hierarchy Issued in 1919

Purpose — Governments are organized to further the salvation of mankind.

Rights — The State, a creature of man, must respect the rights of the individual and the family.

Religion — The State has no right to hinder a citizen from performing his religious duties.

Classes — Whenever a particular class, such as the laboring class, suffers or is threatened by evils which cannot be met otherwise, the Government must meet them.

Industrial Evils — Governments rightly may be asked to help solve the industrial evils such as excessive labor, dangers to life and health, immoral shop conditions, interference with religion, etc.

Citizenship — Citizenship demands that the citizen obey the government and take an active interest in civic affairs.

Principles — The adoption of the true principles of government must be insisted upon.

Candidates — Only worthy candidates should be chosen for office.

Parties — Political parties should look for the nation's welfare, not party interests.

Elections — The purity of election is essential to a democracy.

Corruption — Politics is not exempted from the rules of morality. The will of the people must not be used for private or partisan advantage.

Peace — No international covenant can guarantee security or peace if it disregards divine commands.

Internationalism — In their dealings with one another, nations should observe both justice and charity.

Nationalism — The existence, integrity and rights of all nations must be respected by all Christian States.

Good Will — States should assist each other by acts of beneficence and good will.

Social Order — The State should appreciate the value of religion in preserving the social order.

Education — Rulers of the people should see the folly of excluding the teachings of the Gospel and of the Church from public instruction.

Union of Church and State — Any union of Church and State is not desirable in the United States. Each authority is supreme in its own sphere.

Schools — Catholic schools fulfill the obligation of training children to citizenship all the more fully by giving them religious instruction.

Duties — All citizens should be trained to fulfill their duties as citizens and individuals.

Compulsory Education — When persuasion fails, compulsion must be used in order to give all an adequate education for citizenship.

Public Opinion — An enlightened public opinion is necessary for the proper conduct of the democratic form of government.

Ignorance — The State has the right to establish schools and thus safeguard itself from the dangers resulting from ignorance.

Subversive Doctrines — The State has the right and the duty to exclude the teaching of doctrines aiming at the subversion of law and order.

Best Training for Citizenship — An education which unites intellectual, moral and religious elements is the best training for citizenship since it inculcates a sense of responsibility, a respect for authority and a consideration of the rights of others.

Freedom — Since in a democracy the citizen enjoys a larger freedom, he likewise has a greater obligation to govern himself.

Integrity of Life—Social righteousness depends upon individual morality. Integrity of life in each citizen is the only sure guarantee of worthy citizenship.

Law Observance—The efficacy of legislation and of all endeavor for the common good depends upon a personal observance of justice and charity by the individual citizens.

Amount of Government—Our aim should be not to multiply laws and restrictions, but to develop the spirit which will enable us to live in harmony under the simplest form with only the necessary amount of external regulation.

Democratic Government—Democracy implies that the people rule themselves, but if they are to rule wisely each must begin by governing himself, by performing his duty no less than by maintaining his right.

---

RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Statements of Some of the Presidents

Washington—Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness—these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens.—Farewell Address.

Jefferson—All and every act of parliament by whatsoever title known or distinguished, which renders criminal the maintaining of any opinion in matters of religion...or exercising any mode of worship whatever...shall henceforth be of no validity or force within this commonwealth.—Statute of Virginia for Religious Freedom.

Lincoln—When the Know-nothings get control, it [the Declaration] will read: "All men are created equal except negroes, foreigners and Catholics." When it comes to this, I should prefer emigrating to some country where they make no pretense of loving liberty.—Letter to Joshua F. Speed, 1855.

Theodore Roosevelt—Any political movement directed against any body of our fellow citizens because of their religious creed is a grave offense against American principles and American institutions.—October 11, 1915.

Taft—There is nothing so despicable as a secret society that is based upon religious prejudice and that will attempt to defeat a man because of his religious beliefs.—December 20, 1914.

Wilson—It does not become America that within her borders, where every man is free to follow the dictates of his conscience, men should raise the cry of church against church. To do this is to strike at the very spirit and heart of America.—November 4, 1915.

Harding—I hold it [religious intolerance] to be a menace to the very liberties we boast and cherish.—March 24, 1922.

Coolidge—It is not easy to conceive of anything that would be more unfortunate in a community based upon the ideals of which Americans boast than any considerable development of intolerance as regards religion.—American Legion Convention, Omaha, October, 1925.

Franklin D. Roosevelt—In the United States we regard it as axiomatic that every person shall enjoy the free exercise of his religion according to the dictates of his conscience. Our flag for a century and a half has been the symbol of the principles of liberty of conscience, of religious freedom and equality before the law, and these concepts are deeply ingrained in our national character.—October 2, 1935.

NATIONAL FLAG CODE

(Rules, as Adopted by the National Flag Conference)

1. The flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset, or between such hours as may be designated by proper authority. It should be displayed on national and state holidays and on historic and special occasions.
2. When carried in a procession with another flag or flags, the flag of the United States should be either on the marching right, i. e., the flag's own right, or when there is a line of other flags the flag of the United States may be in front of the center.
3. When displayed with another flag against a wall from crossed staffs, the flag of the United States should be on the right, the flag's own right, and its staff should be in front of the other flag.
4. When a number of flags are grouped and displayed from staffs, the flag of the United States should be in the center or at the highest point.
5. When flags of states or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the flag of the United States, the national flag should always be at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs the flag of the United States should be hoisted first. No flag or pennant should be placed above or to the right.
6. When flags of two or more nations are displayed, they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be of approximately equal size.
7. When the flag is displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony, or front of building, the union of the flag should go clear to the head of the staff unless the flag is at half mast.
8. When the flag of the United States is displayed in a manner other than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, i. e., to the observer's left.
9. When displayed over the middle of the street, as between buildings, the flag of the United States should be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east-and-west street or to the east in a north-and-south street.
10. When used on a speaker's platform, the flag should be displayed above and behind the speaker. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk nor to drape over the front of the platform. If flown from a staff it should be on the speaker's right.
11. When used in unveiling a statue or monument, the flag should not be allowed to fall on the ground.
12. When flown at half staff, the flag is hoisted to the peak for an instant, and then lowered to the half staff position, but before lowering the flag for the day it is raised again to the peak. By "half staff" is meant hauling the flag down to one-half the distance between the top and bottom of the staff. On Memorial Day, May 30th, the flag is displayed at half staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset.
13. Flags flown from fixed staffs are placed at half staff to indicate mourning. When the flag is displayed on a small staff, as when carried in parade, mourning is indicated by attaching two streamers of black crepe to the spear head, allowing the streamers to fall naturally.
14. When used to cover a casket, the flag should be placed so that the union is at the head and over the left shoulder. The flag should not be lowered into the grave nor allowed to touch the ground.
15. When the flag is displayed in the body of the church, it should be from a staff placed on the congregation's right as they face the clergyman. The service flag, the state flag, or any other flag should be at the left of the congregation.

CONTINENTAL U. S. POPULATION ESTIMATES FOR 1942

The population of the continental United States was 133,965,000 on Jan. 1, 1942, according to preliminary estimates by the Census Bureau. This total does not take into account "the post-censal movements of the armed forces away from continental United States."

This latest population estimate showed an increase of 1,327,000 over the estimate of 132,638,000 for Jan. 1, 1941, and of 2,296,000 over the 131,669,275 registered in the census of April 1, 1940.

A rise in the birth rate was stated to be the chief reason for this increase. In 1941 about 2,728,000 babies were born, as compared with an annual average of 2,319,000 between 1930 and 1940. This was attributed "partly to an increase in the number of women in the child-bearing ages, but primarily to business prosperity induced by defense activity and to anticipation of conscription and the entry of the United States into the war."

The number of persons who died in 1941, 1,442,000, was about the same as the annual average of 1,425,000 during the 1930-40 decade.

During 1941 there was "a net civilian immigration almost as large as the net emigration during the whole intercensal decade, 1930-40."

In the latest estimate of population there was an almost equal division of sexes, the number of men per 100 women dropping from 100.7 in 1940 to 100.4 in 1942. White persons and non-whites remained in about the same ratio, there being 120,215,770 whites, and 13,749,051 non-whites at the beginning of 1942.

JAPANESE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES AND ITS TERRITORIES AND POSSESSIONS

There were 126,947 Japanese in the continental United States on April 1, 1940, of whom 47,305 were foreign born, and therefore alien and ineligible for citizenship.

The Pacific Coast States of Washington, Oregon and California had 112,353 Japanese, or 88.5 per cent of the total in the country. Furthermore, these States contained 40,869 alien Japanese or 86.4 per cent of the total. California alone had 93,717, or 73.8 per cent of the total Japanese in the United States and 33,569 alien Japanese or 71.0 per cent of the total. The Mountain States contained an additional 8,574 Japanese, of whom 3,137 were alien foreign-born, and the Middle Atlantic States had 3,060, of whom 2,017 were foreign-born.

Los Angeles had 23,321 Japanese residents, more than any other American city, according to figures based on the 1940 Census returns. Seattle, Wash., had the next largest number, 6,975; San Francisco had 5,280, Sacramento 2,879, New York City 2,087, and Portland, Ore., Oakland, Berkeley, Stockton and Torrance, Calif., each had between 1,000 and 2,000 Japanese. These ten cities contained 47,779 or 37.6 per cent of the total Japanese in the United States. Of these 19,043 were alien-born, and comprised 40.3 per cent of the total foreign-born Japanese in the country.

In the territories and possessions of the United States, excluding the Philippine Islands, in 1940 there were 153,501 Japanese, of whom 37,512 were foreign-born. Japanese were most numerous in Hawaii where they numbered 157,905, or 37.3 per cent of the total population. Of the total number of Japanese in Hawaii 37,353 were foreign-born. The remaining territories and possessions, excluding the Philippines, had 596 Japanese of whom 159 were alien foreign-born. The total number of persons of the Japanese race in the Philippines is not known, but all persons of the "yellow race" (mostly Chinese) numbered 141,811.

The following table gives the number of Japanese, by nativity, in the United States and its territories and possessions, including the Philippines.

NOTABLE CENTENARIES OF 1943

During 1943 the Catholic Church in America will commemorate several important anniversaries. To contribute to a wider appreciation of the significance of these events, a brief history of some of the more outstanding accomplishments being honored is here presented.

The Archdiocese of Chicago (1843-1943)

On his return from his first voyage down the Mississippi River, the renowned Fr. James Marquette, S. J., entered the Illinois River and having visited and preached the Gospel to the Peoria Indians, continued on until he reached the Kaskaskia tribe. On Dec. 4, 1674, he returned to the mouth of the Chicago River to keep his promise then made of bringing the Gospel to them. If we were to choose the exact location of Fr. Marquette's second landing, we should cite a spot near Madison Street and the Lake: his first stable encampment would have been situated on what is now Grand Park near the end of Madison Street. Pushing on in exploration, Fr. Marquette finally halted at a point near the crossing of Rolly Street and the drainage canal. Here the first altar on Illinois soil of which we have any record was raised, and the first Mass of the Immaculate Conception was celebrated. The log-cabin erected by Pierre and Jacques — the companions of Fr. Marquette — was in all probability the first white dwelling and the first church erected on Illinois soil. On March 30, 1675, Marquette and his companions journeyed on to the Kaskaskia village and here on April 11, 1675, the Church was officially established in what is now known as Illinois. At this spot, on Holy Thursday, in the presence of some 3,000 Indians, Fr. Marquette established the mission of the Immaculate Conception — so named in fulfillment of a promise made to the Blessed Mother on his first voyage down the Mississippi. Thus the first Catholic church in Mid-America was situated within the limits of the Chicago diocese near the present city of Utica, Illinois.

During the succeeding years Fr.

Marquette was followed in this territory by fellow-priests of his order. Contemporary with these early Jesuit missionaries were other priests: in 1680 came Rev. Gabriel de la Ribourde, Rev. Zenobius Membre and Rev. Louis Hennepin, all Franciscans; the Abbe Jean Cavalier, Sulpician, and Rev. Anastasius Douay, Franciscan, arrived in 1684; Fr. St. Cosme founded the Fathers of the Foreign Missions at Cahokia after his arrival in 1699; priests from the Seminary of Foreign Missions in Canada continued their ministrations in Cahokia until the year 1763.

Amongst these early priests there were several who would qualify as martyrs, having given their lives for the Faith either here or in other missionary fields. The first to give his life on Illinois soil was the aged and gentle Superior of the Franciscans, Fr. Gabriel de la Ribourde. On May 19, 1680, Fr. Membre and he halted about twenty miles down the Illinois River from Starving Rock. While Fr. Membre and a companion repaired the canoe, Fr. Ribourde wandered into the forest and was slain by a band of Kickapoo Indians. After serving the mission at Cahokia, Fr. St. Cosme moved to the south; here he was waylaid and slain by the Indians in 1706. Another to die for the Faith was Fr. James Gravier, S. J. A libertine Indian, having rebelled against church discipline, attacked Fr. Gravier, wounded him in the arm with an arrow, and thus brought about his death at Mobile, Ala., in 1708. Fr. Sebastian Rale, S. J., a zealous and gifted missionary, became a pawn of war and a victim of the English in the fight with the French. The English placed a price of one thousand pounds sterling on his head. In giving himself up to the English to avert further bloodshed, he was riddled with bullets on Aug. 23, 1724, near the present town of Madison, Me.; his scalp was later sold in Boston. On March 25, 1736, Fr. Anthony Senat, S. J., was burned to death by the Chickasaw Indians at Pontotoc, Miss. The Abbe Joseph Gaston was killed by the Indians near Cahokia in 1730.

Until the Very Rev. John Carroll was appointed the superior of the missions in the thirteen United States on June 6, 1784, the affairs of the Illinois territory were governed by the Bishop of Quebec. From 1784 until 1811 the territory was under the direct supervision of Bishop Carroll, and was attended by Frs. Paul de St. Pierre, Peter Huet de la Valiniere, Gibault, Michael Levadoux and Ricard (Sulpicians), Charles Leander Lussan (Friar), John and Donatian Olivier.

During the administration of the last-named as Vicar General, the Illinois territory passed under the direct supervision of Rt. Rev. Benedict Joseph Flaget, Bishop of the newly erected Diocese of Bardstown (Kentucky), who sent Fr. Savine into the diocese. Rt. Rev. Joseph Rosati was appointed Bishop of the newly founded Diocese of St. Louis March 20, 1827; the Chicago territory then passed under his jurisdiction. Bishop Rosati was especially active and visited all parts of his jurisdiction. He administered confirmation at Kaskaskia every year from 1830 to 1840. In answer to a popular request he appointed Rev. John Mary Irenaeus St. Cyr as resident pastor at Chicago. Fr. St. Cyr celebrated his first Mass in a log cabin on Lake Street May 5, 1833; in October of the same year his new and modest church was dedicated. In 1834 the Diocese of Vincennes was erected to include Indiana and Illinois. The newly appointed Bishop Simon Brute wrote in reference to his visitation of Chicago: "It is now composed of about 400 souls of all countries—French, Canadians, Americans, Irish and a good number of Germans." Frs. Schaefer, O'Meara, de St. Palais and Fisher were appointed to the diocese during the administration of Bishop Brute, as were Frs. Plunket, Hypolite, du Pontavice and Gueguen during the succeeding administration of Bishop de la Hailandiere.

The Fifth Provincial Council of Baltimore (1843) recommended the erection of new sees at Chicago, Hartford, Milwaukee and Little Rock, and repeated the petition for the erection of a see at Pittsburgh. All these requests were granted. Bishop William Quarter was appointed to the see of Chicago, Nov. 23, 1843.

Bishop Quarter was born in King's County, Ireland, Jan. 21, 1806. After attending Maynooth College, he emigrated to America. Upon the completion of his studies for the priesthood at Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, he was ordained Sept. 19, 1829, for the Diocese of New York. He was consecrated first Bishop of Chicago by the Rt. Rev. John Hughes March 10, 1844, in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. On his arrival in Chicago, there were but 20 priests serving the diocese. The Church of St. Mary's was as yet unfinished and had a debt of $5,000 which the Bishop and his brother paid from their own funds. Two years after his arrival there were at least 32 priests serving the diocese; and during the four years of his administration he ordained 21 priests and erected three other churches—St. Peter's, St. Joseph's and St. Patrick's. He opened the first institution of higher education in Chicago—the University of St. Mary of the Lake—July 4, 1846. In September of the same year the Sisters of Mercy came from Pittsburgh to open the first parochial school in the diocese and they later opened academies and hospitals. In April, 1846, Bishop Quarter held the first Diocesan Synod and on Nov. 18 he held the first theological conference—a new departure in the ecclesiastical history of the United States. Bishop Quarter died April 10, 1848, leaving an astounding record of achievements.

James Oliver van de Velde, S. J., succeeded Bishop Quarter. Bishop van de Velde was born in Belgium, April 3, 1795, entered the Society of Jesus at Georgetown, and was ordained priest in Baltimore, Sept. 25, 1827. He was consecrated bishop in St. Francis Xavier Church, St. Louis, Feb. 11, 1849. During his administration an orphan asylum was erected on Wabash Avenue, between Jackson and Van Buren Streets, as well as several schools and churches. After a visit to Rome in 1852 he was transferred to Natchez (Sept., 1853) because of his failing health.

Bishop Anthony O'Regan, his successor, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, 1809. He was educated at Maynooth College, and ordained there in 1833. Having taught in Ireland for fifteen years, he came to America in 1849. He was consecrated Bishop of Chicago in St. Louis July 25, 1854, and installed Sept. 23, 1855. Bishop O'Regan requested the Holy See to divide the diocese and by a decree of 1857 the See of Alton was created. During his episcopate different religious orders came to the diocese and the University of St. Mary of the Lake passed under the supervision of the Holy Cross religious. When Bishop O'Regan resigned his see in 1858 he became titular Bishop of Dora.

His successor, the Rt. Rev. James Duggan, was born in County Kildare, Ireland, May 22, 1825, and ordained priest at St. Louis May 29, 1847. After serving as Auxiliary to Bishop Kenrick for two years he became Bishop of Chicago Jan. 21, 1859. Bishop Duggan organized the parochial school system and introduced numerous religious congregations to the diocese. Because of illness he was relieved of his office in 1869.

During the illness of Bishop Duggan, the Rt. Rev. Thomas Foley acted as Administrator. The great fire demolished about one million dollars worth of ecclesiastical property. After the fire, the new Cathedral of the Holy Name replaced the demolished St. Mary's. During the administration of Coadjutor-Bishop Foley (who never bore the title Bishop of Chicago) the diocese was redivided and the new Diocese of Peoria created. Bishop Foley had been born at Baltimore, March 6, 1822, and ordained Aug. 16, 1846. He was appointed titular Bishop of Pergamum and Coadjutor of Chicago Nov. 19, 1869 and consecrated Feb. 27, 1870 at Baltimore. He died Feb. 19, 1879.

By a decree of the Holy See dated Sept. 10, 1880, the Diocese of Chicago was elevated to the rank of Archdiocese, and the Bishop of Nashville, Patrick Augustine Feehan, was appointed first Archbishop. He had been born in Ireland, Aug. 29, 1829. The new Archbishop gave special care to the charitable institutions of the archdiocese. In the twenty-two years of his administration the Church in Chicago grew tremendously. Schools, hospitals, orphanages, churches were almost doubled, the number of priests was more than doubled, and the increased work necessitated the appointment of an Auxiliary Bishop. Archbishop Feehan died July 12, 1902, greatly mourned by all who had known him.

The second Archbishop of Chicago, the Most Rev. James Edward Quigley, was born in Canada, Oct. 15, 1855, and ordained in Rome, April 13, 1879. Having served in the Diocese of Buffalo for seventeen years, he was consecrated Bishop of Buffalo Feb. 24, 1897. He was installed as the second Archbishop of Chicago, March 11, 1903. Archbishop Quigley was justly styled "the great administrator." When he came to Chicago there were 252 diocesan churches with resident priests and 50 missions; at his death there were 326 churches and 25 missions. In the fall of 1908 the archdiocese was again divided and the Diocese of Rockford erected. De Paul University and Loyola University were established during the occupancy of Archbishop Quigley, as was also the diocesan seminary, Cathedral College. The Catholic Church Extension Society, under the auspices of which the first Catholic Missionary Congress was held, Nov. 16-18, 1908, was founded under his guidance. Archbishop Quigley worked strenuously for the spiritual care of the laboring classes and the foreign-born members of his flock. He died at Buffalo, N. Y., July 10, 1915.

His Eminence, George Cardinal Mundelein, became the next Archbishop of Chicago. Born in New York, July 2, 1872, he attended Manhattan College, St. Vincent's Archabbey, and Propaganda College, Rome, where he was ordained June 8, 1895. He was appointed Auxiliary Bishop of Brooklyn June 30, 1909, and was translated to Chicago, Dec. 9, 1915. During his administration of almost 24 years he established more than 91 parishes; between 600 and 700 buildings were erected. The outstanding memorial to Cardinal Mundelein is the New Major Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake, in the township of Area, now called Mundelein in his honor. In 1935 Collegio Santa Maria del Lago was established in Rome for graduate students of the archdiocese. On March 24, 1924, Archbishop Mundelein was elevated to the cardinal-ate, thus becoming the first Cardinal of the West. The Twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress to which Cardinal Mundelein was host, was celebrated in Chicago, June 20-24, 1926. The Congress was attended by Cardinal Bonzano as Papal Legate, 12 other cardinals, 64 archbishops, 309 bishops, 500 monsignori, 8,000 priests and approximately 1,000,000 pilgrims. The profoundness of devotion and the magnificence of ceremonial made the Congress the grandest spectacle in the history of American Catholicism. The inner life of the archdiocese was especially promoted during the term of Cardinal Mundelein. This was felt in such spheres as the education of children in poorer districts, the revivification of the Holy Name Society, the establishment of Associated Catholic Charities and the erection of Rosary College for the higher education of young women. His Eminence died Oct. 2, 1939, and was succeeded on Jan. 3, 1940, by Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch. Today because of a providential line of saintly and able prelates, because of the unstinting labors of priests and religious, because of the wholehearted cooperation of the laity, the Archdiocese of Chicago is in a flourishing condition. What was a hundred years ago a handful of Catholics in a wilderness is now the see with the largest Catholic population in the United States and the world.

The Diocese of Hartford (1843-1943)

(Written for The National Catholic Almanac by Rev. John S. Kennedy.)

The Diocese of Hartford covers the state of Connecticut and now numbers some 700,000 Catholics. There was no resident priest in Connecticut until fourteen years before the establishment of the diocese in 1843. In colonial times a few Catholics settled in Congregational Connecticut—some of their own accord, some because they were forced to, but none because they were invited or welcomed. Lacking the sustenance of the Mass and the sacraments, without the presence of even one priest, and deprived of the Word of God, many lost their faith. But others in an alien, sometimes hostile, atmosphere, clung devotedly to it.

An occasional priest visited Connecticut prior to the founding of the first parish in its green reaches. It is known that a Jesuit, Fr. Druillettes, came in 1651. For the next century others, too, passed through, bringing some little comfort to the Irish servants who were "sold cheap," or fortifying Catholic residents who would have to renounce with an oath the doctrine of Transubstantiation before they might become citizens. Archbishop John Carroll, the first American bishop, visited New London in 1791 during a trip to and from Boston. Two years later, Fr. John Thayer, a convert from Congregationalism, preached in Norwich. Despite the anti-Catholic feeling in the state, he gave his sermon in the Congregational church on the invitation of the minister. Subsequent priestly visitors and missionaries likewise were allowed the use of Congregational pulpits.

The first New England bishop was the great Cheverus. His see city was Boston, to which he came in 1808. Having jurisdiction over Connecticut, he made several missionary trips through the state. But it was not until Bishop Fenwick had succeeded him in Boston that a resident priest was appointed. In 1828 Bishop Fenwick assigned the Rev. R. D. Woodley as pastor of no less a territory than all of Rhode Island and Connecticut.

In the following year the Bishop came to Hartford to purchase the former Episcopal church for use as Connecticut's first Catholic church. The Episcopalian bishop said to him, "Well, Bishop Fenwick, as we have a fine new church building we will let you have the old one." To which Bishop Fenwick replied very neatly, "Yes, and you have a fine new religion and we will keep the old one." The Rev. Bernard O'Cavanaugh, a studious and literary priest, was the first pastor. His successor was the zealous Fr. Fittou, whose name is revered to this day throughout New England.

The Diocese of Hartford was established on Sept. 18, 1843. The Rev. William Tyler, who had become a Catholic at the age of fifteen and had been serving as Vicar General of the Boston diocese, was named first Bishop of Hartford (1843-49). Although his see city was Hartford, he decided, with Rome's permission, to take up residence in Providence, which had a Catholic population of 2,000 as compared with Hartford's 600. William Tyler, of the ascetic face, was a true missionary bishop in the pioneer tradition. He acted as a kind of parish priest at-large to his scattered flock, travelling constantly in order to see them and to care for them. He sought, and obtained, generous financial help from the Prince Archbishop of Vienne. From Ireland priests came to assist him. He had little to give them in the way of money, for his funds were scant indeed; but he could and did give them the inspiration of a selfless priestly life—hard, busy, and without compensation or comfort. When he died, he left behind almost nothing in the form of material accomplishment, but no diocese has received from its first father a richer heritage of merit and inspiration.

In 1850 a junior diocese, Buffalo, gave Hartford its second bishop, the Rt. Rev. Bernard O'Reilly (1850-56). A native of Ireland, he had been ordained in New York and for twenty years had labored in different parts of New York State. Bishop O'Reilly was vigorous in mind and person. He tirelessly promoted the growth and integration of the Church in his diocese. During his six years' stewardship he established 14 parishes in Connecticut. He had to contend with virulent outbursts of anti-Catholicism, but he was a fearless man and an experienced controversialist. He went to Ireland in 1855 to secure Christian Brothers to teach in his increasing parochial schools: the ship on which he was making his return passage was never heard of after it left Liverpool.

The third Bishop of Hartford found, upon his appointment after a two-year interregnum, that Connecticut now had 27 churches and 26 priests. He was thirty-nine year old Francis P. MacFarland (1857-74). His portraits show an erect, stern-faced man, with a strong profile and intellectual eyes and forehead. He was a native of Pennsylvania and had taught at Fordham before he was given a pastorate in Utica. He was Bishop of Hartford during the Civil War, and some indication of the numerical increase of Catholics in Connecticut is given by the fact that 7,900 were in the ranks of the so-called "Irish Regiment." This increase, spurred even more by the industrial boom following the war, led Bishop MacFarland, perhaps during his visit to Rome for the Vatican Council, to request a division of the diocese. It was effected in 1872, with the state line between Connecticut and Rhode Island as the boundary. Removing to Hartford, Bishop MacFarland said at a farewell ceremony in Providence, "Many of you remember well when Bishop Tyler came, and know the rapid progress Catholicity has made since; the 8,000 Catholics have become more than 200,000, with 100 churches and 111 priests." He did not live long after moving to Hartford, but before his death in 1874 he had purchased land as a cathedral site.

In 1875 Boston became a metropolitan see, with all the New England dioceses belonging to its province. It was as a suffragan of the Archbishop of Boston that the Rt. Rev. Thomas Galberry, an Augustinian Father who was born in Ireland, took up his duties as the fourth Bishop of Hartford (1875-78). During his reign of only twenty months, the cornerstone of the cathedral was laid, on April 29, 1877, with 15,000 people in attendance.

The fifth Bishop of Hartford, the Rt. Rev. Lawrence S. McMahon (1879-93), was born in New Brunswick. After beginning his priestly life in the Diocese of Boston, he served heroically as a chaplain to Union troops in the Civil War. During his fourteen years as Hartford's bishop, he established 48 parishes, dedicated 70 churches, founded 16 parochial schools and the same number of convents. So great were the demands on the priests ministering to the rapidly expanding Catholic population, that it became a commonplace that the life of a priest in Connecticut lasted, on an average, less than ten years. The size and strength of the diocese they were constructing at such cost to themselves were well symbolized by the great cathedral which was consecrated in 1892.

The sixth Bishop of Hartford, the Rt. Rev. Michael Tierney (1894-1908), was a man of vision and a great builder. During his episcopate the diocesan minor seminary, under the patronage of St. Thomas Aquinas, was established. Charitable institutions, notably hospitals and schools, were multiplied. A number of communities of religious women came into the diocese to staff these projects. The many racial elements in Connecticut's body Catholic were recognized by the Bishop's action in sending candidates for the priesthood to provincial seminaries in European countries—Italy, for example, and France, Hungary and Poland—for their higher studies and the acquisition of languages. The standing by this time achieved by the Church in Connecticut was by nothing better signalized than by the spontaneous acceptance of the Bishop of Hartford as one of the principal figures in the life of the state. From scores of Protestant pulpits Bishop Tierney's death was pronounced a grievous civic loss.

Bishop John J. Nilan (1910-34) was the shepherd of Connecticut Catholics during the greatest war in which the country had, up to that time, been engaged. Relative stability marked the social order and the status of the Church during his long episcopate. In this period the Church flourished no less remarkably than before—but the pioneer days and the foundation-building days seemed to be over. The diocese was well organized.

It could take the continuing phenomenal growth in its stride.

Bishop Nilan was succeeded in 1934 by the present Ordinary, the Most Rev. Maurice F. McAuliffe, the first native of the diocese to become its head. In Bishop McAuliffe's time the beginning of a new era in the history of the world, our country, and the Church have come. The numerical growth of the Church in Connecticut continues. Several new parishes are established each year; the diocesan clergy is 600 strong; women religious number almost 2,500; there are 313 churches. But the most striking feature of the latest chapter of the Catholic story is its fresh evidence of the universality of the Church—meaning not so much the fact that the Church reaches and appeals to men of every nationality and class and is everywhere the same, but rather its readiness and ability to meet every new situation in society with an abundance of apposite resources. Thus there is at present an improvement, intensification and diversification of education, social service, Confraternity of Christian Doctrine work, Catholic rural life endeavor, participation in community activity for the general good, presentation of the teaching of the Church as applied to the problems of the hour through such media as labor schools, and so forth.

The Diocese of Little Rock (1843-1943)

(Written for The National Catholic Almanac by Rev. Claiborne Lafferty.)

The history of the Catholic Church in Arkansas begins with the coming of the Spaniards in 1541. When De Soto crossed the Mississippi River, landing at a point commonly believed to be the present site of the city of Helena, there were eight priests with him, the first missionaries. Of these, three died on the soil of Arkansas. Arkansas was again visited by Europeans in 1673, when Marquette and Joliet descended the Mississippi as far as the Arkansas River. It was not, however, until LaSalle conceived the plan of building a string of forts along the Mississippi that a permanent settlement was made in Arkansas. Accompanied by Tonti and several priests, LaSalle reached the Arkansas River in March, 1682. A cross was erected and the "Te Deum" sung. As this was considered an ideal location for a trading post, a group of soldiers was left to build a fort, which was called Arkansas Post.

The territory was under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Bishop of Quebec. In 1698 he sent three priests to the lower Louisiana Territory, in which Arkansas was included; they were joined the following year by two more. While the Jesuits continued to make trips up and down the Mississippi, Arkansas was always one of the stopping places. The first resident priest at Arkansas Post was Fr. Nicholas Foucault, who arrived in 1700. He remained for two years, then was transferred to Mobile. He left the Post with two Indian guides, but was killed a little distance down the river.

In 1763 the territory was ceded to Spain and passed to the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Havana. During the Spanish regime, the religious needs of the people were cared for by the priests at S. Genevieve, Mo., who made regular trips through the Arkansas country.

The United States bought the Louisiana Territory in 1803. With the transfer of civil authority, the country came under the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of John Carroll, Bishop of Baltimore. Because the East which had scarcely enough priests for its own wants was expected to provide for this territory, the Arkansas missions were not visited by a priest for fifteen years. The Diocese of New Orleans was erected in 1816, and Arkansas was included in it. In 1826 the jurisdiction of Arkansas was transferred to the newly constituted Diocese of St. Louis. While Arkansas Post remained the center of Catholicity, new parishes were established at Pine Bluff, Little Rock and New Gascony.

The Diocese of Little Rock was established in 1843. To this see Gregory XVI appointed the Rev. Andrew Byrne. The new diocese comprised Arkansas and the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma. Bishop Byrne was a native of Ireland and a priest of the Diocese of Charleston, South Carolina. He had been one of the theologians at the Second Provincial Council of Baltimore in 1833. He also had served in New York City for a time, and was consecrated in St. Patrick's Cathedral, March 10, 1844, by Bishop Hughes.

The first priest ordained in the Diocese of Little Rock was Rev. Thomas McKeone, whom Bishop Byrne ordained at St. Ambrose's Church, Arkansas Post, Nov. 1, 1845. He lived only seven months after his ordination. The first nuns to come to Little Rock Diocese were the Sisters of Mercy who settled at Little Rock and Fort Smith in 1851. Bishop Byrne died on June 10, 1862.

The see was vacant for five years in the early days of the reconstruction period. The next Bishop was Edward Fitzgerald, who was born at Limerick in 1833. He had studied with the Vincentian Fathers at Perryville, Mo., and was the first graduate of that seminary to become a bishop. He completed his theology at Mt. St. Mary's, Emmitsburg, and was ordained to the priesthood, Aug. 22, 1857, by Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati. After working in Columbus, Ohio, he was consecrated Bishop of Little Rock in St. Patrick's Church, in that city, Feb. 3, 1867. At his coming to Little Rock, the known Catholic population of the diocese was around 1,600 scattered souls. Little Rock had a fine cathedral and about 400 Catholics; Fort Smith had services in a school house on the Post; Pine Bluff had a small frame church which was later washed away; Helena had a church and a school; New Gascony, a plantation town below Pine Bluff, had a church with a large gallery for the Negroes; Napoleon, on the river, had a beautiful church but it was completely destroyed and the town wiped out in the great flood of 1867; there was a small frame church at St. Mary's, below Pine Bluff. This was the total of the Church properties at the time of Bishop Fitzgerald's arrival.

Realizing the necessity of Christian education and the dearth of priests and candidates for the priesthood, the Bishop introduced into the diocese two orders of men: the Benedictine Monks who settled at Subiaco, and the Holy Ghost Fathers who settled at Morrilton. Two orders of Benedictine Nuns and the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth came to take charge of the schools and the hospitals. After providing for the rural section, Bishop Fitzgerald decided to build a cathedral that would accommodate the faithful of Little Rock, for which the cornerstone was laid July 7, 1878; the cathedral is one of the outstanding buildings in the state.

In 1876 the Holy See separated the Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, from the Diocese of Little Rock and made it a Vicariate Apostolic.

On Jan. 21, 1900, Bishop Fitzgerald suffered a stroke of paralysis. He petitioned the Holy See to give him a coadjutor, and Rt. Rev. Msgr. John B. Morris, Vicar General of the Diocese of Nashville, was appointed. Bishop Fitzgerald, after an episcopacy of 41 years, died on Feb. 21, 1907.

The present Bishop, Most Rev. John B. Morris, was born on June 29, 1866, at Hendersonville, Tenn. He received his theological training at the North American College and the Urban College in Rome and was ordained priest June 11, 1892. On April 6, 1906, he was precognized Bishop of Acmonia and Coadjutor of Little Rock with the right of succession; he was consecrated in the cathedral of Nashville on June 11, 1906. One of the new Bishop's first major undertakings was to found St. Joseph Orphanage under the care of the Benedictine Sisters, in September, 1907. From the very beginning of his episcopate he expended particular efforts on the spiritual welfare of the Negroes. He purchased for them a half-block at Sixteenth and Marshal Streets in Little Rock, where they now have a church, rectory, school and convent; and, in 1917 he organized St. John the Baptist Parish in Fort Smith, in care of the Holy Ghost Fathers. There are other Negro parishes throughout the state in charge of these Fathers, the Fathers of the Divine Word and the diocesan priests. Notable among institutions for their care is the one run by the Franciscan Brothers at Pine Bluff.

In 1908 the Bishop brought the Sisters of the Good Shepherd to Hot Springs. In 1920 he invited the Poor Brothers of St. Francis to come to the diocese; these now have a series of splendidly equipped modern buildings at Armstrong Springs. St. John's Seminary was founded in 1911. It is operated and staffed by the diocesan clergy. From its doors emerged priests to serve the missionary dioceses of the South and the Southwest. It counts among its graduates many prominent clergy who have contributed to the welfare of both the Church and the State. Its most distinguished alumnus is Most Rev. Albert L. Fletcher, Auxiliary Bishop of Samos and Auxiliary to the Bishop of Little Rock. Another institution opened by Bishop Morris in late years is the Catholic High School for Boys in Little Rock. The teachers are enrolled from among the diocesan clergy. In 1910 the "Guardian," the official diocesan newspaper was founded. During the summer the advanced theological students at the seminary carry on Evidence work throughout the diocese. They live among the people under the direction of the pastors. While they are absent from the seminary, its buildings are given over to lay retreats held weekly.

In December, 1939, Pius XII named the Vicar-General of the Diocese, Most Rev. Albert L. Fletcher, Auxiliary Bishop of Little Rock. He was consecrated by Archbishop Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate, April 25, 1940. Bishop Fletcher was born in Arkansas, Oct. 28, 1896, and reared in the state, the descendant of a pioneer family.

In this centenary year there are 97 diocesan priests and 58 priests of religious orders; 126 churches; four religious orders of men; seven religious orders of women; one seminary for diocesan clergy; one seminary of a religious order; two colleges for boys; ten academies; one orphan asylum; and ten hospitals.

The Archdiocese of Milwaukee (1843-1943)

Wisconsin formed part of the vast territory to which Spain laid claim by reason of the discovery of Florida. No Spanish explorer, however, came within miles of it. In 1608 Champlain laid the foundations of New France when he founded Quebec on the St. Lawrence River, and in a few years the adventurous French explorers penetrated into the heart of the continent, together with intrepid missionaries. In 1665 the Jesuit missionary, Fr. Claude Allouez, established the first known mission in Wisconsin at La Pointe du Sainte Esprit, now Bayfield; in 1669 he founded the mission of St. Francis Xavier at Green Bay which became one of the central missions for the Jesuits in the Northwest; in 1672 he founded another permanent mission, which was St. James, south of Green Bay. Among the Jesuit missionaries who labored in Wisconsin was the famed and saintly Fr. Marquette. He, together with Joliet, on their expedition to explore the Mississippi River in 1673, crossed Wisconsin from Green Bay to Prairie du Chien by way of the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers. Despite hardships and setbacks, these missions as well as others in the surrounding territory were continued for a hundred years. Conversions among the Indians were slow and often insincere; yet at the end of a hundred years about half the Indians were good Christians. These early missions were closed as a result of the suppression of the Jesuits by the French and the capitulation of New France to England.

Though Wisconsin became American territory as a result of the War of Independence, it was not until the year 1796 that the English ceased their occupation of Wisconsin following Jay's treaty. Thenceforward this territory was under the jurisdiction of Bishop Carroll of Baltimore. With the erection of new dioceses in the course of years, Wisconsin came successively under the care of the Bishops of Bardstown (1808), Cincinnati (1821) and Detroit (1833). The Catholic missions through these years remained centers of Catholicism, though it was seldom that they had a priest until the erection of the Detroit Diocese. The old French and Indian Catholics remained, and in the first three decades of the nineteenth century there came many Irish and German Catholic immigrants. With the erection of the Diocese of Dubuque in 1837, still more active work was done in the old Wisconsin missions.

On Nov. 28, 1843, Pope Gregory XVI erected the Diocese of Milwaukee. The Most Rev. John Martin Henni was at the same time appointed the first Bishop. He was born in Switzerland, June 15, 1805, pursued his philosophical and theological studies in Rome and, coming to the United States in 1828, finished them in the Seminary at Bardstown, Kentucky. He was ordained priest at Cincinnati, Feb. 2, 1829. While a priest in the Cincinnati Diocese he founded the first German Catholic newspaper in the United States, "Der Wahrheitsfreund." He was consecrated Bishop, March 19, 1844, by Bishop Purcell in Cincinnati. On reaching his diocese the new Bishop had 20 congregations of Catholics (approximately 20,000 souls in all), 14 churches, some still in the process of construction, and 4 or 5 priests. A large-scale immigration was just beginning, and to meet the problems created by it was the Bishop's constant effort. Realizing that priests could not be obtained from other sections to any great extent, one of his first acts was to start a seminary. Under Fr. Heiss and Dr. Salzmann, who came from Austria in 1847, St. Francis de Sales Seminary, the nursery for priests of the Northwest, was founded and conducted. Religious, priests, Brothers and Sisters were introduced to cope with the multifarious needs of the dioceses. In 1847 the Bishop laid the cornerstone for the Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist, and in 1853 it was consecrated by Archbishop, afterwards Cardinal, Bedini. The growth of the Church in the United States has been phenomenal, but nowhere was it more evident than in the Diocese of Milwaukee at this time. After ten years the diocese numbered 100,000 Catholics and 73 priests; and after twenty-five years it numbered 300,000 Catholics and 177 priests. In 1868 two new dioceses, Green Bay and La Crosse, were erected largely out of the territory of Bishop Henni. In 1875 Milwaukee was made an archdiocese by Pope Pius IX, and on June 3, 1875, Bishop Henni received the Sacred Pallium as the first Archbishop. On Sept. 1, 1881, almost forty years after his consecration as Bishop the "Patriarch of the Northwest," looking back on a busy day, closed his eyes and passed to his reward.

Rt. Rev. Michael Heiss, who had come to Milwaukee with Bishop Henni as his secretary, succeeded him as Archbishop. Born of peasant stock in Pfahldorf, Bavaria, April 12, 1818, he took his higher studies at the University of Munich and the seminary at Eichstatt. Ordained at Nyphenburg, Oct. 18, 1840, he was attracted by the American missions and arrived here two years later. After pastoral work in Covington, Kentucky, and Milwaukee, he held the rectorship of St. Francis Seminary from 1856 to 1868. He was then appointed first Bishop of the new Diocese of La Crosse and was consecrated by Bishop Henni, Sept. 6, 1868. In 1880 he was appointed Coadjutor to the aged Archbishop Henni, succeeding him on his death, Sept. 7, 1881.

Being an expert canonist Archbishop Heiss gave more definitive organization to the diocese, and presided over the first Provincial Council of Milwaukee in 1886. It was due probably to the influence of Archbishop Heiss more than to any other that the "Bennet Law," a law attacking the Lutheran and Catholic parochial schools, was repealed. He was one of the bishops who helped establish the Catholic University of America and the author of several important theological works. He died at La Crosse, March 26, 1890.

The third Archbishop, Frederic Xavier Katzer, was born in Ebensee, Upper Austria, Feb. 7, 1844. He took his higher studies at Linz, and came to America in 1864. Finishing his studies at the Milwaukee diocesan seminary of St. Francis, he was ordained priest by Bishop Henni, Dec. 21, 1866. For some years he taught mathematics, philosophy and theology at St. Francis Seminary. Appointed third Bishop of Green Bay, he was consecrated by Archbishop Heiss, Sept. 21, 1886; on the death of Archbishop Heiss he was appointed third Archbishop of Milwaukee, Jan. 30, 1891. His administration was marked by a solidifying of the gains made by his two predecessors. He carried the fight against the "Bennet Law" to the end. Learned theologian that he was, he issued an important pastoral on secret societies in 1895. He died on July 20, 1903.

Sebastian Gebhard Messmer, the fourth Archbishop, was born at Goldach, Switzerland, Aug. 29, 1847. He took his philosophy and theology at the University of Innsbruck, Austria, and was ordained priest there, July 23, 1871. In the same year he came to America, entered the Diocese of Newark and taught at Seton Hall College, South Orange, New Jersey. His ability as a canonist was recognized, and his services were employed at the third Plenary Council of Baltimore, 1884. Called to the chair of Canon Law in the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C., he first went to Rome for a two-year course in Roman civil law. He taught at the University until his appointment as third Bishop of Green Bay. He was consecrated in St. Peter's Church, Newark, March 27, 1892, by Bishop Zardetti of St. Cloud.

He succeeded to the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, Nov. 28, 1903.

Archbishop Messmer was known for his profound learning and interest in education which he kept throughout his whole life even during the busiest years of his administration. He carefully looked after the education of the Indians in the Milwaukee Archdiocese, erected forty parochial schools, improved the diocesan seminary in both equipment and staff, and ever remained in contact with the affairs of the Catholic University of America. He was alive to the social and economic problems of the day, giving his sympathy and support to the laboring classes by promoting trade unionism. During his incumbency 10 hospitals and sanitariums and 15 additional charitable institutions were erected in the archdiocese. His staunch loyalty to the United States during the First World War had a great influence on the German-speaking people throughout the country. On a trip to his birthplace in Switzerland, in hope of recovering his health, he died, Aug. 4, 1930.

Samuel Alphonsus Stritch was the next occupant of the see. He was born in Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 17, 1887. He studied at St. Gregory's College, Cincinnati, and the North American College in Rome from which he was graduated at the age of twenty-two with a Doctorate in philosophy and theology. He was ordained priest in Rome, May 21, 1909. Returning to America, he labored first in Memphis, then in Nashville, Tenn. Appointed Bishop of Toledo, Ohio, he was consecrated by Archbishop Henry Moeller of Cincinnati, Nov. 30, 1921. He was named Archbishop of Milwaukee, Aug. 26, 1930.

Archbishop Stritch's ten years in the Milwaukee Archdiocese were marked by an intensification of the spiritual life and external activities of both clergy and laity. During his tenure of office Catholic charities were increased fivefold; Catholic Action was made effective by coordinating and expanding the numerous societies; youth programs were initiated or developed; the Catholic Youth Organization of the archdiocese was so well established that it became a model for the rest of the country; in the educational field a standard was set that is comparable to the best in the country, special instruction for underprivileged and exceptional children and special teacher training for such a course being established. He was transferred, Jan. 5, 1940, to the Archdiocese of Chicago.

Moses Elias Kiley, his successor, was born Nov. 13, 1876, in Margaree, Nova Scotia. His higher studies were pursued in St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, and in the North American College, Rome. Ordained priest in Rome, he returned to America to engage in pastoral work in the archdiocese of Chicago. He was the first diocesan supervisor of Catholic Charities in the Chicago Archdiocese, a post he held from 1916 till 1926. In 1926 he returned to Rome as the spiritual director of the North American College. Elected to the See of Trenton, New Jersey, he was consecrated Bishop in Rome by Cardinal Rossi March 17, 1934. On Jan. 5, 1940 he was promoted to the Metropolitan See of Milwaukee as its sixth Archbishop. Archbishop Kiley is continuing the program of his predecessor and in addition has reorganized the seminary and is restoring the cathedral.

In contrast with the heathen tribes that inhabited Wisconsin three hundred years ago, and in contrast with the meagre handful of Catholics who dwelt in the Diocese of Milwaukee at its foundation one hundred years ago, the present status of the diocese, territorially much smaller, is a glorious one. The 4 or 5 priests of a hundred years ago have increased to 850; the 14 churches have increased to 326 churches and 43 chapels; the 20,000 Catholics have increased to 460,000. In addition to that, the diocese has 24 high schools, 191 parochial schools and 46 charitable institutions.

The Diocese of Pittsburgh (1843-1943)

Fort Duquesne — the present day Pittsburgh—was built by the French between 1753-1754. The honor of having celebrated the first Mass in what is the present diocese probably belongs to Fr. Bonnacamp, S. J., who accompanied Celeron on his expedition of 1749. Several Franciscan Friars—Denys Baron, Gabriel Amheuser, and Luke Collet—accompanied the French troops in their campaigns. The first chapel inside Fort Duquesne was erected some time after April 16, 1754, and was named "The Assumption of the Blessed Virgin of the Beautiful River."

In 1758 the French retired from the territory and the settlement became known as Pittsburgh. During the decades immediately following the French retirement, no priests worked in this territory although the number of Catholics increased. Probably the first priest to come to Pittsburgh was Fr. Peter Huet de la Vilieniere, who walked from Philadelphia. Occasionally other priests would be able to spend a few days or weeks there in spiritual ministrations.

The first permanent Catholic settlement in the present diocese was on the present site of St. Vincent's Archabbey at what was then known as "Sportsman's Hall." Here Fr. Theodore Browsers, a Franciscan priest, organized a permanent Catholic settlement in 1790. In March, 1789, property was obtained at Greensburg, and there in the following June Fr. John B. Causse, likewise a Franciscan, said Mass for the first time. Fr. Patrick Lonergan, of the same Order, settled a colony and established a church at Waynesburg in 1799 or 1800.

One of the most interesting settlements was that of the "Rev. Mr. Smith," Demetrius Gallitzin, son of an illustrious Russian family. In youth he became acquainted with many of the prominent atheistic free-thinkers of French society, but through the prayers of his converted mother he embraced the Catholic faith in the Latin Church. Having come to the United States, he met Bishop Carroll and decided to enter the Sulpician Seminary at Baltimore. He was ordained in 1795 by Bishop Carroll, joining the Sulpicians. In 1799 he came to Loretto, Cambria County; and in the vicinity he erected churches, founded villages and encouraged Catholic settlers by grants of land. After forty-one years of labor and energy in establishing a stable and thoroughly Catholic community, and having spent $150,000 of family endowments, he died, May 6, 1840, leaving a flock of 10,000 Catholics. Although his station was situated in what is now the Diocese of Altoona, his mission field included a great part of what constitutes the present Diocese of Pittsburgh.

Also worthy of special mention are the labors of Fr. Peter Heilbron who came to Sportsman's Hall, Nov. 17, 1799, and remained to the time of his death seventeen years later. He was the first priest regularly to attend the faithful of Pittsburgh. Fr. Heilbron was succeeded by Fr. W. F. X. O'Brien of Washington, D. C., who became the first resident pastor of Pittsburgh. Fr. O'Brien lodged for a while in the home of John Kelley and soon afterwards rented a frame house on State Street—now Second Avenue—between Smithfield and Grant Streets, the front room of which he used for a chapel. In 1808 he started St. Patrick's Church on a lot outside the town which was donated by Col. James O'Hara. It was dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Michael Egan, O. F. M., on his visit—the first of a Bishop to this part of the state—August, 1811. During the greater part of the ministry of Fr. O'Brien the only other priests in Western Pennsylvania were Fr. Gallitzin, Fr. Heilbron at Sportsman's Hall, and a pastor at Sugar Creek from 1806 to 1811.

After a twelve-year ministry Fr. O'Brien had to retire, and was succeeded by Fr. Charles Bonaventure McGuire, an Irish Franciscan who had taught for some time at St. Isidore's College, Rome. Fr. McGuire was admirably gifted to cope with the growing city and its problems. He wished to found a Franciscan monastery and a convent of the Poor Clares in Pittsburgh: for the former he purchased a two-storied log house and erected a log chapel at a short distance. Fr. Anthony Kenny, who was probably born in Pittsburgh, joined the community. A man of exceptional austerity, he practised the severest mortifications on his feeble body. After having been assistant pastor for a couple of years he died with a reputation for holiness, Feb. 5, 1827, at the age of 26. He was the first priest to die in the city. Among the accomplishments of Fr. McGuire may be mentioned the building of St. Paul's Church, which was finished and dedicated, May 4, 1834, and the establishment of a Poor Clare Monastery at Nunnery Hill: this latter was transferred to another site but closed in 1837. Fr. McGuire died of cholera, July 17, 1833, and was succeeded by Fr. O'Reilly, who completed St. Paul's and introduced the Sisters of Charity to the diocese. The sisters conducted an orphan asylum, 1838-45, and in 1835 started Catholic schools. The first permanent religious community of men was established in Pittsburgh April 8, 1839, when the Redemptorists undertook the care of St. Patrick's parish and established St. Philomena's.

In the summer of 1826 Bishop Conwell of Philadelphia visited the eastern part of the present diocese of Pittsburgh and appointed Fr. Gallitzin Vicar General for the western part of the state. Bishop Conwell had thought of making this missionary his coadjutor, but for some reason this did not take place.

In 1823 Fr. Gallitzin suggested that the territory be raised to a bishopric. Other authorities made a similar proposal, and in January, 1836, the documents erecting the new see of Pittsburgh were being prepared in Rome. The matter was dropped for time, but at the Fifth Provincial Council of Baltimore the erection of the see was again recommended. Finally by the brief, "Universi Dominici," dated Aug. 11, 1843, the see was erected and St. Paul's was made the Cathedral Church; the Rev. Michael O'Connor was appointed the first Bishop.

Bishop O'Connor was born Sept. 27, 1810, at Cobh, Ireland. He was educated at the Urban College of the Propaganda, Rome, and ordained June 11, 1833. He was for a time Vice-Rector of the Irish College in the Eternal City, and professor of Sacred Scripture at the Propaganda; and for five years he was engaged in the sacred ministry in Ireland. In 1839 on the invitation of Bishop Kenrick he came to Philadelphia and was professor at St. Charles Borromeo's Seminary for some time. He was consecrated Bishop, Aug. 15, 1843, in Rome. On his return from Rome he brought with him from Ireland seven of the newly founded Sisters of Mercy. At his arrival he found a diocese of 33 churches, 16 priests and 25,000 Catholics. In June, 1844, the first Diocesan Synod was held; a church was shortly thereafter opened for the colored; in the same year the publication of "The Catholic" was commenced, and St. Michael's Seminary established. The following religious communities entered the diocese: Benedictines, establishing an Abbey at Beatty (1847); Franciscans from Ireland, settling at Loretto (1848); Sisters of Notre Dame and Passionists from Rome (1852).

By a Bull dated April 29, 1853, the new see of Erie was carved out of the original territory; and Bishop O'Connor was appointed its first Bishop at his own request. The people of Pittsburgh soon presented a petition to the Holy See, asking for the return of Bishop O'Connor; and the Holy See in February, 1854, restored the former bishop. On May 23, 1860, he resigned his see; and soon after entered the Jesuit Order. He died at Woodstock, Md., Oct. 18, 1872. The condition of the diocese at the time of his resignation is as follows: 86 priests, 77 churches, 1 seminary and a Catholic population of 50,000.

Rev. Michael Domenec, C. M., succeeded to the see. He was born, Dec. 27, 1816, at Ruez, Tarragona, Spain. Educated at the Lazarist Seminary, Paris, he became a Vincentian, and was ordained June 30, 1839, at Perryville by Bishop Rosati, C. M. For some time he taught in the Perryville Seminary and helped to found St. Vincent's College, Cape Girardeau, Mo. He had charge of the diocesan seminary at Philadelphia before he was elected to the See of Pittsburgh, Sept. 18, 1860. On Dec. 9, 1860, he was consecrated at Pittsburgh by Archbishop Kenrick. During his episcopacy new churches, schools, orphanages and asylums were erected. In 1862 he went to Madrid to present the views of the American Government on the possible recognition of the Confederate States by the Spanish Government. During the later part of his episcopacy, out of the diocese a new see was erected at Allegheny City, to which he was transferred Jan. 11, 1876. Under pressure of ill health, Bishop Domenec resigned the See of Allegheny City and died at Tarragona, Jan. 5, 1878.

The third Bishop of the diocese, the Rt. Rev. John Tuigg, was born Feb. 19, 1820, at Donaghmore, County Cork. He attended All Hallows College, Dublin, and then St. Michael's Seminary, Pittsburgh, where he was ordained, May 14, 1850, by Bishop O'Connor. He was consecrated, March 19, 1876, at Pittsburgh by Archbishop James F. Wood of Philadelphia. He undertook the care of the diocese in a particularly dark period of church history in Western Pennsylvania. Clerical and lay factions were at loggerheads; mistrust and apprehension due to the recent division of the diocese were rife. Thanks to his zeal, firmness and personal poverty, confidence was again restored. The Holy See appointed him administrator of the vacant See of Allegheny City, and this action greatly reduced the bitterness of the situation. Bishop Tuigg died Dec. 7, 1889, at Altoona. It is interesting to note that the Diocese of Allegheny City was suppressed by a Bull dated July 1, 1889.

The Rt. Rev. Richard Phelan, the next Bishop, was born at Kilkenny, Ireland, Jan. 1, 1828. He received his early education at St. Kieran's College, in his native city and completed his priestly studies at St. Mary's, Baltimore. He was ordained at Pittsburgh, May 4, 1854, by Bishop O'Connor. After serving as Vicar General, he was consecrated Coadjutor of Pittsburgh Aug. 2, 1885, by Archbishop Patrick J. Ryan of Philadelphia; he succeeded to the see Dec. 7, 1889. Through his long priestly ministry of thirty years he was well acquainted with the condition of the diocese and his episcopacy thus gave great promise. He accomplished much. The large congregations, requiring the ministry of pastors who spoke their languages, were soon attended by priests of the respective nationalities. In May, 1901, the See of Altoona was established from part of the Pittsburgh territory. Bishop Phelan's genius for organization was shown especially during those fifty years when Pittsburgh became the great iron, steel and coke metropolis and he ably coped with the apostolic problems created by the great influx of foreign nationalities, and the bigotry which was at times prevalent. His death took place at Idlewood, Pa., Dec. 20, 1904, after an episcopate of almost twenty years.

The Rt. Rev. John F. Regis Canevin succeeded him. He was born in Westmoreland County, June 5, 1853, and educated at St. Vincent's College and Seminary, Beatty, Pa. Ordained June 4, 1879, at Pittsburgh by Bishop Tuigg, he served the diocese for twenty-four years in various posts. His consecration took place Feb. 24, 1903. Archbishop John Ryan of Philadelphia was the officiating prelate, and he succeeded to the see Dec. 20, 1904. The Pittsburgh Apostleship under the direction of Very Rev. Edward P. Griffin, in the period under consideration, contributed outstanding aid to the spread of Catholicity in the sparsely populated districts. During the term of Bishop Canevin 33 English, 19 German, 17 Polish, 13 Italian, 16 Slavish, 1 Lithuanian, 3 Croatian, 2 Slovak, 3 Hungarian, 1 Kreimer, 1 Syrian and 30 other churches were erected. A conference of Christian Charities, which incorporated all individual and organizational Catholic Charities in the diocese, has done excellent work, especially in the care of neglected and maltreated children, the placement of immigrants in becoming positions, and the relieving of destitute families. Numerous institutions of an educational nature also have been established, especially for the care of the destitute and afflicted. Bishop Canevin did much to solve the special problems of his diocese. Three-fifths of the diocesan population speak a foreign tongue; the Gospel is read in ten languages. The difficulties in preaching the Gospel are largely met by the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. Lay missionaries of this organization working under the direction of priests bring the doctrine of Christ to thousands of workers in the numerous industries. In 1921 these missionaries had under their direction about 15,000 children. To equip these teachers a school had been established with a graded course of two years leading to a diploma. Bishop Canevin, after a fruitful episcopate, resigned the see, Nov. 26, 1920; he died March 22, 1927.

Most Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, the present occupant of the see, was born Oct. 8, 1873, at Cambria, Pa. He received his education at St. Vincent's College and Seminary, Beatty, and was ordained July 2, 1898, at Latrobe, by Bishop Phelan. He was engaged in various capacities in the diocese from 1898 to 1921, when he was appointed Bishop, and on June 29 he was consecrated by Archbishop Canevin. In the twenty-one years that Bishop Boyle has governed the diocese the Catholic population of the area has increased by 133,000 people, the total Catholic population being today 683,067 people; 64 new churches and missions have been opened, bringing the total to 448; the number of priests in the diocese has increased by 189, giving a total of 812 priests active today, 602 of whom are diocesan and 210 members of religious orders.

An educational campaign conducted by Bishop Boyle throughout the diocese has resulted in a remarkable increase in the secondary schools. Central Catholic, opened in 1928, and North Catholic, opened in 1939, are large district high schools, educating 1,600 and 1,300 boys respectively. Many parishes in these same districts have opened high schools to take care of their girls. Today there are 6,100 boys and girls in Catholic high schools, a total increase of 4,000 over 1921. The total Catholic school population has increased by 12,400, giving a total of 86,304 boys and girls in the elementary and secondary schools in the diocese today. In conjunction with the Pittsburgh School Board a plan has been devised by which Catholic pupils in public high schools are now being freed for regular periods of instruction. A program of Catholic Action, sponsored by the Diocesan Union of Holy Name Societies and the Diocesan Union of Sodalties, has done effective work, notably in developing the Retreat movement. In July, 1940, the Catholic Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania was formed to further historical research and to plan a commemoration of the centenary of the founding of the diocese during 1943.

ANTI-CATHOLIC MOVEMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES

Since seventeenth-century England was the mother country of the United States, it was natural that the language, opinions and modes of thinking prevalent in that country should take root in the colonies. Anti-Catholic prejudice was, for that reason, found in English-speaking America from the very start. For in England of that day, the Church was subjected to tremendous discrimination. What had originally been a theological bitterness had, with the growth of English nationalism, turned into a political hate. England's growth and expansion were threatened by France and Spain, both strong Catholic powers. The Church was, in the popular mind, identified with these national rivals, and as the result there was a widespread feeling of distrust and suspicion toward her. The colonists, having brought these prejudices with them, a conflict with Catholicism was inevitable in the New World wherever settled by the English.

The Colonies

The British Crown helped to foster this attitude by the restrictions against Catholics embodied in all colonial charters. These charters, while not actually forbidding the entry of Catholics, contained provisions curtailing the freedom of worship and the exercise of political rights by Catholics.

Virginia. In 1641 and 1642 the Virginia House of Burgesses provided that thereafter no "popish recusants" were to hold office in the colony and that any priest entering its borders was to leave immediately on being warned by the governor; Catholics were likewise disenfranchised.

Massachusetts. In New England conditions were much the same. In 1629, even before sailing, the Puritans stated in the "General Consideration for the Plantation in New England" that the new settlement was to "raise a bulwark against the kingdom of anti-Christ which the Jesuits labor to rear up in all parts of the world." In the first year of the history of the Massachusetts Bay Colony Sir Christopher Gardiner was banished on the mere suspicion that he was a Catholic. In 1647 the General Court decreed that any Jesuit or priest coming within the colony was to be banished, and, if he should return, executed.

New York was also troubled. Governor Thomas Dongan, an appointee of James II, was a Catholic and his tolerance permitted the entrance of many Catholics fleeing from persecution in the other colonies. This caused alarm among the Protestant groups, ever fearful of a "popery center" being established in the colonies. A revolt ensued against Catholicism, and the Protestants placed Jacob Leisler in power and called an assembly which agreed "to suspend all Roman Catholics from command and places of trust." Reputed Catholics were also arrested and an attempt was made to remove all Catholics from the colony. Leisler was subsequently removed in favor of a regularly appointed governor, but conditions were not improved. Office holders were required to sign a declaration against the doctrine of Transubstantiation and to take the sacrament according to the rites of the Church of England.

New Hampshire. In some of the colonies, though the feeling of anti-Catholicism was strong, it was less aggressive. Thus the first assembly of New Hampshire in 1680 gave the franchise to "all Englishmen being Protestants" who met the age and property qualifications. In 1696 the conspiracy against William and Mary aroused Protestant prejudice, and the New Hampshire legislature required all inhabitants to take an oath against the Pope and the doctrines of the Catholic religion.

Pennsylvania. In the beginning Penn, the Quaker founder of Pennsylvania, did his utmost to provide religious freedom for all. Eleven years after the final colonial charter was granted, however, anti-Catholic opinion had become so strong, and the pressure of the Established Church on the Crown so insistent, that laws were passed in the colony forbidding anyone to hold public office who would not deny the Real Presence and declare the Mass idolatrous.

Rhode Island. Even in Rhode Island, one of the most tolerant of all the colonies, Catholics felt the sting of bigotry. When Roger Williams fled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony, he obtained a charter for Rhode Island from Charles II which guaranteed "full liberty in religious discernments," and provided that no one was to be "molested, punished, disquieted or called in question for any difference in opinion in matters of religion." However, Catholics were excluded from voting by a law passed in 1664. (Whether this law was actually put into effect in 1664 is questioned, but at any rate it was added by a committee of revision in 1744.) In the Volume of Laws for 1719 there is a statute providing that all men professing Christianity, "Roman Catholics alone excepted," shall have liberty to choose and be chosen for civil and military offices.

Maryland. In 1632 the English Crown gave a charter to Cecil Calvert, second Lord Baltimore, making him a patron of all churches established within his grant of Maryland. This implied toleration for Catholics, since Baltimore himself was a Catholic; but the concession was propounded in veiled terms so that Massachusetts and Virginia would not be offended. Thus in 1634, the Calverts established a land of sanctuary where those of "every creed might find an end of persecution and a peaceful home." Yet anti-Catholicism flared up in this Catholic-sponsored colony of Maryland in 1645 when William Clayborne, secretary of the Colony of Virginia, attacked the colony. The year 1649 saw the passage of the General Toleration Act which declared that "no one believing in Jesus Christ should be molested in his or her religion." This Act attracted the Puritans of New England, and by 1654 the Puritans had gained such control of the government of Maryland that they had the Toleration Act repealed. Though Baltimore's government was again in control in 1658 with the result that the Toleration Act was enforced, by 1671 the predominance of Anglicans again rendered the position of Catholics uncertain. John Coode led a Protestant uprising in 1676, on the pretext that the Senecas and "Papists" were planning to massacre the Protestants living in the isolated districts. Shortly after the accession of William and Mary to the throne, Lord Baltimore was accused of being a Jacobite; and under this pretense he was deprived of his rights as proprietor of the colony of Maryland. The Crown took over the colony, and the Church of England became the established religion in 1692.

French Influence

England's wars with Catholic Spain and France over the colonies aggravated the already sad plight of the Catholic colonist. Anti-Catholicism loomed more and more as the patriotic duty for the loyal subjects of the Crown. Thus were prejudice and patriotism made synonymous during this period of struggle.

In 1759, after more than half a century of intermittent wars, France surrendered to the victorious English and the Articles of Capitulation were drawn up; in 1763 the Treaty of Paris was signed. The Articles and Treaty guaranteed to the King's new subjects the free exercise of their religion. However, Article IV of the Treaty contained the qualifying clause, "so far as the laws of Great Britain permit." The French representatives protested, and some concessions were granted in favor of the French Catholics. Specifically, no provision had been made for ordaining clergymen. To rectify this a sympathetic governor aired the colonists' grievances in London. Some time later Rev. Oliver Briand was consecrated a Bishop in France. He returned to Canada and was known as "superintendent of the clergy," but his episcopal duties had to be performed without the insignia of his office. The liberal policy thus begun by the British was to develop slowly, and finally to emerge in the Quebec Act of 1774. One section of the Act concerning religion gave full freedom of religion to Canadian Catholics, and stated that the "clergy of the said church may hold, receive and enjoy their accustomed dues and the rights with respect to such persons only as shall profess the said religion." Likewise the Act freed the Catholic Church in the territory northwest of the Ohio from the penal laws of England and her colonies.

The passage of the Quebec Act unfortunately coincided with the adoption of the so-called "Intolerable Acts" which were, as their name implies, especially odious to the Americans. Consequently it shared in the colonists' hatred of these punitive measures. Samuel Adams, an arch-agitator of his day, in his address to the Mohawks cried: "Brothers . . . they have made a law to establish the religion of the Pope in Canada which lies so near you. We much fear some of your children will be induced, instead of worshiping the only true God, to pay his dues to images made in their own hands." Adams' views were shared by many others, and it was mainly through his efforts that the later Puritan bigotry flared up once more. King and Parliament were ridiculed for this Act, which was represented as surrounding the colonists on all sides by enemies. Consequently the American Continental Congress of 1774 balked at accepting the Quebec Act.

When in 1775 the colonists began to break from their mother country, under the impact of the emergency the anti-Catholic spirit began to wane somewhat. Catholics, in proportion to their numbers, played an important part in the struggle for freedom. The Carroll family especially was outstanding, and their important work helped to show that Catholics were wholeheartedly in sympathy with the American cause. Of Catholics, Fr. John Carroll wrote to a contemporary detractor: "Their blood flowed as freely to cement the fabric of independence, as that of any of their fellow citizens. They concurred with perhaps greater unanimity than any other body of men in recommending and promoting that government from whose influence America anticipates all the blessings of justice, peace, plenty, good order and civil and religious liberty." As a sign of a growing change in the general attitude, it may be noted that General Washington, on one notable occasion, intervened to prevent the Army in New England from participating in the orgies of a Pope's Day.

On February 15, 1776, the Continental Congress appointed a committee, whose members were Benjamin Franklin, Samuel Chase and Charles Carroll, to approach the Canadians in an attempt to gain their aid in the revolutionary struggle. Carroll's French education and his religious affiliations made him acceptable to the Catholics in Canada. Fr. John Carroll was also asked to accompany the delegation so that he might use his influence with the Canadian clergy. The commission, however, failed in its purpose since the reaction of the colonies to the Quebec Act was still fresh in the minds of the Canadians; yet that the colonists should recognize the power of the Canadian Catholics to help them was a blow to bigotry and prejudice.

When in 1778 Catholic France became an ally of the colonies, the cry of "No Popery" was heard only from the English Tories in America. Many distinguished French Catholics took a leading part in the military operations. Their presence and devotion to the American cause did much to allay suspicion.

A more general spirit of toleration resulting from the common struggle for political liberty helped to prepare the ground for an explicit statement of religious freedom.

Effect of the U. S. Constitution

Anti-Catholicism was too deeply rooted in America to expire immediately under the influence of the French alliance and the Declaration of Independence. Though the principle of religious freedom had gained ground during the war, still only four of the new states (Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and Maryland) laid aside the old penal laws and permitted Catholics absolute equality with other citizens. In the Bill of Rights drafted by the Virginia Convention of 1776 a statement of religious freedom was embodied. It held that "all men are equally entitled to the free exercise of religion, according to the dictates of conscience." Gradually this principle became the model for other states. The Federal Constitutional Convention of 1787, however, failed to give a sufficiently strong statement of religious liberty. Some fears of Catholicism were voiced in the ratifying conventions of the various states, and though these sentiments were in a distinct minority there was a general feeling that a more explicit expression was needed. The First Amendment to the Constitution, therefore, provided that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

The Federalist party which was a power until 1800 showed, despite the Constitution, an antipathy to foreigners and a tendency to maintain the political superiority of Protestantism in the new states. Catholics, although free to worship according to their consciences and to support their own churches, for years remained disenfranchised in many sections but were taxed for the support of public Protestant institutions. With Jefferson's election in 1800 the Federalists lost their power. By this time, too, many of the states had relaxed their rulings and replaced them with liberal constitutions, and the American Catholic came on an equal footing, at least legally, with his fellow citizens.

At the time of the Constitutional Convention the number of Catholics in America was about 35,000 out of a total population of 3,000,000. Soon after the organization of the government many French, German and especially Irish Catholics entered America. This mass immigration continued during the early decades of the nineteenth century. The early years of that century were not without demonstrations against Catholics, though such outbreaks were for the most part insignificant.

The Native American Party

During the War of 1812 religious prejudice again subsided, but shortly after the Peace of Ghent was signed outbreaks of bigotry once more began. Prominent in beating the drums of hate were "The American Protestant Vindicator" and the "Protestant," leading anti-Catholic newspapers of the time. In 1835 the Native American party was formally organized in New York City. For about ten years it existed as a political body only in those states where foreigners and Catholics were numerous and powerful enough to cause alarm. The storm center of the Nativist movement in Philadelphia was the school question. In November, 1843, Bishop Kendrick petitioned the school board of that city to permit Catholic children the liberty of using the Catholic version of the Bible where Scripture-reading was prescribed. The board ruled that no children whose parents objected to Bible reading were obliged to be present at Bible exercises. This caused great furor, and Catholics were accused of excluding the Bible from the public schools. In 1844 rioting followed, in which two Catholic churches, St. Michael's and St. Augustine's, and a convent were burned to the ground. In July, 1845, the first Native American convention was held at Philadelphia.

The convention issued a document warning Americans of "foreign influence." The Catholic Church was not mentioned by name, but it was unmistakably referred to as "a body, armed with political power, in a country of whose system it is ignorant, and in whose institutions it feels little interest, except for the purpose of personal advancement." The Church was described as having "armed and equipped militia companies wearing costumes and insignia of foreign description, with words of command given in a foreign tongue." The document promulgated a set of principles which stated, among other things, that, as no foreigner could entirely forget his fatherland and become a voter to be trusted, it was better to limit the franchise to the native-born.

In the meantime immigration to America had increased. The Irish famine of 1846, and the governmental disturbances in France, Germany and Italy caused many to seek refuge in America. The census of 1850 showed one-seventh of the total population to be immigrants. The majority of these immigrants were Catholics.

Know-Nothingism

The year 1850 witnessed a decline in the ranks of the Native American party, but in 1852 it produced an offshoot—the Know-Nothing party. This faction, virtually unheard of until 1854, enjoyed phenomenal success and for a time seemed destined to be a permanent addition to the parties of the United States. The Know-Nothing party was formally organized in 1852 in New York City by Charles B. Allen as a secret patriotic society known as the "Order of the Star Spangled Banner." Within a few months more than a thousand were enrolled, and the society made its influence felt in the municipal elections of 1852 in New York City. The success in New York was for them opportune. Franklin Pierce, a Democrat, had been elected President of the United States in the same year. The Whigs and Nativists agreed that the foreign-born vote was largely responsible for his election. Smarting under the sting of defeat, the Whigs were ready to join any nativistic group in order to avenge their defeat. Thus it was that the local Know-Nothing party was able to branch out into a national organization. Three years after its foundation the Know-Nothing party was established in thirty-five states and territories. Until 1856 the new party was a serious threat to the other political groups. It was momentarily checked in the Virginia gubernatorial race in 1855, but was still powerful enough to nominate Millard Fillmore as its candidate for President in the election of 1856. James Buchanan was chosen by the Democrats, and John C. Fremont carried the banners of the newly organized Republican party. Both Buchanan and Fremont were at one in their denunciation of the nativistic tendencies of Know-Nothingism. Buchanan won the election, defeating Fillmore by an overwhelming margin; and with this defeat the collapse of the Know-Nothing movement was complete.

American Patriotic Association

Know-Nothingism lingered on in Maryland and other border states until the Civil War; but it was merely a compromise party, with its nativistic principles completely abandoned. It appeared in 1887 under the label of the American Patriotic Association, the familiar A. P. A. By 1893 the A. P. A. had spread to twenty states. The chief cause of its agitation was the increase in social and industrial strength of the American Catholic citizen. After the panic of 1893 many Republicans entered the fold of this organization, but the party ceased to exercise any political power after the presidential election of 1896 in which it had opposed the victorious McKinley. The oath taken by the members of the A. P. A. was violently anti-Catholic. The party had its own papers, pamphlets and literature abounding in anti-Catholic utterances. It employed bogus ex-priests and ex-nuns for lectures which it sponsored.

The Ku Klux Klan

The greatest organization founded on religious hate which this country has ever known appeared in the first quarter of the twentieth century. On Thanksgiving Day, 1915, the founding of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan took place on Stone Mountain near Atlanta, Georgia. Under the blazing light of a fiery cross a group of white-hooded figures swore an oath of fealty to William J. Simmons, the first Emperor and Imperial Wizard. Until 1920 it was mainly a local organization, operating in Georgia with a membership of probably not more than 5,000. Then with violent suddenness the K. K. K. leapt forward embracing the forty-eight states. Like the A. P. A. before it, the Klan obtained political power; but it used it to far greater advantage than did the American Patriotic Association. In 1921 the Klan was investigated by Congress, and in October of that same year hearings were conducted by the House. Simmons' testimony incriminated the Klan, but by this time the organization had become so powerful, and the Klan was so rapidly assuming the rôle of an important political factor, that the hearings were dropped. In 1922 Simmons resigned from the Klan and Hiram W. Evans of Texas succeeded him. Under Evans' leadership the Klan underwent a complete overhauling. He made strategic appointments and reshaped its politics. Most of all, he supplied it with a clear outline of ideas and principles, which were violently anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish. The 1924 Democratic National Convention held in New York City became a débâcle because of the Klan. Alfred E. Smith, a Catholic, was a candidate for the nomination; William Gibbs McAdoo of California was also in the running for the nomination. The relation between Smith and the Klan was obvious, but McAdoo did not openly condemn the Klan. A battle was waged as to whether the Klan was to be condemned in the party platform or not, and after a stormy period the Klan forces won by three votes. Smith and McAdoo were replaced by John W. Davis of West Virginia as the Democratic candidate. It was the Klan's boast from 1924 until 1928 that it had beaten Smith and saved America from "Rum, Romanism and the city fellows." In the election of 1928 the Klan again played an important part in the defeat of Smith, holding meetings, burning crosses and distributing vile propaganda during the campaign. Shortly after the election of 1928 the Klan went into seclusion and has never regained the prominence which it enjoyed in the 'twenties.

Jehovah's Witnesses

In recent years the society known as Jehovah's Witnesses has come to the fore as an anti-Catholic menace. This society was founded by a certain "Pastor" Russell about 1916. Russell engaged "Judge" Rutherford, a Missouri lawyer, as his advisor, and when the founder died Rutherford succeeded him as head of the society. Rutherford, who recently died, was a conscientious objector to America's part in the first World War, and served time in Atlanta Penitentiary. The group now has a four-fold dominion variously known as "Jehovah's Witnesses," the "Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society," "The People's Pulpit Association," and the "International Bible Students' Association." Violently anti-Catholic and anarchical, this organization is a menace not only to religion but to society as well, and has for that reason been outlawed in many countries. It spreads its teachings of hate with an almost diabolical zeal through the medium of the radio, the lecture platform, the phonograph and the press. Its rapid spread shows that anti-Catholic bias in America still has fertile ground upon which to thrive.

UNITED STATES CENSUS (1936) OF RELIGIOUS BODIES

The following analysis of the 1936 Religious Census is condensed from the Report of the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce: Number of religious bodies in the United States..... 256
 Denominations reporting less than 1,000 members ..... 63
 Denominations reporting from 1,000-5,000 members..... 64
 Denominations reporting more than 200,000 members..... 27

The Bureau of the Census announces that, according to the returns received, there were in continental United States in 1936, 256 religious bodies with 199,302 organizations and 55,807,366 members, as compared with 213 denominations reporting 232,154 organizations and 54,576,346 members in 1926. Comparative figures are shown in the following table for number of churches (or other local organizations) and members for the denominations for which data were collected in 1936 and 1926. As the term "members" has a variety of uses, each church was requested to report the number of members according to the definition of membership in that church or organization. In some religious bodies the term member is limited to communicants; in others it includes all baptized persons; and in still others it covers all enrolled persons.

The report for 1926 included statistics for 213 denominations, 9 of which are not shown at this census. Some have joined other denominations and their statistics are included with them, others are out of existence, etc. There are 57 denominations shown at this census not reported in 1926. All of them are not new, however, as a number were created by divisions in denominations which were shown as units in 1926.

At the census of 1936 the total expenditures were $518,953,571, as compared with $817,214,523 in 1926. Under this item are included the amount expended for salaries, repair, etc.; for payments on church debt; for benevolences, including home and foreign missions; for denominational support; and for all other purposes.

The value of church edifices in 1936 was $3,411,875,467, as compared with $3,839,500,610 in 1926. This item includes any building used mainly for religious services, together with the land on which it stands and all furniture and furnishings owned by the church and actually used in connection with church services. It does not include buildings hired for religious services or those used for social or organization work in connection with the church.

All figures for 1936 are preliminary and subject to correction.

U. S. BIRTH AND DEATH RATES

The following figures are based on returns received from the birth registration area and the death registration area, both designations covering territory under proper registration laws, properly carried out. Territories in the registration areas include about 95 per cent of the entire population for the year 1930. In 1933 registration areas for both the birth and death statistics included 100 per cent of the entire population. Figures on that proportion of the population from which the birth rate is compiled before 1930 vary from 59.8 per cent in 1920 to 94.7 per cent in 1930; those from which the death rate is compiled vary from 82.3 per cent in 1920 to 96.2 per cent in 1930.

The appended table shows that while the absolute numbers of births is generally increasing, the rate of increase is gradually diminishing. It has been estimated that by 1960 a maximum of 140,000,000 population will be reached and that thereafter the population will remain stationary for a time and then gradually decline. In twenty years the birth rate has declined from 23.7 per cent to 17.9 per cent. From a Catholic viewpoint this decline is an evil sign of the times.

In view of the declining birth rate it also is argued that the death rate likewise shows a decline in twenty years from 13.1 per cent to 10.8 per cent. The decrease however is less and may be explained by the fact that the average span of life has been increased. Since the population is thus increasing in average age this decline in the death rate will not long be maintained. Precalculations point to a further decreasing birth rate and an increasing death rate.

U. S. MARRIAGES AND DIVORCES: 1900-1940

Of the male population for 1930, 60 per cent were reported married; of the female population, 61.1 per cent. Males in the single state were reported as 34.1 per cent of the male population; females, 26.4 per cent. The state of the remainder was reported as widowed, divorced or unknown.

Divorce statistics for 1930 show that of the total of 189,863, 52,554 or 27.2 per cent were granted to the husband and 137,309 or 72.8 per cent to the wife. The principal causes for which divorces were granted were listed as: 79,381 for cruelty; 54,802 for desertion; 14,841 for adultery; 7,719 for non-support; 3,168 for drunkenness, and 29,953 for other causes.

Of the whole number of divorces, 163,320 or 86 per cent were reported as uncontested. In 63.2 of the cases there were no children or children were not affected by the divorce. About 100,000 children are affected every year by divorces.

LEGAL INFORMATION

The information contained herein is only general. In a legal matter the facts are all important and may change the entire situation and the legal solution thereof. It is recommended that an attorney be consulted in all legal affairs and that the statutes of the various states be consulted for particular practices.

For those who cannot afford the services of an attorney there are Legal Aid Societies in all or most of the larger cities. For Catholics who require legal assistance and cannot afford an attorney their pastor should be able to recommend a Catholic attorney who will render such assistance.

The Law of Contracts

A contract is a promise or set of promises for the breach of which the law gives a remedy (either in the form of damages or by requiring the fulfilment of the contract), or the performance of which the law in some way recognizes as a duty.

Contracts may be written or oral. The following contracts are generally by statute required to be in writing.

(a) Contracts not to be performed within a year from the date of their making.

(b) A promise to be responsible for the debt, default or miscarriage of another. By miscarriage is meant the failure of another to fulfil a contract.

(c) Contracts made in consideration of marriage, but not the mutual promises of marriage.

(d) Contracts for the sale or leasing of real estate with the exception of leases for one year or less.

(e) Contracts for the sale of goods above a certain value (determined by statute, generally $50) unless a part of the price is paid, or the goods or part of them delivered.

Parties to a Contract—In order to form a contract there must be at least two or more parties or persons who desire to enter into contractual relations with each other. The parties or persons must have contractual capacity; that is, a person cannot be a party to a contract if he is an infant (in most states an infant is anyone under the age of twenty-one years), insane or forced or tricked into the contract. In the case of contracts made with infants they are not binding on him unless they are for the necessities of life or unless he ratifies the contract after he becomes of age.

For the creation of a valid contract there must be in addition to contractual capacity:

(a) Complete agreement. The minds of the contracting parties must meet and be in complete agreement on all points involved in the contract. There must be an offer and acceptance in accordance with the terms of the contract.

(b) There must be consideration, not necessarily of a "money" character.

(c) The intention of the contracting parties must be lawful; agreements made in violation of laws or against public policy are void and not enforceable.

Discharge of Contracts—After a contract has been made it can only be discharged in one of the following ways:

(a) By mutual agreement of the contracting parties.

(b) By full and complete performance in accordance with its terms.

(c) By breach; where one breaks the contract obligation which has been imposed on him by the terms of the contract the other party is no longer required to fulfil his part of the agreement.

(d) By an act of God, e. g., the death of the party who has contracted to render personal services.

(e) By operation of law, e. g., bankruptcy.

Negotiable Instruments

The ordinary forms of negotiable instruments are checks, bills of exchange and promissory notes.

To be negotiable an instrument must conform to the following facts and requirements:

(a) Must be in writing and be signed by the maker or drawer.

(b) Must contain an unconditional promise or order to pay a "Sum Certain" in money.

(c) Must be payable on demand or at a fixed and determinable date in the future.

(d) Must be payable to order or bearer.

(e) Where the instrument is addressed to a drawee (e. g., a bank) it must be named or otherwise indicated therein with reasonable certainty.

Negotiation and Indorsement — An instrument is said to be negotiated when it is transferred to another party so as to vest title in that party. This may be done:

(a) By delivery, that is, merely handing over the instrument, if the instrument is payable to "Bearer" or indorsed in blank (the name of the last holder being signed to it without any qualifications).

(b) If the instrument is payable to order, by indorsement and delivery, by the party to whose order it is drawn. One who negotiates or transfers an instrument by indorsement (unless he qualifies his indorsement with the statement "without recourse") warrants or guarantees to all subsequent holders of the instrument: that the instrument is genuine and in all respects what it purports to be; that he has good title to it; that all prior parties had capacity to contract; that he has no knowledge of any fact that would render the instrument valueless; that the instrument at the time of its indorsement is valid and subsisting; and he agrees that on due presentation it shall be accepted or paid or both as the case may be, according to its tenor and that if it is not paid or accepted he, the indorser, will pay the amount to the holder, or to any indorser subsequent to him who may be required to pay it.

When an indorser is compelled to pay he may hold any indorser prior to him through whom he has received the instrument by sending him notice promptly of non-payment.

Certified Checks — A check is a bill of exchange drawn on a bank and payable on demand. A check must be presented for payment within a reasonable time after issued or the drawer will be discharged from liability thereon to the extent of the loss occasioned by the delay.

When a check is certified by a bank the bank becomes primarily liable to pay it. The drawer of the check and all the indorsers are released from liability and the holder of the check looks to the bank for payment. The drawer of a check cannot stop payment on it after it has been certified by the bank.

Will and Last Testaments

A will or last testament is the final disposition of a person's property to take effect after his death. A will must be in writing signed at the end thereof by the testator or by someone else for the testator at his direction and in his presence. The will must be witnessed by at least two witnesses who must subscribe their signatures as witnesses in the presence of the testator. The law of most states requires two witnesses. Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Vermont require three. Even where the law requires only two witnesses it is good policy to have three in case one or more of the witnesses predecease the testator.

A witness can never benefit by or receive anything under a will.

The form or wording of a will is immaterial as long as the intention of the testator is made clear.

A codicil is an addition to or an alteration in an original will. It must be made in the same manner as the will itself.

A nuncupative will or unwritten will is permitted only in the case of a soldier on active service or by a mariner at sea.

All persons are competent to make a will except idiots, persons of unsound minds and infants. The legal age for the making of a will is determined by statute in the various states.

A will may be revoked by subsequent marriage (see statutes of the various states) or by the burning, tearing or otherwise destroying the same by the testator or by some person in his presence and at his direction with the intention of revoking the will; also by the subsequent making of a new will with the intention of revoking the old one.

Funds may be left for charitable or religious purposes either outright or in trust. Most states place a limitation on the amount which can be left for charity if there are dependent relatives.

FINANCE AND BANKING

Money

Money, in some form or other, has probably been used by man since the very earliest time. The form in which money has been used ranges all the way from the skins of animals, cattle, corn, tobacco, shells, beads, the precious metals, to the paper currency in use today. Originally its only use was as a measurement of the value of unlike quantities. When however people found that this unit of measurement was readily acceptable to all, it came to possess a value that was not intrinsic. Many of the units of themselves could not supply the needs of those who used them, as, for instance, the wampum of the American Indians.

From this we are able to understand the principal characteristic of money in its general acceptability by all and to all. With this quality it is able to discharge its functions of being both a medium of exchange and a standard of value.

Probably one of the earliest writings in which there is made mention of this unit of measurement is in the "Iliad" of Homer, in the Sixth Book, in which two sets of armor are estimated in terms of oxen. In the pastoral stage of man's civilization, cattle were often used in reckoning values. It is quite commonly believed that the Latin word for money, pecunia is derived from the word pecus of the same language, which means "cattle."

History tells us that the ancient Egyptians used metallic currency, and that of gold. On these pieces of gold was stamped a cow, and each piece was equal to the value of a full-grown cow. In Lydia, in Asia Minor, as early as the eighth century before Christ, there was in vogue a system of coinage which made use of coins of pure gold and silver. The Greeks copied them in this, and thus the art of coinage was introduced into Europe.

There is frequent mention in the Bible, both in the Old as well as in the New Testament, of money and money transactions. Probably the first time it is mentioned is in the Book of Genesis, wherein in the sixteenth chapter there is narrated the purchase, for 400 sicles of silver, or about $320, of a field by Abraham to provide a burial place for his wife Sara. In the Book of Tobias, we are told that Tobias gave Gabelus, one of his kindred, ten talents of silver (about $20,000) in exchange for a note of Gabelus. In the New Testament, Saint Paul in his First Epistle to Timothy utters that prophetic statement: "The desire of money is the root of all evils."

In the course of centuries the precious metals usurped the position held by the other forms of currency, and came to be recognized as the principal monetary standards. Today in addition to gold and silver, almost all nations have a subsidiary metallic currency in the form of coins of silver, nickel and copper, and in addition a regulated paper currency.

Banks

In general, banks may be defined as institutions working under a charter from the state or national government and serve as a depository for the funds of individuals and corporations. Of course the deposit function is not the bank's sole activity. They also loan money to individuals and to corporations, act as investment agents, issue their own money in the form of banknotes, and perform innumerable duties which make them well-nigh indispensable in the present economic set-up.

In a sort of broad way, banks may be classified under three general types:

Commercial Banks — Business of these institutions primarily consists in making loans to and receiving deposits from its customers. In the United States they represent the largest group of banking institutions, and are usually represented by the national and state banks.

Trust Companies — Originally, their main object was taking care of the investments and financial affairs of their customers; but today they have for the most part extended themselves into the functions of the ordinary banking institutions, with the exception of note issue.

Savings Banks are institutions devoted principally to receiving small accounts for long-term deposit.

Stocks and Bonds

The main difference between stocks and bonds may be simply stated by saying that stocks represent ownership, proportioned to the number of shares held, in the company or corporation. Bonds on the other hand are, as it were, loans of a definite sum (usually $1,000) and payable at a definite date in the future. In other words, the stockholders are the owners of the company, and the bondholders are the creditors. The stockholders share in the management, and in the profit or loss of the organization in which the stocks are held. Bondholders receive a fixed income, the interest on their investment. Should the corporation or company fail to pay dividends, that is a loss the stockholders must be prepared to suffer. However, failure to pay interest on its bonds, or fixed charges as they are called, makes the organization liable to legal action on the part of the bondholders. In the liquidation, the claims of the bondholders take precedence over all other claims.

Usual Types of Stock

Common: Holders usually enjoy the voting rights in the management, and participate in dividends after preferred shareholders have received their dividends.

Preferred: Holders usually lack voting rights, and enjoy preference in the payment of dividends.

Cumulative Preferred: Holders enjoy right of receiving all unpaid dividends before the common shareholders can receive any.

Participating Preferred: Holders have the right to proportional division of surplus profits, if there are any, after common shareholders have received their dividends.

CORPORATION UNDISTRIBUTED PROFITS TAX

The Corporation Undistributed Profits Tax is a measure to tax corporations earning above $40,000 annually, at rates ranging from 7 to 27 per cent on all income not paid out as dividends, in addition to a normal tax of approximately 15 per cent. Among those exempt are banks and life insurance companies.

It appears that the main purpose of the tax is an attempt at closer government control of industry. The Treasury advances three reasons for the bill's adoption: "(1) It aims to prevent tax evasion on the part of the ultra-wealthy individuals who, by corporate retention of income, have been paying 12½ to 15 per cent corporation tax rather than individual income taxes ranging from 4 to 75 per cent. (2) It claims that corporation income retention tends to dry up the stream of purchasing power. (3) It contends corporations were not bearing their fair share of taxes." The bill seeks to overcome the avoidance of surtax by individuals through accumulation of income by corporations. It will try to remove the inequality that exists between large and small shareholders resulting from the present flat-rate corporate taxes. The burden of taxation will be placed on those best able to bear it. It will redistribute wealth now held as surplus profits by large corporations.

Those who are opposed to the law state that while the law apparently aims at large corporations and the wealthier among their stockholders, it is really striking at the small corporations since they will be forced to give up each year part of their small profits, and will thereby be prevented from building up a reserve. The bill will crucify small businesses. It will not redistribute wealth since that portion of the public drawing dividends is small. The efforts of industry to absorb the unemployed will be checked. And there will be a doubtful flow of money to the government.

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

(Courtesy of Social Security Board)

The Social Security Act of 1935 provided for the establishment of a federally operated system of old-age insurance and for federal co-operation with the states in unemployment insurance systems and in programs for giving financial aid to three groups of the needy—the aged, the blind, and dependent children. It also made available more federal aid to the states for health and welfare services and for vocational training.

In 1939 the act was materially strengthened by amendments. Under the original law there was begun the most comprehensive social welfare program ever undertaken in this or any other country. Under the law as revised the insurance protection given the wage earner was extended to his family. The amendments also resulted in liberalization of other features of the general program and made possible an improvement in administrative procedures. Of particular significance was the requirement that state agencies, which administer the programs operated on a federal-state co-operative basis, establish and maintain personnel standards on a merit basis.

Responsibility for administration of the provisions of the Social Security Act relating to old-age and survivors insurance, unemployment compensation, and public assistance rests upon the Social Security Board. The members of the Board, which is a part of the Federal Security Agency, are A. J. Altmeyer, chairman, Ellen S. Woodward and George E. Bigge.

Old-Age and Survivors Insurance

Under the 1939 amendments the old-age insurance system was expanded to provide protection not only for the insured wage earner, but also for his dependents. It became an old-age and survivors insurance system. Monthly benefits are payable under the new system to retired workers over 65, their wives when they become 65, and their children under 18 years of age. In the event of the death of an insured wage earner, similar monthly benefits are payable: to his widow when she reaches 65; his children; his widow, regardless of her age if she has such children in her care; or his dependent parents over 65, if he leaves no widow or child under 18. These monthly benefits became payable January 1, 1940. This is the only program included in the Social Security Act which is entirely administered by the Federal Government without state co-operation.

The benefits provided by this system are financed by equal taxes paid by workers and their employers into an Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund in the United States Treasury. The tax rate up to 1943 is 1% each for employees and employers on the first $3,000 a year in wages. For 1943, 1944 and 1945, it is 2% each, for 1946, 1947 and 1948, it is 2% each, and for 1949 and thereafter the rate is 3% each.

The system covers practically all industrial and commercial employment, such as work in factories, shops, mines, mills, stores, offices, banks, other places of business or on American ships. Occupations not covered include agricultural labor, domestic service, employment by federal, state or local governments or any of their instrumentalities, service for certain non-profit educational, charitable or religious organizations, and railroad employment (which comes under the Railroad Retirement Act).

Workers 65 years old or over, who were not covered by the original plan, are now afforded insurance protection as a result of the amendments. Many workers who could not have qualified under the original act, because they were 65 or near that age, now can qualify for monthly benefits.

Old-Age and Survivors Insurance benefits are based on the individual's average monthly wages under the system. The worker's own monthly benefit is figured as follows: 40% of the first $50 of average monthly wages, plus 10% of the next $200, plus 1% of this amount for each year in covered employment in which he made $200 or more. For example, if a man had average monthly wages of $100 after 5 years in covered employment, he would get 40% of $50 or $20, plus 10% of the next $50 or $5, making $25, and in addition, for 5 years' coverage he would get 5% of $25 or $1.25; so that his total monthly benefit would be $26.25.

Benefits payable to a worker's dependents or survivors are figured according to his own benefit rate. The benefit payable to a wife, minor child or a dependent parent is equal to one-half of the benefit due the wage earner on the basis of his earnings record. The benefit payable to a widow is equal to three-fourths of the benefit due her husband.

The total of benefits to a retired wage earner and his family or to his survivors, if over $20, cannot exceed 80% of his average monthly wage, twice his monthly benefit, or $85, whichever of these three amounts is the smallest.

A lump-sum death payment is also provided under the act if a wage earner dies leaving no one entitled to monthly benefits at the time of his death. This payment may be up to 6 times the monthly benefit that would have been due the deceased. If there is no relative entitled to the lump-sum payment, it may be used to reimburse the individual who bore the funeral expenses, but only to the extent of the actual expenditures incurred.

Employment Security

The United States Employment Service was consolidated with the Social Security Board's Bureau of Unemployment Compensation on July 1, 1939, in accordance with the President's first reorganization plan. The two now functioning as a unified service are under the supervision of the Board's Bureau of Employment Security. The employment security program, a joint federal-state enterprise, combines job insurance and job placement to protect wage earners if they lose their jobs. Federal grants are made to states for administration of their employment security programs.

State unemployment compensation laws, now in effect in all states, the District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii, provide for the payment of weekly benefits to jobless workers covered by the law who have sufficient wage or employment credits to entitle them to benefits. When a man loses his job, he is required to file his claim for such benefits at the local employment office, which helps him find another job.

At the end of a specified waiting period, if he is still unemployed, his benefits begin and continue until he has exhausted all his wage credits or has received them for the maximum period allowed by law—usually three to four months. These benefits in most states are equal to about half a regular week's pay.

The Social Security Act levies a tax of 3% on the payrolls of employers of eight or more persons in all but a few specifically excluded occupations. Under the amendments of 1939 this tax now applies only to the first $3,000 a year paid to each employee. Employers may offset up to 90% of this federal payroll tax against their contributions to state unemployment funds, if the state has an unemployment compensation law approved by the Social Security Board.

In every state the public employment service registers unemployed workers, both those insured under the state unemployment compensation law and those not insured. These state employment services have local offices or traveling representatives in most communities and offer free service to all employers and workers.

Public Assistance

Under the public assistance provisions of the Social Security Act, the Federal Government makes grants to states for aid to the needy aged, the needy blind, and dependent children. Every state and territory now has a plan for old-age assistance under which it is receiving federal grants, and more than three-fourths of the states have plans for aid to the blind and aid to dependent children. Under these plans cash allowances related to the individual's own need are paid each month. The Federal Government pays half the cost of these three forms of assistance to needy individuals; for aid to the needy aged and the blind it matches state payments up to a combined federal-state total of $40 a month per person; for aid to dependent children up to $18 for the first dependent child and $12 for every other dependent child in the same home.

Health and Welfare Services

In addition to these programs for which the Social Security Board is the federal agency, the Social Security Act provides for certain welfare and health services directed by other agencies. Under all of these grants are made to co-operating states. Substantially all the states are participating in these welfare programs.

The maternal and child welfare sections of the act are administered by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. Under these provisions states receive grants for services to protect the health of mothers and young children, to provide treatment for crippled children, and to care for those who are neglected or are in danger of becoming delinquent.

The public health provisions of the act, which give grants to states to aid them in developing and strengthening local health services, are administered by the Public Health Service, a part of the Federal Security Agency.

Another organization within the Federal Security Agency, the U. S. Office of Education, has administrative responsibility for the vocational rehabilitation provisions of the act, under which grants are made to states for the vocational training of disabled adults to enable them to become self-supporting.

THE SELECTIVE TRAINING AND SERVICE ACT

On September 16, 1940, the 76th Congress of the United States approved an act to provide for the common defense by increasing the personnel of the armed forces of the country and providing for its training. An executive order of Franklin D. Roosevelt made this act a law on September 26, 1940, and almost at once a system was put into operation for its execution which had been in preparation by the Army and Navy since 1926. Peace-time conscription was considered necessary both because the recruiting districts were far behind their quotas and because of the general opinion that volunteer recruiting was inadequate to meet the exigencies of modern warfare. The act, unless continued in effect by Congress, becomes inoperative on May 15, 1945.

The initiators of the plan for universal training were Colonel Julius Ochs Adler of the New York "Times" and Greville Clark. Early in June, 1940, Colonel Adler revealed that a bill was being drawn up for congressional action. Although this was not the same bill that Congress voted upon, nevertheless the final act was in some respects derived from and modelled upon it.

The primary objective of peace-time conscription was not to create a standing army, but to assure the United States a huge, rotating reserve of trained manpower to be called up quickly in wartime. The course of the European War pointed out the imperative necessity of increasing and training the personnel of the armed forces of the country. With this end in view, the Selective Service System was put into motion, originally providing that not more than 900,000 men could be called for training each year. In August, 1941, however, this limitation was removed.

Entry of the United States into the war on December 8, 1941, brought about important changes in the Selective Training and Service Act. Men between 18 and 65 years of age were made subject to registration by the Selective Service System although only those between 20 and 45 were made liable for military service. The original act authorized registration of men between 21 and 36 and a later amendment which provided for the deferment of men over 28 was adopted in August, 1941, but was superseded by the amendments adopted after entry into war. Also removed, following the declaration of war, was the prohibition against use of selectees beyond the limits of the western hemisphere except in territories and possessions of the United States, including the Philippine Islands. The extension of military service to youths of 18 and 19 became effective in November, 1942.

The elements of the System are: National Headquarters; State Headquarters; the Local Boards with their affiliated Medical Boards, Boards of Appeal and Registrants' Advisory Boards. In the first registration, the election machinery of the various states enrolled the prospective selectees, but this job has since been delegated to the Local Boards. In general, the elements operate as follows. The Local Board classifies the registrants, and has assigned to it a physician to make physical examinations and a Government Appeal Agent to protect the interests of the government and of the registrants. An Advisory Board is appointed to advise and assist registrants in filling out questionnaires, making appeals, etc. The Medical Advisory Board assists in determining doubtful cases of physical condition. The Board of Appeals considers the classification made by the Local Board, when an appeal is made. The State Headquarters operates the system within the state; the National Headquarters, within the nation. Because of the blunders of the army in administering the Civil War draft, and the relatively higher efficiency of civilian operation in the draft of the first World War, the proponents of the system are careful that all the above elements, with the exception of National Headquarters, be composed of, and administered by, the civilians.

Each state is divided into Local Board areas by the Governor, each area having a population of 30,000. For each area a Local Board of three or more members is appointed by the President upon the recommendation of the Governor. The Local Board has jurisdiction over all persons registered in the area for which it was appointed. It has full authority to perform all the acts authorized by the Selective Service Law.

All male citizens and all male aliens residing in the country, who were between the ages of 21 and 36, were required to register on the first Registration Day on October 16, 1940. A subsequent registration was conducted on July 1, 1941, for men who had reached the age of 21 following the first registration and it is considered likely that additional registrations will be held each year to enroll youths who become 21. After each of the two registrations the Local Boards assigned a serial number to each registrant. Subsequently, National Lotteries were held, in which capsules containing numbers representing serial numbers were drawn at random and an order number was assigned to each man in accordance with the order in which it was drawn. Closely following the sequence of these order numbers the Local Boards sent questionnaires to registrants to gather the information which determines in which class a registrant is placed. There are four main classes.

In the first class are placed all men who are fit for general or limited military service.

In the second class are placed all men who are engaged in civilian activities which contribute to the national health, safety or interest in that they are essential to the war effort or war production.

In the third class are placed all men who have one or more dependents.

In the fourth class are placed officials who are deferred by law, neutral aliens who refuse to serve and aliens not acceptable to the armed forces, ministers of religion and divinity students, conscientious objectors, and, finally, all those who are mentally, morally or physically unfit.

The ultimate step before induction is the physical examination of all those whom the Local Boards tentatively place in the first class.

The men inducted for training and service under the act receive the same pay, pensions and other benefits as the other enlisted men of the same grades and length of service.

A delinquent as defined by the Selective Service Regulations is any man, required under the selective law to submit to registration, who fails to do so; and any registrant who prior to his induction into the military service fails to perform any duty imposed upon him. Upon conviction in the civil court his penalty is a term of not more than five years imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

On October 16, 1940, the first day fixed for registration by the President, approximately 16,500,000 men were registered. On July 1, 1941, the second Registration Day, approximately 750,000 men were registered. The first National Lottery was held in Washington on October 29, 1940, and some 9,000 capsules, representing the serial numbers of registrants, were drawn. The second lottery was held on July 17, 1941, and 800 capsules were drawn. The third registration was held February 16, 1942, and was for men between 36 and 45 as well as for those who had become 20 on or before December 31, 1941. The third lottery was held March 17, 1942, when 7,000 capsules were drawn. The fourth registration was held April 27, 1942, and was for men in the age group between 45 and 65. No lottery was held for this group as the men are not subject to military service under present law. The fifth registration was held June 30, 1942, for 18 and 19 year-olds and for men who became 20 years old on or before June 30 and subsequent to December 31, 1941.

MILITARY INFORMATION

Army and Navy Insignia

Insignia are markings which give identifications to men in the service. These insignia are worn on the uniform, and show at a glance the rank and the branch of service to which they belong.

Army. The rank insignia of commissioned officers are found on the shoulders of the blouse, and on either the shoulders or collar when the shirt is worn; these are known as "bars." Non-Commissioned officers wear their rank insignia on the upper part of the sleeve of either blouse or shirt; these are termed "chevrons" or "stripes." Ordinary privates have no rank insignia. Branch insignia are found on the lapel of the blouse for all service men and on the shirt collar of commissioned officers.

Navy. The rank of a commissioned officer is shown by the stripes worn completely around the sleeve cuffs of his blouse and by the short stripes on the shoulder marks. A petty officer's (non-commissioned) rank is shown by chevrons worn at the top of the sleeve. Scarlet chevrons are worn on blue uniforms; blue on white. His "outfit" is shown by the badge worn on the right arm in the seaman branch, and on the left arm in other branches. Non-rated seamen wear braids on the right shoulder — white on a blue uniform, blue on white. Engineer seamen wear a red braid on the left shoulder.

Army Corps Areas

The United States is divided into nine Corps Areas extending from the East to the West coast. In addition there are three departments similar to the Corps Areas, all of which are outside the territorial limits of the United States. These are: the Panama Canal Department, the Hawaiian Department and the Philippine Department. The nine Corps Areas are so organized that they contain approximately the same military population. From these nine Corps Areas there are Four Armies. Each Army includes troops of two or three Corps Areas. Army Headquarters are as follows: (1) Governor's Island, New York (1, 2, 3 Corps Areas); (2) Memphis, Tenn. (5, 6 Corps Areas); (3) San Antonio, Texas (4, 8 Corps Areas); and (4) San Francisco, Calif. (7, 9 Corps Areas).

Branches of the Army

The branches of the army are classified as belonging to the Arms or Service, according as they actually enter into combat or assist in some other manner. The Arms or combat branches are the Infantry, the Field Artillery, the Cavalry, the Coast Artillery, the Signal Corps, the Engineer Corps and the Air Force. The Service branches are

Role and Mission of Combat Arms

The Infantry is essentially an arm of close combat. Its primary mission in attack is to close with the enemy and to destroy or capture him; in defense, to hold its position and to repel hostile attacks. The infantry fights by combining fire movement and shock action. It is capable of limited independent action through use of its own weapons and is necessarily supported by artillery, tanks and combat aviation.

The Field Artillery contributes to the action of the entire force. It has two missions: (1) to support the infantry, cavalry and armored units, neutralizing or destroying targets which hinder their movements, and (2) to give depth to combat by counterbattery fire, by fire on hostile reserves, by restricting enemy movements and disrupting hostile command agencies.

The Cavalry consists of highly mobile ground units — horse, motor and mechanized. Cavalry is characterized by a high degree of battlefield mobility. It has better results in attacking and defending than in holding offensive or defensive operations, and can operate over almost any terrain and under all conditions of weather. Horse Cavalry habitually maneuvers mounted, but ordinarily fights on foot.

The Coast Artillery operates in conjunction with the Navy and Air Force. It protects the fleet in the harbor or while entering the harbor, wards off naval and air attacks against harbor defenses, naval cities, etc. It supports the Infantry and other arms in beach defenses.

The Signal Corps has the primary combat mission of providing signal communication for the Command.

The Engineer Corps has the primary mission of construction and demolition to increase the combat effectiveness of troops, facilitate their movements and hinder the movements of the enemy. Engineers increase the combat power of other arms by constructing protective works and camouflage, and by supplying the necessary equipment. Combat Engineers participate actively in the penetration of hostile obstacles and the capture of fortified localities, in the defense of road blocks or mine fields.

The Air Force operates in conjunction with ground and naval forces in land and sea warfare, and conducts independent attacks against enemy objectives on land and on sea.

Organization of the Army

By organization is meant the rule or command of an individual, either a commissioned or non-commissioned officer. Commissioned officers are those to whom appointments have been granted upon the completion either of West Point training (these become officers in the Regular Army) or specified courses in the Reserve Officers Training Corps (these are enrolled in Reserve Officers Corps). Non-commissioned officers are those who have attained the rank through promotions. These officers start as privates and may be promoted to the top rank of Master Sergeant.

Military organizations range in size from a small unit known as a squad to a great force known as the field army. Each organization forms an integral part of a larger organization.

The Squad is the smallest unit. It varies in size from 5 to 12 men, and is usually commanded by a Corporal. In large squads the Sergeant commands. The leader directly and personally controls his subordinates, known as privates.

The Section is next in size, and usually consists of 2 or more squads, and totals from 20 to 25 men. Sections are commanded by a Sergeant, but may vary in some organizations.

The Platoon is in some instances made up of squads but more often of 2 or more sections. It consists of 40 to 55 men. The platoon itself is commanded by a Second or First Lieutenant.

The Company is the basic administrative unit, as it contains all the agencies required for subsistence. At its head is a Captain. It is divided into smaller units. A company, battery or troop, at war strength may have as many as 200 men. As no one man could personally control such a number, by means of a chain command orders reach every man from the Captain down. This is done through lieutenants, sergeants and corporals.

The Battalion (Squadron) consists of 2 or 3 companies or batteries and numbers about 300 to 500 men. A battalion is commanded by a Major or Lieutenant Colonel. It is the basic tactical unit.

The Regiment is both administrative and tactical (having both combat and service branches). It consists of a headquarters and 2 or more battalions, and also a special company using special weapons. The regiment is commanded by a Colonel and numbers in men from 800 to 3,100.

Administration of the Navy

The highest military adviser in the Navy is known as the Chief of Naval Operations. The Navy Chief holds the rank of Admiral. The Navy, like the Army, has departments that carry out the administrative and tactical work. These branches, however, operate independently of the Chief of Naval

The Brigade, a tactical organization composed of 2 or more regiments of the same Arm, is commanded by a Brigadier General and consists of 5,000 to 6,300 men.

The Division is the basic large unit of the combined Arms. It is usually commanded by a Major General. There are three types: (1) Square—the organization of the National Guard division, numbering 18,500 men; (2) Triangle—that used by the Regular Arms, numbering about 12,500 men; (3) Motorized—the same as the Triangle, but with the additional care of vehicles.

The Corps consists of a headquarters, certain organic corps troops, and such infantry divisions as may be assigned to it. It is primarily a tactical unit and is commanded by a Major General in peace time and a Lieutenant General in war time. The number of men ranges from 65,000 to 90,000.

The Army, composed of headquarters, army troops, a number of corps and a number of divisions, is the largest unit. It is administrative as well as tactical. Commanded by a General, it numbers from 200,000 to 400,000 men. It is often called a Field Army to distinguish it from the whole army of the United States, of which such a unit forms only a part.

Operations and rely on their own commanders.

Similar to the Corps Areas of the Army, the Navy has Naval Districts for shore operations. These number eleven within the confines of the United States, and two located in Hawaii and Panama. Each District is commanded by a Rear Admiral.

The Fleet

The United States Fleet is divided into three separate fleets: the Pacific Fleet, the Atlantic Fleet and the Far Eastern Squadron. The last named has its base at Australia.

The Fleet has for its composition (1) a Battle Force, (2) the Scouting Force and (3) the Base Force. The Battle Force, with its large battlewagons, light cruisers and destroyers, and its airplanes and mines, is the main fighting power of the Fleet. The Scouting Force is composed of heavy cruisers, submarines and long distance patrol planes. The Base Force is made up of lightly armed ships, whose main duty is to keep the battleships in supplies.

Ships

The Battleship is the largest of the fighting ships. This ship has the greatest possible amount of armor and armament. A battleship, or battlewagon, is about 700 ft. long and about 100 ft. wide. It is used only for major naval engagements. Battleships are named after states in the Union.

Air Craft Carriers are the second largest ships in the fleet. A carrier is merely a floating base, for navy fighting planes and never enters the fighting area. It is a dependent ship and does not maneuver alone. The carrier carries about 80 planes. It employs the largest number of men of any ship and these are men of highly technical experience. Carriers are named after great battles.

The Cruiser is of two kinds: light and heavy. The cruiser's main action is fighting in major battles and maintaining safety of the seas. This latter task includes conveying of supply and troop ships. Cruisers are named after cities.

The Destroyer, as small as it is, is more deadly than either a battleship or a cruiser. There are more destroyers than either battleships or cruisers. The destroyer functions mainly as an offensive weapon, and also has the role of laying a protective smoke screen. It hardly ever operates independently from the rest of the fleet. Its crew numbers from 100 to 200. Destroyers are named after heroes.

Submarines have as their main duties the sinking of enemy destroyers, partaking in long distance patrolling (which is done above the surface), and destroying enemy supply and troop ships. Submarines are run by Diesel engines on the surface, but underwater they use storage batteries which last about 35 hours, after which they must be recharged. This is done on the surface by their own Diesel motors. The submarine employs from 30 to 100 men. Submarines are named after fish.

NATURALIZATION REGULATIONS

(From U. S. Government pamphlet on Naturalization, Citizenship and Expatriation Laws. Naturalization Regulations, Jan. 13, 1941)

The requirements for the naturalization of aliens, generally, are:

Age: Must be at least eighteen years of age at the time of filing declaration of intention.

Declaration of Intention: The alien may file his declaration of intention in any naturalization court, regardless of his residence.

Certificate of Arrival: If an alien arrived in the United States after June 29, 1906, he will require a certificate of arrival from the Department of Justice. The alien, when he submits the form filled in will be notified by the field officer when he may appear before the clerk of court to make his declaration of intention.

Petition for Naturalization: The alien must reside within the jurisdiction of the court in which he desires to file his petition for naturalization. But if he wishes to file it in a State Court, he may file it within the state judicial district or circuit in which he resides, whether or not he resides within the county in which the petition is filed.

The applicant to file a petition for naturalization must have a declaration of intention not less than two nor more than seven years old, and he must have at least five years of continuous residence in the United States immediately preceding the filing of his petition. At least six months of this residence, just before the filing of his petition, must have been in the state where he resides at the time of filing the petition. All such residence may be proved by the oral testimony of two qualified witnesses, if they have personal knowledge of it. The required six months' residence must be proved at the filing of the petition by affidavits forming a part thereof of at least two qualified witnesses, and at the final hearing by their oral testimony.

Hearing in Court: At least thirty days must elapse after the petition is filed before the petitioner may appear before the court for final action on his petition. He will be notified of the date of the hearing, as naturalization hearing dates are fixed by the court. The petitioner must appear in person before the court with his witnesses, unless such witnesses are told by the naturalization examiner that they are excused from further attendance. If, upon the final hearing in open court, the court finds that the petitioner is entitled to naturalization, the petitioner takes his oath of allegiance to the United States and is given the certificate of naturalization.

Witnesses: In addition to his own oath, there is required the testimony of at least two witnesses, citizens of the United States, as to the facts of petitioner's residence, moral character, and attachment to the principles of the Constitution.

Oath of Allegiance: Must be taken in open court before he is admitted to citizenship.

Certificate of Citizenship: Issued only when all of the foregoing requirements are met, and after the final order has been signed by the presiding judge.

Fees: The certificate of arrival and the declaration of intention each cost $2.50. The petition costs $5.00. A new certificate of citizenship to replace one lost or destroyed costs $1.00.

Citizenship of Married Women

Prior to September 22, 1922, an American woman who married a foreigner took the nationality of her husband; and a foreign woman could acquire American citizenship by marriage to an American, and could retain same unless formal renunciation thereof was made.

Since the above date that legislation has been changed and amended by subsequent enactments. The following represents the present status of such women:

"The right of any woman to become a naturalized citizen of the United States shall not be denied or abridged because of her sex, or because she is a married woman.

"An alien who marries a citizen of the United States after the passage of this Act, as here amended, or an alien whose husband or wife is naturalized after the passage of this Act, as here amended, shall not become a citizen of the United States by reason of such marriage or naturalization; but, if eligible to citizenship, he or she, may be naturalized upon full and complete compliance with all requirements of the naturalization laws, with the following exceptions:

"(a) No declaration of intention shall be required.

"(b) In lieu of the five-year period of residence within the United States, and the one-year period of residence within the State or Territory where the naturalization court is held, he or she shall have resided continuously in the United States, Hawaii, Alaska, or Puerto Rico for at least three years immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

"A woman citizen of the United States shall not cease to be a citizen of the United States by reason of her marriage after this section, as amended, takes effect, unless she makes a formal renunciation of her citizenship before a court having jurisdiction over naturalization of aliens.

"Any woman who before this section, as amended, takes effect, has lost her United States citizenship by residence abroad after marriage to an alien or by marriage to an alien ineligible to citizenship may, if she has not acquired any other nationality by affirmative act, be naturalized in the manner prescribed. (See paragraph below titled 'Exemptions.') Any woman who was a citizen of the United States at birth shall not be denied naturalization on account of her race.

"No woman shall be entitled to naturalization under section 4 of this Act as amended (see paragraph titled 'Exemptions'), if her United States citizenship originated solely by reason of her marriage to a citizen of the United States or by reason of the acquisition of United States citizenship by her husband.

Exemptions: "A woman who has lost her United States citizenship by reason of her marriage to an alien eligible to citizenship or by reason of the loss of United States citizenship by her husband may, if eligible to citizenship and if she has not acquired any other nationality by affirmative act, be naturalized upon full and complete compliance with all requirements of the naturalization laws, with the following exceptions:

"(1) No declaration of intention and no certificate of arrival shall be required, and no period of residence within the United States or within the county where the petition is filed shall be required;

"(2) The petition need not set forth that it is the intention of the petitioner to reside permanently within the United States;

"(3) The petition may be filed in any court having naturalization jurisdiction, regardless of the residence of the petitioner;

"(4) If there is attached to the petition, at the time of filing, a certificate from a naturalization examiner stating that the petitioner has appeared before him for examination, the petition may be heard at any time after filing.

"After her naturalization such woman shall have the same citizenship status as if her marriage, or the loss of citizenship by her husband, as the case may be, had taken place after this section, as amended, takes effect."

Citizenship of Children

Any child born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose father or mother or both is a citizen of the United States at the time of the birth of such child, is declared to be a citizen of the United States, but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to any such child unless the citizen father or citizen mother, as the case may be has resided in the United States previous to the birth of such child. In cases where one of the parents is an alien, the right of citizenship shall not descend unless the child comes to the United States and resides therein for at least five years continuously immediately previous to his eighteenth birthday, and unless, within six months after the child's twenty-first birthday, he or she shall take an oath of allegiance to the United States of America as prescribed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

That a child of alien parents born without the United States shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship by the father or the mother: Provided, That such naturalization or resumption shall take place during the minority of such child: And provided further, That the citizenship of such minor child shall begin five years after the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States.

Oath of Allegiance

"I hereby declare, on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly to _____ of whom I have heretofore been a subject; that I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic; and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same."

The Constitution and Citizenship

Article I. Section 8. The Congress shall have power... to establish a uniform rule of naturalization....

Article XIV. Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside.

FIRST AID TO THE INJURED

(Revised by the First Aid and Life Saving Service, American National Red Cross, Washington, D. C.)

First Aid is just what its name implies: the immediate and temporary treatment given in case of accident or sudden illness before the arrival of a physician. Proper first aid may often save life, keeping the injured person alive until the doctor arrives. The most important things are the immediate control of severe bleeding, artificial respiration for those who have stopped breathing, the treatment of shock, and the treatment of those who have swallowed poison.

Hemorrhage—Bleeding from an artery is bright red blood which comes in spurts, or pulsates from a deep wound. If severe it may be fatal in a very short time. It can be stopped by pressing at the appropriate pressure point between the injury and the heart. Some of the important pressure points are: (1) just in front of the ear, for bleeding from the temple or scalp; (2) on the side of the jaw just in front of the angle of the jawbone, for bleeding of the face below the eyebrows; (3) at the side of the neck, fingers forward just touching the windpipe, thumb around the back of neck, for cut throat; (4) behind the collarbone, pressing down at the side of the neck against the first rib, for bleeding from the shoulder or armpit; (5) inner side of the upper arm, between shoulder and elbow, for bleeding from the arm, wrist or hand; (6) in the groin against the pelvis bone, for bleeding from the thigh, leg or foot. Pressure at these points will stop the blood at once.

A tourniquet may be applied if necessary by tying a handkerchief, scarf, cravat or stocking around the limb, a hand's breadth below the armpit or groin, and twisting until the blood is stopped. Be sure to loosen every 15 minutes, or gangrene may result. Allow to remain loose if bleeding has stopped, but watch closely and retighten if bleeding commences again. Bleeding from veins comes in a steady flow and can usually be controlled by pressure over a gauze compress directly on the wound, followed by a tight bandage. Elevate the injured part.

Infection—In handling all injuries in which the skin is broken, care must be taken to avoid infection. After bleeding has been stopped, paint the wound and the surface of the skin for an inch around the wound with mild tincture of iodine, cover with a sterile gauze dressing and bandage in place. If no sterile dressings are at hand, clean muslin may be sterilized by ironing with a hot flat-iron or by scorching over an open flame. First aid is first aid only. Never apply a second dressing. That is the doctor's job. Never try to treat injuries that have become infected. Take them to the doctor at once.

Shock is a condition which follows all accidents, and is in proportion to the amount of pain or bleeding. The victim is weak and faint with clammy perspiration, is dull and listless, may be cold, chilly, and has very weak rapid pulse and irregular breathing. Shock may cause death. Treatment consists of: heat, position and stimulants. Wrap the victim in blankets, coats or sweaters, both beneath and over him, and apply hot water bottles, hot bricks, stones or plates, taking care not to burn the victim. Shock position is lying down, with the head low and feet elevated about 18 inches. If conscious, warming stimulants may be given such as hot tea, hot coffee or hot milk. Do not give alcoholic beverages in first aid. Never give an unconscious person anything to drink, as he cannot swallow and may be choked.

Artificial Respiration—Any person who has stopped breathing, whether suffering from electric shock, gas poisoning, drowning, strangulation or other causes, must be kept alive by artificial respiration until his normal breathing can be restored. The best method to use is the Schaefer Prone Pressure Method, which is approved by all the leading agencies interested in first aid. Do not waste any time in preliminary attempts to loosen clothing or remove water from lungs or stomach, but start artificial respiration immediately, as follows:

1. Lay the victim on his belly, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and with the face turned outward and resting on hand and forearm, so that the nose and mouth are free for breathing.

2. Kneel straddling the victim's thighs, with your knees about even with the victim's knees. Place the palms of the hands on the small of the back with fingers resting on the ribs, the little finger just touching the lowest rib, with the thumb and fingers in a natural position and the tips of the fingers just out of sight.

3. With the arms held straight, swing forward slowly, so that the weight of your body is gradually brought to bear upon the victim. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

4. Now immediately swing backward so as to remove the pressure completely.

5. After two seconds swing forward again. Repeat unhurriedly twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds.

6. Continue artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored — if necessary, four hours or longer or until a physician declares the victim dead.

7. As soon as artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the victim's neck, chest or waist. Keep the victim warm. Do not give any liquids whatever by mouth until the victim is fully conscious.

8. To avoid strain on the heart when the victim revives, he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up. If the doctor has not arrived by the time the victim has revived, he should be given some stimulant such as one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a small glass of water, or a hot drink of coffee or tea, etc. The victim should be kept warm.

9. Resuscitation should be carried on at the nearest possible point to where the victim received his injuries. He should not be moved from this point until he is breathing normally, of his own volition, and then moved only in a lying position. Should it be necessary, due to extreme weather conditions, etc., to move the victim before he is breathing normally, resuscitation should be carried on during the time he is being moved.

10. A brief return of natural respiration is not a certain indication for stopping the resuscitation. Not infrequently the victim, after a temporary recovery of respiration, stops breathing again. The victim must be watched and if natural breathing stops, artificial respiration should be resumed at once.

11. In carrying out resuscitation it may be necessary to change the operator. This change must be made without losing the rhythm of respiration. By this procedure no confusion results at the time of change of operator and a regular rhythm is kept up.

This ends the Standard Technique.

Poisons — Persons who swallow poison, either by accident or for suicide, must be given immediate care. Send for a doctor but do not wait. Make the victim drink five or six glasses of harmless fluid to dilute the poison. Soapy water, salt and water, soda and water, dish water, or luke warm water may be used. If the victim does not vomit, tickle the back of his throat with the finger. Vomiting will remove most of the poison, but the diluting and vomiting should be continued until the vomited matter returns free of stomach contents. The patient may then be given a soothing drink, such as milk, white of eggs, or starch and water. Treat for shock if necessary, and keep the victim quiet. Do not leave a suicide case alone, as he may attempt some other means of ending his life. If you know what poison was taken, try to get the proper antidote ready for the doctor to use when he arrives, but first-aid care should be aimed at getting the poison out of the stomach.

Fractures — Broken bones occur in many accidents, especially from falls and motor accidents. If a physician can be promptly obtained merely keep the victim lying quietly and cover with coats and blankets, but do not move a fracture case even a short distance without the application of splints. Splints must be longer than the bone that is broken, and must be padded, and should be snugly tied in place to prevent the broken bone from moving. This can hardly be done by one who has not had careful first aid training. Great care must be used in handling fracture cases, as grave injury may result from improper handling. Do not be in a hurry. Wait for a doctor or ambulance, and do not throw the person into the nearest automobile, as so often happens.

Brain Injuries — Any injury to the head may be a possible skull fracture or concussion of the brain. These victims must be kept lying down, with cold applications to the head, and wait for a doctor. If the face is red, elevate the head slightly.

Burns and Scalds — Treatment of a burn which has produced blisters or charred the flesh must try to avoid infection. Use only such materials as are known to be sterile. Soak sterilized gauze or cloth in a solution of Epsom Salts and water (2 tablespoonfuls to a pint of warm water) or baking soda and water (1 tablespoonful to a pint of warm water). Keep the dressing moist with the solution. Never apply iodine to a burn. Treatment for burns which have resulted only in the skin becoming reddened consists mostly in relieving pain. Use such materials as soda in water, good ointment, vaseline, olive oil, castor oil or any clean oily substance. Smear the substance on the burned part and cover with clean cloth or gauze. Severe burns usually cause very serious shock, which may be fatal. Do not neglect treatment for shocks. After dressing the burns, wrap the patient in blankets and elevate the feet.

Sunstroke — The pulse is rapid and full, with labored breathing, a dry and hot skin, red face and unconsciousness. Remove the victim to a cool, shady and dry place. Loosen and remove the clothing. Keep some cold body, as wet cloths, ice bags, ice, etc., on the head. Cool the body by immersing it in cool water while rubbing the limbs and trunk, or by wrapping it in a sheet and pouring cold water on it. Give cool drinks which are non-stimulating.

Heat Prostration — The pulse is rapid and weak, shallow breathing, clammy skin, pale face, and possibly unconsciousness. Allow plenty of fresh air, but apply heat to the surface of the body and extremities. Elevate the feet about 18 inches. Give a strong coffee or tea, when able to swallow.

Stings of Venomous Insects, etc. — Remove the "sting" if there is any present. Apply weak ammonia, oil, salt water, or iodine. Do not apply mud as it may cause infection.

Freezing—Experience has shown that rubbing is not the proper treatment for freezing, and rubbing with snow is particularly harmful. To rub the limbs results in injury to the frozen tissues, with the possibility of gangrene setting in. Instead, cover the affected part with some warm surface of the human or an animal body until the part is thawed and circulation is reintroduced. If this is impossible, the next best method is to cover the frozen part with warm clothing. Never expose the affected parts to a hot stove, a fire or a radiator until the abnormal condition is completely done away with.

Prolonged Exposure to Cold — Keep the victim in a moderately cool place. Give artificial respiration, if necessary. If possible, dip some clothes in cold water, and with these massage the limbs of the victim. Either increase the temperature of the room or take the victim to spots which are progressively warmer, as he shows signs of reaction; hot drinks should be given him when he is able to take them.

Fainting—Fainting and shock resemble each other closely and are often confused. Shock usually follows severe injuries, is persistent and serious. Fainting usually requires little treatment, unless the heart is diseased or very weak. Simply lay the person on his back upon a flat surface, with the head lower than the body. Loosen all clothing. See that he has plenty of fresh air to breathe. Gently dash water upon the face, and hold smelling salts, spirits of camphor, or ammonia under his nose without touching it.

Elevate and rub the limbs of the patient toward the heart to quicken the circulation. After recovery, give a cup of hot coffee or tea, or a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in half a cup of water. Do not let the patient assume an erect position for some time after fainting.

Fits — Prevent person from injuring self, but do not attempt to restrain him. Place any small stick between teeth to prevent biting the tongue. Let sleep after attack.

Snake Bite — Persons bitten by poisonous snakes should be given immediate treatment. Keep the person quiet. Tie a tight bandage around the arm or leg above the bite, tight enough to make the surface veins stand out. With a sharp knife or razor blade make an X-shaped cut through the fang marks,  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch long and  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch deep, and suck out the poison, using a snake-bite suction pump or sucking with your mouth. Snake venom is poisonous only to the blood and does not affect the stomach. Get a doctor as soon as possible, but keep the victim quiet and continue suction for some hours. Give stimulants that will raise blood pressure.

Mad Dog Bite — Wash the wound with soap and water to remove the dog's saliva, paint with iodine and dress with gauze and bandage, and take the victim to a doctor. He will probably need Pasteur treatment. If possible catch the dog and have it shut up for observation by competent authorities. If the dog develops rabies, the doctor must be notified as he will want to start Pasteur treatment at once.

Safety and Prevention Measures

Fire in One's Clothing — Roll in carpet or wrap in woolen rug or blanket. Keep the head down so as not to inhale the flames. Do not run, but lie down at once and roll slowly, beating the flame with the hands, if no rug is available.

Fire in the Building — Crawl on the floor, as the purest air is in the lowest part of the room. Cover the head with a wet rag, with holes cut for the eyes.

Kerosene Fire—Water will spread the flames; use, instead, dirt or sand, as an extinguisher, or smother with a rug, tablecloth or carpet.

Note — These suggestions are necessarily very limited. Also it is never possible to do good first aid without careful instruction and practice under trained and experienced leaders. The American Red Cross conducts classes in first aid, in life saving and water safety, and in home nursing and care of the sick. Call on your local Red Cross Chapter for more information. Why not organize a class among your friends and neighbors and study these vital subjects?

Events of Catholic Interest in 1942

(Compiled from the N. C. W. C. News)

JANUARY 1-10

By proclamation of President Roosevelt New Year's Day was appointed as a national day of prayer in the United States, "of asking forgiveness for our shortcomings of the past, of consecration to the tasks of the present, of asking God's help in days to come."

In the first award for heroic action made by the United States since entry into the Second World War, sixteen soldiers were cited to receive the Distinguished Service Cross. Of these five were definitely known to be Catholics; the religion of six others was not known.

A note of cheer amid news of the evacuation of Manila, P. I., was word from the Very Rev. John F. Hurley, S. J., Superior of the Society of Jesus in the Philippines, the largest group of American missionaries in the islands. He cabled that all were well. Japanese bombing of the open city destroyed the venerable Church of Santo Domingo and imperiled the University of Santo Tomas.

The heroic garrison of Wake Island, which finally capitulated to the Japanese, was commanded by Maj. Gen. James Patrick Sinnot Devereux, U. S. M. C., of a distinguished Catholic family of Washington, D. C.

A notable revival of faith accompanied the outbreak of war in Hawaii.

With the seizure of St. Pierre and Miquelon by De Gaulists the Prefect Apostolic, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Alphonse Poisson, C. S. Sp., told Admiral Muselier, head of the Free French naval forces, that he opposed the transfer of the islands to the De Gaulists, whom he could not recognize as "the true Government." Msgr. Poisson, who had maintained aloofness from the political affairs of the islands which comprise his Prefecture, posted his message on the bulletin board of his church.

The original staff of the Vatican Information Bureau, of two persons handling as many as 50 requests for information some days, had been increased to 150 persons receiving several hundred requests daily. Among the personnel were five former papal delegates and nuncios. From June, 1940, to September, 1941, a total of 364,409 inquiries had been received and 147,862 replies given.

Switzerland had a new President, Philippe Etter, a staunch Catholic, a student, fifty years old, and the youngest member of the Federal Council.

He went there in 1896 and became known as the Apostle of the Bhils, a primitive tribe in the northwest of the Central Provinces. His indomitable energy overcame the difficulties of ministering to these people who were nomads and of unstable character and Catholic Bhils now number several thousand families.

An exhibition was held at Bandra to mark the fourth centenary of the Jesuits in India. Glowing tribute was paid to the Society by the City Chief, Dr. P. A. Dias, who opened the four-day exhibit of drawings, pictures, relics and other articles throwing light on the life and work of the missionaries.

Declaring that she has always been much more in sympathy with the stand of the American Labor party as represented by the so-called right wing, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote a letter to Eugene Connolly, left-wing leader of the party, saying: "I have no illusions as to the stand which the American Communist party has taken in American affairs. I admire Russia and the marvelous fight which Russia is putting up. Russia has a right to the kind of government that Russians wish to have, but I do not wish to be controlled in this country by an American group that, in turn, is controlled by Russia and Russia's interests. I should like to see labor people united, because it would add to their strength, but they cannot be united politically with people who act under the dictates and in the interests of another nation."

Duffy, episcopal host to the Seminar. Pertinent questions were asked by visiting participants, including Bishop Miranda of Tulancingo, Mexico, Dr. Don Rafael Caldera, a Deputy in the National Congress of Venezuela, and Dr. Heraclito Sobral Cinto, professor at the Catholic School of Law, Rio de Janeiro. The members of the Seminar came to Buffalo from Detroit and visited Niagara Falls en route.

A conference of the International Student Service was held in Washington, D. C., Sept. 2-5. Founded in Europe in 1920, to aid refugee students, the I. S. S. came into prominence recently in the United States chiefly through the support of Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, and now officially lists among its five objectives, "To help students towards a fuller comprehension of the origin and meaning of American democracy." It carries on a manifold program of activities on the campus, intercollegiate conferences, voluntary work camps, a Summer Student Leadership Institute, a Washington Student Service Bureau, aid to refugee students. The purpose of the Washington meeting was discussion of a post-war program. According to the Rev. Paul F. Tanner, director of the N. C. W. C. Youth Department, "Catholic youth are most earnestly interested in post-war reconstruction" and "determined that only the best and soundest thinking on post-war reconstruction is worthy of them. The pushing and hustling promotional methods of I. S. S., its ill-starred antecedents and questionable philosophy cause Catholic youth to question its extravagant claims."

SEPTEMBER 6-12

At the annual Departure Ceremony held on Sept. 8 in their senior house of studies at Ferndale, Conn., the Holy Ghost Fathers observed the 70th anniversary of their arrival in the United States. The Rev. Vincent W. Jeffers, assistant director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith of the Archdiocese of New York, preached the sermon, and the Provincial of the Holy Ghost Fathers, the Very Rev. George J. Collins, C. S. Sp., presided, as 16 young missionaries received their first appointments.

Attorney General Francis Biddle made public the results of an F. B. I. investigation into the question of Communists in the Federal Government. He said the F. B. I. considered 3,479 cases up to last Aug. 22, as the result of complaints from all sources, but after elimination of persons no longer with the Government investigations were conducted in only 1,814 cases, and findings completed had been sent to the heads of employing departments for decision as to disciplinary measures to be taken against the employee. Congressman Martin Dies branded the Attorney General's report as political, and as favoring employment of people in the Government who are admittedly members of subversive organizations.

Auxiliary Bishop O'Brien of Chicago, president of the Catholic Church Extension Society, dedicated the new St. John's Church for Catholic students at the University of Mississippi.

Cardinal Leme da Silveira Cintra, named Papal Legate by Pope Pius XII, was unable to take part because of illness, and the Most Rev. Benedetto Aloisi Massella, Papal Nuncio to Brazil, served in his place. At the opening solemn pontifical Mass Bishop Gannon of Erie, representative of the hierarchy, clergy and laity of the United States, raised the papal flag. A message of loyalty was sent to the Holy Father and a pledge of prayers for world peace. One of the chief aims of the Congress, which touched the heart of His Holiness, was the stimulation of vocations to the priesthood. In a personally delivered radio message, in Portuguese, to the Congress Pope Pius spoke from his private library, and students of the Brazilian College were assembled in an adjoining hall with their rector, the Very Rev. Marcelle Renaud, S. J. He termed Brazil one of the greatest Catholic nations of America and of the world, and said he rejoiced in the wonderful spectacle of faith and piety in which the people of Brazil were participating, and to those who heard his message he imparted his Apostolic Blessing. The Congress was one of the largest and most impressive demonstrations of faith this Continent has seen. The common prayer at the closing Benediction was for the reign of Christ the Eucharistic King.

On Sept. 8 Auxiliary Bishop McIntyre of New York welcomed the delegates at the opening session of the Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies at New York. In the afternoon, members of the Seminar visited the Chancery Office of the archdiocese, the headquarters of New York Catholic Charities, the office of the Military Ordinate, headquarters of the Catholic chaplain service of the armed forces, and the National Catholic Community Service unit. In the evening, speakers on a radio program carried by the N. B. C. in connection with the Seminar were Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the N. C. W. C., Bishop de Andres, of Argentina, Bishop O'Hara, Military Delegate of the U. S., and Dr. Don Rafael Caldera, Deputy in the National Congress of Venezuela. On Sept. 10 Archbishop Spellman of New York was host at a dinner to members of the Seminar, following which the visitors attended Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and "Te Deum" services in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Bishop Miranda of Tulancingo, Mexico, was celebrant of pontifical Benediction. The Inter-American Seminar on Social Studies, after a three weeks' session in Washington, D. C., Notre Dame University, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, New York and again in Washington closed on Sept. 12. Participants were distinguished prelates and leaders of social work in the Americas. Summing up the work of the Seminar, Bishop Miguel de Andrea, Director of the Catholic Workers' Center of Buenos Aires, said, "In studying the crisis and its solution we have arrived at practical suggestions," these to be entrusted to the National Catholic Welfare Conference with the responsibility of deciding upon the "opportunity and suitability of their publication." A statement issued by members of the Seminar asserted, "We have found the beginning of the collaboration of all the Catholics of the New World for the making of a New World Order." They declared that the crisis of our civilization is "a tragedy of morality" and "social reform is necessary immediately." In regard to government, they said, "Any government that suppresses the individual or persecutes him in his essential rights, deserves a complete condemnation," and democracy "when it is directed by Christian principles constitutes a system under which Christian living can be best achieved."

At 9:50 p. m., Sept. 13, Chicago Catholics throughout the far reaches of American military operations joined Chicago Catholics gathered in Soldier Field, at the Holy Name Hour, in a mighty universal prayer for an American victory and a peace in justice and charity. Testifying at hearings on a bill introduced by Representative John F. Hunter, of Ohio, to clarify the tax-exempt status of religious, charitable and educational properties in Washington, D. C., Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the N. C. W. C., told the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives, in reference also to the measure introduced in the Upper House by Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, "We have no preference as to the form which final legislation on this subject takes. We are, however, vitally concerned that the substance satisfactorily provide for the exemption of all property used for religious, charitable and educational purposes." He asked, "How can religion flourish unless the agencies and institutions which nourish and promote religion thrive and prosper?" And he reminded his listeners of President Roosevelt's reference to religion as one of "three institutions indispensable to Americans.... It is the source of the other two—democracy and international good faith." During the week two members of Congress roundly condemned attempts to levy taxes against religious, charitable and educational institutions. These were Representative Hunter and Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana.

During his episcopate the Catholic population of the diocese had increased from 81,290 to 121,854. He is succeeded by the Most Rev. Sidney M. Metzger, who was appointed his Coadjutor earlier in the year.

A signal honor was bestowed on Fr. Thomas Shanahan, S. J., by General MacArthur, who promoted him from First Lieutenant to Captain for his heroic service as chaplain of the Mactan, inter-island steamship which served as a Red Cross ship for the transfer of the wounded from the Philippines to Australia.

The Distinguished Flying Cross was awarded to Lt. William E. O'Brien, Marquette University alumnus, and to Radio Man Anthony W. Brunetti, of the Sacred Heart parish, Bridgeport, Conn.

The Very Rev. Msgr. Louis D. Berube was elected Administrator of the Diocese of Ogdensburg, to serve until the installation of a new Bishop to succeed the Most Rev. Francis J. Monaghan, who died Nov. 13.

Pope Pius XII granted indulgences for recitation of the prayer to the Immaculate Heart of Mary, which he gave over his radio broadcast to Portugal when he consecrated the world to the Immaculate Heart of Mary. An English translation was printed. The faithful were asked to dedicate themselves individually to the Immaculate Heart.

The condition of the Very Rev. Vladimir Ledochowski, Superior General of the Society of Jesus, who had been ill for some time, continued very grave.

Spain's new Ambassador to the Holy See, Domingo las Barceñas, arrived in Rome.

The relics of St. Julian were stolen from the tomb in Le Mans Cathedral, France.
